London Economic Summit

Public Affairs Themes

Themes

Main US goals are:

World Recovery

-- To reinforce the commitment of all Summit countries to continue to pursue economic policies, originally outlined by President Reagan at the 1981 Summit at Ottawa, promoting sustainable, market-oriented non-inflationary growth.

-- To show that the strong US recovery which began last year as a result of these policies is spreading a growth stimulus to the other Summit countries and the world.

-- Building on that recovery, to advance and consolidate international prosperity and enhanced security in the years ahead through continued pursuit of non-inflationary growth and more open global trade and financial systems, and through policies addressing labor and capital market rigidities.

New Partnerships

-- To identify new areas for cooperation that encourage the creativeness of our societies and enhance our capacity to overcome common problems.

Discussion

We expect that the London Summit will provide an opportunity for the Heads of State and Government to review the achievements and developments which have occurred in the areas they addressed for early action in last year's Williamsburg Declaration, and to refine and advance the longer-term tasks and strategies on trade and finance which were also set out in that Declaration.

Review of actions taken during the past year will encompass five main categories:

-- Progress toward greater convergence of economic performance among the five countries whose currencies constitute the Special Drawing Rights of the IMF (US, Japan, FRG, UK and France). We expect the Heads to review developments in their own economies during the year, assess the outlook for the year ahead and assure themselves that the consultative process on convergence (as defined in the annex to the Williamsburg Declaration) is functioning as they intended. It is too early to predict what will have occurred by June in such areas as interest rates and exchange rates, but we can be reasonably confident that growth will have gained more momentum in Europe and Japan, and will be moving to a still high but sustainable rate in the US and Canada. Most of our countries should be experiencing greater price stability and improvement in the employment situation. We will also want to focus attention on ensuring the sustainability of the recovery by working to remove barriers to structural adjustment that impede resource flows. We expect to report progress toward convergence of economic performance which is a prerequisite for greater exchange market stability.

-- Action pursuant to the Williamsburg commitment to reverse the trend toward protectionism. All countries continue to face intense protectionist pressure. Although some new measures were introduced during the past year, we have been discussing joint initiatives to reverse the protectionist trend. Proposals have been advanced to accelerate scheduled tariff reductions agreed to in the Tokyo Round, and to provide special tariff advantages for certain of the least developed countries. The Administration will be proposing legislation to implement these actions, as well as pressing for renewal of our Generalized System of Preferences. We hope that the President will be able to report significant progress on these legislative initiatives to the Summit.

-- Implementation of our joint strategy for managing international debt problems, as agreed last year and summarized in the Williamsburg Declaration. While debt servicing remains a serious problem for many developing countries, substantial progress has occurred since Williamsburg. The increase in IMF resources has been implemented; adjustment programs are in place in virtually all the major debtor countries, and some are showing dramatic progress; commercial banks are continuing to make new loans to countries that are adjusting and are rescheduling debt service obligations; industrial country governments are also participating in debt-relief efforts. Sustaining the recovery, maintaining open markets and promoting new investment will be critical to the successful implementation of this strategy. We expect the Heads would want to endorse the need to continue to implement this strategy during the coming year.

-- On-going work on improving the monetary system. At Williamsburg, the Heads asked Finance Ministers, working with the Managing Director of the IMF, to "define the conditions for improving the international monetary system." Discussions have proceeded in the Group of 10 and studies undertaken. It will be too early to assess the results of that work by June, but we expect that the Heads will instruct their Ministers to continue their work. Since the studies will still be continuing through this year, we believe it would be premature to discuss a possible monetary conference at London.

-- East-West economic relations. As a result of the intensive work program undertaken last spring on East-West economic relations in NATO, OECD, IEA and COCOM, a consensus was developed in several aspects of Summit-country attitudes and policies regarding those relations. Work to expand that consensus has continued in those fora during the past year. We expect that the Heads will wish to review the results of those work programs and continue the effort to broaden and deepen the consensus.

Advancing our longer-term strategies should focus on two main aspects:

-- Debt and Development. No matter how successfully we manage the immediate problems of international debt from year to year, there will be no lasting solution unless both developed and developing countries begin to cooperate more effectively in areas of trade and investment. The non-inflationary recovery, sustained by sound policies, will continue to be a primary factor in improving the situation of debtor countries provided we keep our markets open. Only by expanding their exports can the developing countries service their debts (whether new or rescheduled), and finance higher levels of imports essential to their growth (and our hopes for expanding trade opportunities for our own exporters). Further, only if commercial banks can reasonably expect to see such additional opportunities for these countries to earn more foreign exchange will they be prepared to increase new lending on a scale necessary to promote recovery. Thus, providing increased access to world markets through further trade liberalization is essential as we move into the 1990s. It is also becoming increasingly clear that many LDCs maintain restrictions on imports and use export subsidies which are harmful to their own development and inhibit their capacity to strengthen their financial situations. It will therefore be economically undesirable and politically impossible for us to provide improved access opportunities to our markets without reciprocal liberalization in their markets appropriate to the varying stages of development of those countries. Thus, the need to begin preparing for new trade liberalizing negotiations (e.g., more open markets and greater discipline over trade-distorting measures like subsidies) during the second half of this decade is clear.

From the developing countries, comparable initiatives will be equally important. The 1970s were a period characterized by a general over-dependence by LDCs on commercial bank financing compared with foreign direct investment. To help alleviate the burden of debt service and to help stimulate creation of productive, export-oriented enterprise, LDCs should continue their structural adjustment and also review their policies on foreign investment with the aim of removing barriers to equity flows. These measures should lead to a greater flow of foreign direct investment to LDCs resulting in a better balance between debt and equity and, in addition, providing them with needed technology and managerial expertise.

-- Trade. The maintenance of open markets and the stimulus of greater competition through fair trade will make an important contribution to continued economic recovery and growth in the Summit countries and the rest of the world. However, in order to consolidate and reinforce the future basis for sustained growth and new job creation without renewed inflation, we need to proceed with new efforts to liberalize trade, as was emphasized in the Williamsburg Declaration. Subsequent to Williamsburg, the President endorsed Prime Minister Nakasone's call during the Tokyo visit for a new round of negotiations in GATT. In his State of the Union address, the President pledged to work with our trading partners toward that objective. Pursuant to the Williamsburg Declaration's agreement to continue consultations on a new GATT round, we have held discussions with several of our partners, including other Summit countries. In addition to liberalization of trade with developing countries (discussed above), GATT and OECD work programs have been underway concerning trade in services, high technology products and agriculture. Each of these represents potential issues for new negotiations. We expect that the Heads will review the progress of consultations and discuss further action to take.

The Summit will doubtless take up several other subjects. Of particular interest to us will be to identify new areas for enhancing cooperation among our countries. There will be a review of the progress made under the high technology cooperation project initiated at Versailles. We are examining the scope for related cooperation with our Summit partners and expect the Heads to address some of these during the meeting.

Finally, the Heads traditionally discuss foreign policy and other "political" subjects informally during meals together at these Summits. We expect London will be no exception, but the determination of subjects to be discussed will, as usual, be made later as we approach the date, or at the Summit itself.

As at Williamsburg, we, and the British as hosts, are putting a high premium on informal, workmanlike sessions, with ample time set aside for meetings of Heads alone. These meetings should not be viewed as occasions for negotiation of detailed new agreements or dramatic breakthroughs toward solutions of difficult and often long-standing problems. Rather they offer an opportunity for the Heads to meet together and review what has been accomplished since they last met, to refine their thinking on the directions they have separately and collectively traced for their governments to follow and to discuss possible new avenues they wish to explore together. We expect London to continue in this tradition.

MEMORANDUM FOR ROBERT M. KIMMITT

National Security Council

FROM B. Jay Cooper B. Jay Cooper
Director of Public Affairs

SUBJECT: Your request for calendar of speaking events relevant to the London Economic Summit

On April 26, our Departmental public speaking calendar was hand delivered to your office, per your original request. Since that time, I have learned of three events which may be of interest to you:

On May 9, Robert Ortner, Chief Economist, will be interviewed by ten economic editors and correspondents from some of the leading papers of the participating London Economic Summit countries. This is at the invitation of the Foreign Press Center, which is arranging a three day Washington visit by the editors.

On May 11, Lionel Olmer, Under Secretary for International Trade, will be interviewed by this same group.

Two weeks after the Summit, on June 27-28, the Department will sponsor a national meeting of the District Export Council Members in Washington. Secretary Baldrige sent a memo to Craig Fuller last week inviting the President to address this event, stating that this would present a perfect international trade forum for the President to announce any results or initiatives from the summit.

MEMORANDUM FOR ROBERT C. MC FARLANE
THE WHITE HOUSE

Subject: Public Affairs Activities on London Summit

Attached in response to your request is a listing of economic platforms confirmed between now and June 18. In addition, we are prepared to respond positively to future requests for economic speakers and, also, to generate selected regional platforms and media interviews when appropriate and depending upon availability of speakers.

Copies (13,000) of the attached GIST were distributed April 13 to non-governmental representatives (media, academic, business) specifically requesting economic mailings.

The week preceding the 1983 Williamsburg Summit the Department organized 14 direct line (telephone) editorial backgrounders throughout the country. That timing proved auspicious and we anticipate staging a similar effort just prior to the London Summit. We anticipate need for briefers to handle about twice as many events as last year.

Two final observations regarding potential Summit activities: Consideration might be given to holding a briefing for business writers and those with a particular interest in this topic in Washington prior to the London meeting to lessen the number of individual interviews with senior officials. Attention should also be given to placing Administration spokespersons on specialized business programs, such as BizNet, as well as the traditional network shows.

April 1984

Background: The seven-nation London economic summit on June 7-9, 1984, will be the 10th economic summit of the Western industrialized countries. Meetings have taken place annually in member countries starting with Rambouillet (France) in 1975; Puerto Rico (US) in 1976; London (UK) in 1977; Bonn (Federal Republic of Germany) in 1978; Tokyo (Japan) in 1979; Venice (Italy) in 1980; Ottawa (Canada) in 1981; Versailles (France) in 1982, and Williamsburg (US) in 1983.

The summits have provided a useful link for consultations on Western economic concerns and security. They also provide a forum for high-level review of the work of the summit country governments in a variety of international institutions, including the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), the International Monetary Fund (IMF), and the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD).

Ottawa: At the Ottawa summit, President Reagan outlined our policy to promote sustainable, market-oriented, noninflationary growth by reducing government spending, changing the tax code to promote savings and investment, and targeting stable and moderate money growth. He also called attention to the potential for erosion of Western security by excessive dependence on Soviet energy resources and to the need to reassess East-West economic relations. The leaders examined the problems of developing countries caused by the explosion of oil prices and financing imbalances during the 1970s. This theme was pursued further at a meeting of 22 developed and developing countries in Cancun, Mexico, later in 1981.

Versailles: At Versailles, the summit created a mechanism to enable countries with special responsibilities for the international monetary and financial system to consult about economic policies affecting the system and also to study past experience in international exchange rate policies. Versailles also highlighted the role emerging technologies will play in the future growth, employment, and trade of our economies. The discussion of East-West economic relations underlined the need for greater consensus among the participants.

Williamsburg: At Williamsburg, members committed themselves to reversing the trend toward protectionism; implementing a joint strategy for managing international debt problems; improving the monetary system; approving the growing consensus among them on East-West economic relations; and progressing toward greater convergence of economic performance among the US, Japan, the Federal Republic of Germany, the UK, and France. They endorsed general conclusions about the role of exchange market operation and intervention and called for consultations on proposals for a new round of trade negotiations.

Progress since Williamsburg: Largely as a result of a growing international consensus on the policies the President first advocated at Ottawa, economic conditions in the summit countries today contrast significantly with those prevailing before Williamsburg. US recovery has surpassed optimistic predictions in 1983. There is greater confidence that the world debt problem can be managed. Strong recession-induced protectionist pressures in the US and other industrialized countries have been checked. US-West European tensions over trade relations with the Soviet Union have diminished.

Although this consensus is real and should help to assure a constructive approach to the variety of international economic problems with which the London summit will deal, some concern remains in other countries about the effects of certain US economic policies and their alleged adverse impact on other countries.

In fact:

- The US recovery is leading other summit countries out of recession and is strengthening the industrialized West as a whole. The less developed countries also are beginning to recover, both through better economic management and the increased demand created by the strong US recovery.
- The US has resisted intense protectionist pressures and is resolved to create momentum for new trade negotiations.
- We are determined to reduce our budget deficit through greater control of government spending and pursuit of policies that will reduce inflationary expectations and bring interest rates down. We will work with other countries to help solve underlying economic and social problems due to a changing world economy.
- Our economic strategy depends on all countries acting to strengthen the interrelationships among economic growth, international trade, and financial policies by promoting more open markets for goods and capital to sustain global growth.

London summit: US objectives for London are to promote policies that will assure that the noninflationary recovery in the Western industrialized countries endures and spreads to the rest of the world. We will stress the need to maintain and expand the open trading and financial system. We will encourage further work in appropriate institutions to promote market-oriented adjustment; continued management of debt problems; early agreement on a new trade round; and a broadened consensus on East-West economic relations.
