MEMORANDUM

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

5 November 1983.

NOTE FOR MAUREEN HUDSON

FROM: MARILEE MELVIN

Maureen, can you have typed separate notes addressed to each of the attached individuals with either Mr. Lastname, or the firstnames as indicated. Enclosed in each letter should be a copy of the letter addressed to Mr. Kimball, and signed by Mr. Meese. I think the note and the enclosed letter should therefore go in a number ten sized envelope.

We need to get these out by Monday at the latest. Please call me if you have any questions about any of this.

Thanks.

p.s. Also, could you please call me when the project is finished, so I can get the packet autopenned and on the way? Thanks.

Dear Bob:

In view of the recent happenings at Stanford (note enclosed clipping), it seems to me that the time might be propitious to reopen the possibility of the President's library locating itself on the Santa Barbara campus of the University of California. I believe a strong case can be made for locating the future library here. The nation identifies Santa Barbara as the President's home away from Washington, and I suspect that when he leaves office he will probably choose to live at his ranch. Locating his papers and library at UCSB would give him ready access to the documents, space for an office and staff, meeting facilities and research support. We have the room for such a facility on the main campus as well as on the West Campus near the Devereux School.

This campus was, not very long ago, under active consideration as the site for the Richard Nixon Presidential Library, and I have a feeling that had we been permitted to get into the act sooner we might even have been successful. As an historian, I, of course, recognize the immense value of a presidential library as a research resource, and the presence of such a facility on our campus would attract eminent scholars from around the world.

I am sure that you share my enthusiasm for this idea, and I very much hope that, as the President's congressman, you will be prepared to take the lead into turning what is at best a hope

It was a pleasure to meet you during our tour of the Old EOB with Marie Allen last Tuesday. I am sorry that we were not able to accept your offer of a tour of your offices later in the day, but I was not feeling well and we returned to the hotel after our meeting with Mr. Meese. I hope that you will give me a raincheck for my next visit to Washington.

The brief survey of your offices which Marie gave us was very impressive and I am glad to have had at least a glimpse of your operation.

If you will permit me, I will contact you before my next trip to Washington and perhaps we can get together at that time.

Mr. William R. Kimball
President, Board of Trustees

Dear Bill:

The President was pleased to learn that in their resolution of 13 December 1983 the Stanford University Board of Trustees welcomed the location of the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library and Museum at the University, with the Hoover Institution in charge of these two entities. Both the President and Mrs. Reagan believe that these archival resources should be located in California and that Stanford is particularly appropriate in view of President Reagan's long association with the Hoover Institution and the fact that his gubernatorial papers, as well as all the papers from his presidential campaigns and the transition, are already on deposit there. The presidential papers, combined with the earlier papers, should provide a unique and comprehensive record for scholars in a variety of fields.

We are very pleased that the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library and Museum will be located on the Stanford University campus, and we accept the offer of the Board of Trustees in this regard. Concerning the proposed location, the ideal one from our viewpoint would be adjacent to the National Bureau of Economic Research and the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences. We understand that this site has already been suggested by the University's planning officials. We look forward to receiving the detailed proposal prepared by the Hoover Institution in cooperation with the appropriate University officials, and to the opportunity to review it with regard to its mutual acceptability.

The President still believes that a national center for furthering the advanced study of public policy, under the auspices of the Hoover Institution, should be a part of the presidential library complex. We recognize, however, that the University has some severe internal political problems concerning the proposed center for public affairs. On the other hand, the University's proposal of a center for public affairs primarily directed toward assisting departmental research institutes and teaching programs is not in accordance with the overall purpose of the complex as we have understood it since the Director of the Hoover Institution, Dr. Glenn Campbell, on behalf of the University, first extended the invitation to locate the presidential library complex on the Stanford campus in early 1981.

We hope that the idea we discussed together at our meeting on 7 December 1983 of an independent national center, like the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences and the National Bureau of Economic Research, would be a compromise that might be acceptable to all parties concerned. Such an independent entity, located on leased land, would not require the administrative involvement of either the Hoover Institution or other elements of the University. We would very much appreciate it if the Board could review this one remaining issue at its earliest possible convenience.

I look forward to hearing from you on this matter.

Sincerely,

EDWIN MEESE III
Counsellor to the President

WASHINGTON (UPI) The White House insists it still is talking with Stanford University about establishing the proposed $65 million Ronald Reagan presidential library, a spokesman said. PU
Ed

"We're still having discussions," said deputy press secretary Larry Speakes in response to a report that Stanford President Donald Kennedy had indicated negotiations had fallen through because of White House rejection of putting the library under the university's control.

"We have no comment. That's his personal opinion," Speakes said.

White House counselor Edwin Meese, who is on Reagan's library committee, has expressed Reagan's adamant view that the library should be under the supervision of the Hoover Institute, a conservative think tank linked to Stanford.

Kennedy said in a statement that Meese "has made it plain, on behalf of the president, that academic governance is not merely a principle in which he is uninterested, it is one he wishes to actively reject."

The Hoover Institute already stores Reagan's California gubernatorial and presidential campaign papers. A search was made of the files several months ago to determine whether any of the briefing papers filched from former president Jimmy Carter's campaign for the 1980 presidential debate were there.

The Stanford faculty and trustees approve of housing the library at the university but have turned down proposals that it be linked to the Hoover Institute rather than the university.

Dear Counselor Meese:

Thank you for your letter of December 12th. I think it might be useful for our cause, relative to the Reagan Library, if we had the party registration of both the Political Science Department and the Hoover Library.

What I know we will find is the Hoover Library staff's registration will be evenly divided with a tilt to the Democrats. Whereas, the Department of Political Science will be overwhelmed with Democrats and the number of registered Socialists probably will outnumber the registered Republicans.

I think if this were to be presented by someone such as myself directly to the trustees, the trustees might understand the reasoning for entrusting the library and public policy center to the Hoover Institution rather than the University as a whole.

I regret I do not have the resources to make these party registration checks, but feel they would be worthwhile.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Hicks:

Thank you for your letter of 16 November, expressing support for our efforts to locate the Reagan Presidential Library at Stanford University, under the guidance of the Hoover Institution.

I am pleased that you share our belief that this library would be a great asset to Stanford. It's good to know that we can count on your support, as well as the support of other Stanford alumni who appreciate the significance of this proposal.

I am extremely upset by the opposition I have seen to the Presidential Library. I'm certain that we can overcome the unreasoning and intolerant opposition to the library by these left wing professors and their unthinking student apostates.

There are many prominent Stanford conservatives that I'm sure will assist in seeing that the Presidential Library is located on our campus. Among them are Robert Philibosian, District Attorney of Los Angeles County (Class of '62); Robert W. Naylor, Assembly Minority Leader (Class of '66), as well as many others.

Please let us know how we can help in this effort.

Dear President Kimball:

As Chairman of the Republican Party of Los Angeles County and Stanford Alumnus, BA 1961, MA 1964, I have been reading with close interest what appears to be a very generous offer of the Head of State of the United States of America, President Ronald Reagan to establish the Presidential Library and possibly a "Museum" at Stanford. As an alumnus, I am extremely depressed by what I have read. Apparently a good portion of the faculty and a small minority of the students are objecting to the establishment of the library and museum at Stanford.

This really is very unseemly and is not the mark of educated men. This type of narrow-mindedness which occasionally rears its ugly head is McCarthyism of the left and has no place in an academic community. The academic community should be a community in which there can be a free exchange of ideas, however it would seem that a good percentage of the faculty is frightened of any ideas to the right of George McGovern.

As an example of some of your faculty's "open mindedness", when I was a graduate student in political science in 1962, I was taking a course in political science which I was receiving A and B+ grades. The minute the Professor found out that I was working for a conservative Republican candidate in the 1962 elections, my grades dropped to C and D. This professor is still on the faculty and I'm sure he is leading the opposition to the Reagan Library in the name of "academic freedom". Having been on the receiving end of it, I can testify to the viciousness of left wing liberals to conservative people and ideas.

Academic debate seems to be centered on how best government can have more involvement in our lives. I trust that the Administration and Board of Trustees are more open-minded and dedicated to academic freedom than is the faculty.

Mr. William Kimball

It has been suggested that a decision accepting the library and museum could be interpreted as a political decision, the converse is also true. The decision not to accept the library would be a political decision.

I do however agree that, speaking as a Stanford Alumnus, it would not be appropriate to make this decision during a Presidential election year due to the interpretation in some quarters that this would be an endorsement by the University of one Presidential candidate over another.

I would urge you to communicate with the President's representatives to express this concern and request that such a decision be finalized after the 1984 election.
