Dear Mr. Brodsky:

On behalf of the Trustees and Board of Governors of The Ronald Reagan Presidential Foundation, I want to express our appreciation for your contribution of $100,000 to establish the CME Fellowship.

Your commitment to the Foundation is particularly important during this phase of our development activities. Your support will be instrumental in bringing the Presidential Library and Center for Public Affairs to reality and will help create an appropriate legacy of President Reagan for the benefit of future generations.

We share your admiration for the President and thank you for your timely support.

Sincerely,

Gary L. Jones
Executive Director

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

Original Signed by ABC

FROM: ARTHUR B. CULVAHOUSE, JR.
COUNSEL TO THE PRESIDENT

SUBJECT: Reagan Library Fundraising

Your upcoming speech to the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library Foundation is an opportune time to review briefly our policy of seeking to avoid apparent conflicts of interest in fundraising.

By letters dated May 5, 1986, you advised the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library Foundation, as well as other charities with which you are directly involved, that they should seek to avoid disclosing to you the identities of donors until your term of office ends. (A copy of your letter to the Foundation is attached.) The purpose of this policy is to prevent the kind of situation that can develop if, for example, a major donor known to you subsequently receives a governmental appointment, concession or favor.

Of course, it is impossible to insulate yourself completely from any knowledge of the identity of donors to a charity with which you are directly involved. The best that can be done is to exercise caution and circumspection. Wherever possible, acknowledgments of particular gifts should be left to others until after January 1989.

At the upcoming luncheon, you will of course be meeting with supporters of the Library, many of whom undoubtedly will also have donated funds. It will not, however, be evident from any of the information provided to you which of the attendees has in fact contributed funds, in furtherance of the general policy.

Dear Glenn:

I hope you will accept my personal thanks for your work and that of your fellow trustees in developing financing for the Presidential Library that will be established at Stanford University after the completion of my term in office. Your efforts will not only preserve for the nation an important part of its history, but will enrich the academic programs of a great university.

I have been pleased to participate from time to time in some of your efforts, and will as my schedule permits continue to do so in the future. However, in order to avoid any appearance of a conflict of interest, I do not think it is appropriate for me, while in office, to be made aware of the names of individuals or organizations that have provided — or have pledged to provide — financial support to the Foundation.

Accordingly, I have directed my staff not to disclose to me the names of donors to the Foundation, and I hope that you and your fellow trustees will also honor this request. Your circulation of this letter to your fellow trustees will be appreciated. I am of course grateful for the financial support that may be extended to the Foundation, but will only be able to express my personal thanks after the completion of my Presidency. I hope you and those who contribute to the Foundation in the future will understand the reasons for following this course.

Again, my heartfelt thanks for all your time and trouble.

Sincerely,

RON .

MEMORANDUM FOR KENNETH DUBERSTEIN
DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF

FROM: JAY B. STEPHENS
DEPUTY COUNSEL TO THE PRESIDENT

RE: Ronald Reagan Presidential Library Foundation

Pursuant to our discussion, attached for your information are the following materials related to the Presidential Library:

1. A copy of a letter from the President to Glenn Campbell expressing the importance of insulating the President from knowledge of specific contributions and contributors to the Library until the conclusion of his Presidency -- this letter was provided to Dr. Campbell so that he could establish this insulation policy vis-a-vis donors to the Foundation;
2. A list of members of the Board of Trustees and the Board of Governors of the Presidential Library Foundation; and
3. A list of expected participants (with positions noted) for today's luncheon; in the past the President has been advised generally only that the luncheon guests are persons interested in the Library Foundation. He is not advised that any of the guests may be donors or potential donors; the President should not make any appeal for funds or express thanks for financial contributions to the Foundation.

MEMORANDUM FOR ANTHONY R. DOLAN
SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT AND CHIEF SPEECHWRITER

FROM: PETER J. WALLISON ORIGINAL SIGNED BY PJW
COUNSEL TO THE PRESIDENT

SUBJECT: Revised Remarks: Ronald Reagan Library
Foundation Dinner

As requested, this office has reviewed the above-referenced Presidential remarks. We have no legal objection, but offer the following comment.

The blanket defense of "big business" at the bottom of the first page is unnecessary, and in any event may not characterize all of the Library Foundation supporters. As you know, the President often praises entrepreneurs, and elsewhere in the speech the references are to "corporations" and the "private sector." In substitution for the last complete sentence on page 1, the following might be better: "Now, there was a time back in my earlier days when, like so many others, I believed all the nonsense that caricatured all people in business as irresponsible profiteers."

Thank you for submitting these remarks for our review.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: RONALD REAGAN LIBRARY
FOUNDATION DINNER
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1986

Good evening and welcome to the White House. Malcolm Forbes, thank you for that kind introduction. And all of you, thank you for being kind enough to join us.

For many of you in this room and for many of the corporations you represent, supporting Presidential libraries has become something of a habit. Indeed, libraries dating to administrations as far back as that of Dwight Eisenhower[?] have benefitted from your generosity. Come to think of it, trying to tell this audience about the importance of Presidential libraries sort of reminds me of an old story.

[Joke about the man who drowned in the Johnstown flood.]

But as I was saying, you understand that a Presidential library represents an institution of importance to the entire Nation. That it can bring back the past, enabling new generations to see for themselves the great issues of an earlier day. Perhaps most important, that it can be an instrument of learning -- permitting the successes of the past to be built upon and the failures to be avoided.

And you understand something else, something central to the conduct of business in America -- in a word, corporate responsibility. Now, there was a time back in my earlier days when, like so many others, I believed all the nonsense ~~about~~ so-called profiteering and irresponsible big business. I guess it was back when I was working for General Electric that I began and asked all the questions in business

I know you'll be able to tell them that, in so many ways, neighbors can help neighbors better than big Government can.

The issues during our Administration have been great ones -- as great as any in this second half of our century. Tax reform. The rebuilding of our defenses. And, yes, the summits at Geneva and Reykjavik, where we showed our willingness to deal with the Soviets, but stood firm for the defense of our Nation and her allies.

Thanks to you, the Reagan Library will reflect all these issues -- and one more: The proud and constructive role of corporate leaders in American life.

Thank you, and God bless you all.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: RONALD REAGAN LIBRARY
FOUNDATION DINNER
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1986

Good evening and welcome to the White House. Malcolm Forbes, thank you for that kind introduction. You may know that Malcolm celebrated his 67th birthday just last month -- and Malcolm, if I could give you a word of advice, life begins at 70.

Earlier this month, Nancy and I visited Atlanta for the dedication of the Carter Library. We joined President and Mrs. Carter in Atlanta for the same reason that you and I have all gathered here at the White House today: Because a Presidential library transcends party; because a Presidential library represents an institution of importance to the entire Nation. It brings back the past, enabling succeeding generations to see with their own eyes the issues and personalities of another time. It represents a tremendous resource, a body of knowledge that can be tapped for unending instruction and even delight; a source of lessons that can be used to avoid past mistakes and to adapt past joys to the present.

This is just the kind of library that Nancy and I so fervently hope to see take shape at Stanford. The issues during our Administration have been great ones -- as great as any in this second half of our century. Tax reform. The rebuilding of our defenses. The appointment to Federal benches of judges determined not to make law, but to interpret it -- to derive their opinions from the Constitution itself. The reassertion of America's role on behalf of human freedom. And, yes, the summits at Geneva and Reykjavik, where we showed our willingness to deal with the Soviets, but stood firm for the defense of our Nation and her allies.,

With so much history being made, we'd better take care to put the documents in good order -- and, by the way, sometimes it takes a little doing. Not long after leaving Sacramento, we discovered that gubernatorial records had been stored in old Coors boxes.

But beyond the documents, Nancy and I are eager to see a library that conveys the drama and feel of these years. How in Tokyo, President Mitterrand and I found ourselves discussing the way farming had shaped both our nations, giving France and the United States fundamental values like hard work, thrift, and family. How Mrs. Thatcher topped me at the Williamsburg Economic Summit. Our first meeting was a dinner for the seven heads of State in what had been the British Governor's House. I had it all planned: I was going to say, "You know Margaret, if one of your predecessors had been a little more clever..." and that's as far as I got. She said, "Yes, I know. I would be hosting this gathering."

And something else: How tirelessly Nancy has worked in the campaign to save our young people from drugs. Her "Just Say No" campaign has been an enormous success throughout the country. And come to think of it, "Just Say No" sort of made its mark in Reykjavik, too.

A resource for scholars and everyday Americans alike, a living gift to the Nation -- this is what we hope to see. We know that you share our hopes, and we want you to know that all your efforts on behalf of the Reagan Library mean more to us than we can say. So let me just put it as simply as I can: My friends, we thank you.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: RONALD REAGAN LIBRARY FOUNDATION LUNCHEON
MONDAY, JULY 21, 1986

Good afternoon and welcome to the White House. Before saying anything else I want you to know how lucky I feel -- it's not often these days that I get to have lunch with my roommate.

Whenever the subject of presidential libraries comes up, it puts me in mind of Thomas Jefferson. You may know that Jefferson amassed one of the great private libraries of the young United States -- a library that included thousands of letters and personal records. Today that collection provides historians with invaluable material and laymen with a way of getting in touch with the American past -- some of my own favorite reading is the correspondence that Jefferson carried on with John Adams in their later years.

I think you'll agree that the point here is important. A good historical library like the Jefferson collection brings the past alive, enabling succeeding generations to see with their own eyes the issues and personalities of another time. It represents a national resource, a body of knowledge that can be tapped for unending instruction and even delight; a source of lessons that can be used to adapt the joys and achievements of the past to the present, while avoiding past mistakes.

This is just the kind of library that Nancy and I so fervently hope to see take shape at Stanford -- a library that will tell about the detailed issues of our day and, in all their vividness, the people who acted them out.

The issues have been great ones -- as great as any in this second half of our century. Tax reform. The rebuilding of our defenses. The appointment to Federal benches of judges determined not to make law, but to interpret it -- to derive their opinions from the Constitution itself. The reassertion of America's world role on behalf of human freedom.

Just last week, indeed, the Wall Street Journal said in a major editorial assessing our Administration that we're "remolding the country's primary institutions and the principles of its economic life in a way that will shape the actions of future political leaders." The Journal compared our Administration to that of F.D.R. and said it was beginning to look as though these years would mark "the onset of an era." With so much history being made, we'd better take care to put the documents in good order. And sometimes it takes a little doing. Not long after leaving Sacramento, I discovered that many of our gubernatorial records had been stored in old Coors boxes.

But beyond the documents, Nancy and I are eager to see a library that conveys the drama and feel of these years. How in Tokyo President Mitterand and I found ourselves discussing the way farming had shaped the fundamental values -- hard work, thrift, family -- of both our nations. How Mrs. Thatcher told me at the Williamsburg Economic Summit, "If your American Revolution had ended differently, it might be I who was hosting this Summit, and not you."

And something else: How tirelessly Nancy has worked in the campaign to save our young people from drugs.

This is the kind of library we hope to see -- a resource for scholars and everyday Americans alike, a living gift to the Nation. We know that you share our hopes, and we want you to know that all your efforts on behalf of the Reagan Library mean more to us than we can say. So let me just put it as simply as I can: My friends, we thank you.

Received PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: DINNER WITH BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF
RONALD REAGAN LIBRARY FOUNDATION
SATURDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1985

Nancy and I want to thank all of you for coming tonight and tell you how grateful we are for your kind efforts on behalf of the foundation.

Paul Laxalt mentioned the other day how fitting it was that so many old friends -- there from the beginning -- should be associated with a project that someday will also mark an end. And that's very much our feeling as well.

Now, like the good chairman that he is, I think Paul also said something about creating a proper mood for fundraising; "entrepreneurial leverage" I think he called it. Shame on you, Senator.

But Nancy and I want you to know we looked forward to this dinner for a special reason: we thought this a particularly good time to extend our thanks. First, because of the season; we just wanted to share the joy of it with you. And second, through this foundation you are helping to guide future generations of Americans to a deeper appreciation of our Nation's past.

In that film you just saw I mentioned how living in the White House can overwhelm you with a sense of that past; so many events; so many presidents. Somehow, though, the haunting presence of Lincoln seems always there in the White House.

I came across recently a story of something that happened in 1864, right in what is now living quarters for Nancy and me; a story that I think says something about the importance of historical anecdote and detail, the very reason we have all come together tonight.

When the newly appointed General Grant went off to find Lee in the Spring of 1864 he was for Lincoln almost a last hope. The President had been desperate to find a Union general who would engage the enemy and bring the full weight of northern power to bear, thereby ending the war and the killing. But always when northern generals reached that critical moment, they had let the enemy escape. So when the northern army, led for the first time by Grant, collided with Lee in a place called The Wilderness, a great battle ensued and all communication with Washington was lost. Grant has disappeared into a hole, Lincoln said, and then pulled the hole in behind him.

Tense moments -- Lincoln and the Cabinet dreading the news that once again the Union Army had let the enemy safely withdraw. But then, suddenly, a young reporter with the New York Tribune, Harry Wing, rode up to a Union telegraph station at Manassas Junction: "I am just in from the front," he said. "I left Grant at four o'clock this morning."

Young Mr. Wing soon found himself upstairs in the White House -- where we live now -- in front of the President and members of his Cabinet. Historian Page Smith picks up the story: "For half an hour he stood in front of a wall map and showed the positions of the two contending armies across the Rapidan. The sky was almost light outside. He finished and then said, 'Mr. President, I have a personal word for you.' The others withdrew and he was alone with Lincoln.

'You wanted to speak to me?' Lincoln asked.

'Yes, Mr. President, I have a message for you -- a message from General Grant. He told me I was to give it to you when you were alone.'

'Something from Grant to me?' Lincoln advanced upon Wing. He had never realized before how tall the President was. He looked up into his face. Lincoln stooped down, brought his eyes level with Wing's and asked in an intense tone, 'What is it?'

The reporter found himself deeply moved and found himself beginning to stammer. 'General Grant told me to tell you, from him, that, whatever happens, there is to be no turning back.'

What happened next formed the title of a little book Wing later wrote; [the title was:] 'When Lincoln Kissed Me.'"

How immeasurably that study with its heart and humor adds to our understanding of Lincoln and his time. Such is the stuff of history, and such, we hope, will be the vital kind of contribution to American history made by the work of this foundation.

So I think we are here for a good cause, and noble work. I can assure you in one century or ten, scholars and students looking through these records will see not so much the story of one man's Presidency but the story of an entire people, a good and generous people, proud of their heritage of freedom, determined America shall be, as it was said on the ship Arabella at her beginning, a light onto the nations, a shining city on a hill.

That having been said, it's still probably true there will be the usual academic disputes about this most important thing or that most important thing President Reagan ever did. So tonight with friends here who appreciate history and have been close to this presidency, I thought I would settle these academic squabbles before they even get started and answer the question myself. It's easy really; and the sort of thing that needs to be said from time to time. Ronald Reagan's greatest achievement in his presidency was the same as his greatest achievement in life. (And, by the way, I'm thinking of getting a penknife and -- when the White House Curator isn't looking -- carving this into the woodwork somewhere before we leave.) Because it can be summarized in just a few short words: "Ron Loved Nancy."

And while we're on the subject, let me tell you the second most important achievement: having friends like all of you.

And, you know, what we as friends and fellow citizens did to keep faith with those who came before us; and won for us in their time the blessings of liberty summarizes very well our purpose here this evening.

In a play of some years ago, Benjamin Franklin in Paris, Franklin sits alone in the final act and wonders what he would find if after 200 years "I should rise up and stand once more on Pennsylvania land, and walk, and talk, and breathe the free air -- for I know in my heart it will be free; I know it; I know it even now.

"What a dream. 200 years. And I wonder, I wonder how I should find them then? Those Americans to whom the name American will not be new. Will they love liberty, being given it outright in the crib for nothing? And will they know that if you are not free -- you are, sir, lost without hope? And will they who reap this harvest of ideas, be willing to strive to preserve them, as we so willingly strove to plant them: that all men are created equal and that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights?"

I think Old Ben, were he to make such a visit, might be a little proud of what he would find; and he might even have a word of praise for what the American people have in the past few years achieved together. For that -- and for helping through this foundation to record part of the American saga -- Nancy and I extend to you tonight our heartfelt thanks. And wish you the best of the season, and a joyous New Year.

Thank you and God bless you.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: RONALD REAGAN LIBRARY FOUNDATION LUNCHEON
MONDAY, APRIL 14, 1986

Nancy and I want to thank all of you for coming by this afternoon; we're delighted to have you here. As perhaps you know, I'm very partial to your part of the country because in addition to being an Illinois boy myself I also spent some time as a broadcaster in Chicago.

Now, you know, all I have to do is mention the word "Chicago" and the word "sports" and people start expecting me to tell stories. I really don't know how all this business about my weakness for storytelling got started. In fact, it's my advisors who've been counseling me about my remarks to you this afternoon, "Go ahead, Mr. President, take the easy way, do the political thing -- tell a Chicago Cub story." Well, I used to announce the Cub games and I love 'em as much as you do. So I'm not going to take the easy way or do the political thing.

There won't be any Chicago Cub stories today.

None.

Well.

Maybe just one.

You all remember Frankie Frisch -- well maybe you all don't remember Frankie Frisch, but I certainly do. Frankie was known as "The Fordham Flash," and one of baseball's great managers. It's not all that well known that Frankie spent some time with the Cubs. And the story goes that one day Frankie sent a rookie out to play center field. The rookie promptly dropped the first fly ball that was hit to him. On the next play he let a grounder go between his feet and then threw the ball to the wrong base. Frankie stormed out of the dugout, took his glove away from him and said, "I'll show you how to play this position." And the next batter slammed a line drive right over second base. Frankie came in on it, missed it completely, fell down when he tried to chase it, threw down his glove, and yelled at the rookie, "You've got center field so messed up nobody can play it."

Actually, I've used that story a few times to remind my political supporters that however much we might be critical of some things done in the past, there was no time to bemoan the past, we had to get on with the work before us.

And a vital part of this work means leaving to future generations a country that is not only strong and prosperous but one that is deeply aware of its heritage and its historical roots. It was Lincoln, Illinois' first President, who reminded us how much a nation relies on "those mystic chords of memory" for its identity, its very being.

By so generously offering to help in this project, each of you is continuing this important work -- I want you all to know how terribly grateful Nancy and I are to you. And I also want you to know you are earning, as well, the gratitude of many future generations of Americans.

MEMORANDUM FOR FREDERICK J. RYAN, JR.
DEPUTY ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT AND DIRECTOR OF APPOINTMENTS AND SCHEDULING

FROM: C. CHRISTOPHER COX
SENIOR ASSOCIATE COUNSEL TO THE PRESIDENT

SUBJECT: Dixon Home Foundation

Kathy Osborne informed our office that the President is personally interested in the Reagan Dixon Home/Library project. She met with Mr. and Mrs. Norm Wymbs, Bill Tucker, Bob Thiebeault, and Lilibet Clarke on March 3, 1986. (Tucker and Clarke are with Tucker and Associates, a professional fundraising firm located in Washington, D.C.) The group's objective is to raise funds for the purchase of the rest of the properties on the block surrounding the Dixon home in order to construct a Visitors Center and parking lot, and for restoration of the home.

It is our desire generally to insulate the President from fundraising activities. This policy applies directly to the President's activities involving the President's Library at Stanford, the Norman Rockwell Museum, and the Dixon home, among others. Recently, the President sent letters to those involved with these organizations asking that the identities of donors be kept confidential from the White House (exemplars of such letters are attached).

At Kathy's request, we have advised Mr. Tucker and Ms. Clarke with respect to several of their questions concerning acceptance of funds, endowment of scholarships (which we have discouraged), and fundraising involvement of Administration officials (which we have also discouraged). An additional question, and one of great importance to this group, is the possibility of direct Presidential involvement in one or more of their activities. We have recently advised the group that we would have no legal objection to the President's participation in an event outside of the White House at which no fundraising activity would take place, and at which donors would not be present, but expressly subject to the normal constraints and approvals of Presidential Scheduling.

On Thursday, May 22, 1986, I advised Ms. Clarke that she contact Presidential Scheduling to begin the process of determining whether, and if so when, an event involving the President could be arranged.

I will be happy to share any other information about this matter with you that may come my way, and to provide any help that you may need.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Dear Glenn:

I hope you will accept my personal thanks for your work and that of your fellow trustees in developing financing for the Presidential Library that will be established at Stanford University after the completion of my term in office. Your efforts will not only preserve for the nation an important part of its history, but will enrich the academic programs of a great university.

I have been pleased to participate from time to time in some of your efforts, and will as my schedule permits continue to do so in the future. However, in order to avoid any appearance of a conflict of interest, I do not think it is appropriate for me, while in office, to be made aware of the names of individuals or organizations that have provided -- or have pledged to provide -- financial support to the Foundation.

Accordingly, I have directed my staff not to disclose to me the names of donors to the Foundation, and I hope that you and your fellow trustees will also honor this request. Your circulation of this letter to your fellow trustees will be appreciated. I am of course grateful for the financial support that may be extended to the Foundation, but will only be able to express my personal thanks after the completion of my Presidency. I hope you and those who contribute to the Foundation in the future will understand the reasons for following this course.

Again, my heartfelt thanks for all your time and trouble.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Wymbs:

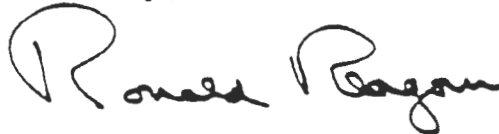

I hope you and the other members of the Ronald Reagan Home Preservation Foundation will accept my personal thanks for all your efforts on behalf of my Boyhood Home and the Visitors Center in Dixon, Illinois. All your hard work, and that of the many volunteers, is contributing to the preservation of an important part of history for the nation.

I have been pleased to participate from time to time in some of your efforts, and will as my schedule permits continue to do so in the future. However, in order to avoid any appearance of a conflict of interest, I do not think it is appropriate for me, while in office, to be made aware of the names of individuals or organizations that have provided -- or have pledged to provide -- financial support to the Foundation.

Accordingly, I have directed my staff not to disclose to me the names of donors to the Foundation, and I hope that you and your fellow Board Members will also honor this request. Your circulation of this letter to your fellow Board Members will be appreciated. I am of course grateful for the financial support that may be extended to the Foundation, but will only be able to express my personal thanks after the completion of my Presidency. I hope you and those who contribute to the Foundation in the future will understand the reasons for following this course.

Again, my heartfelt thanks for all your time and trouble.

Sincerely,

MEMORANDUM TO FRED FIELDING , FROM: KATHY OSBORNE

SUBJECT: RONALD REAGAN DIXON HOME/LIBRARY FOUNDATION

I met with a few people today who are involved in the fundraising aspect of the Reagan Dixon home/library project. The group included Mr. and Mrs. Norm Wymbs, Bill Tucker, Bob Thiebeault, and Lillian Clarke.

They asked me for guidance on several areas, so I think it is best if I pass them on to you for your guidance, and then we can get back to them.

This group plans to raise about 3 million to purchase property adjacent to the Dixon home to house the Visitors Center and parking lot. This money will also restore the home for these purposes. They want to raise another million so they can commit funds during each fundraising event to endow a scholarship program in the President's name, for each particular area. They plan to have the first fundraiser in Chicago sometime in the next 45 days.

- Can they accept funds from foreign people (Japan, etc.)
- They would like some help with lists of major donors who contributed during the campaign, etc. (Mitch Daniels to help with this?).
- Lillian Clarke will get me a list of the chairmen within a week in case you have any problem with anyone on it and for the President to approve the list.
- Is it permissible to ask Cabinet type people to attend any of these events as guests of honor? The events would not be large in number -- they expect to ask an elite group to donate 5 to 10 thousand at a small dinner party of 10 to 30 people.
- Can they ask Frank Fahrenkopf to invite the Eagles to cooperate in specific cities such as helping them to find major donors, etc.?

- There will be plaques made up to be hung in the Visitors Center showing names of major donors, grouped in accordance of the amount they have given.
- They would like to ask celebrity/vip type people or a particular person to act as Honorary Chairman. They suggested Laxalt, Heston, Stewart or Goldwater. I brought up the possibility of Neil Reagan...
- They also want to raise additional funds to maintain the Visitors Center in the beginning. Eventually they plan to charge admission (probably $1.00 for adults, kids free) and to sell gift items to keep the home and the visitors center going.
- They would like to know if the committee could come to the White House for lunch or dinner with the President when this is all over.

I told the group that I would check out a few things with you and would get back to them soon. They are very sensitive to the fact that the Reagan Library Foundation is in the midst of having some fundraisers and would hope to be in touch with them so they don't conflict fundraisers in a close period of time in a particular area of the country.

They also asked if they could get a list of the people who donated for the Reagan China or the "kitchen cabinet." I told them I thought that would be doubtful.

Please advise me of your thoughts on the points I raised. Thanks.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: LUNCH WITH RONALD REAGAN LIBRARY FOUNDATION
FRIDAY, APRIL 3, 1987

Senator Paul Laxalt, Chairman Glenn Campbell, and all of you. I hope each one of you knows how much I personally appreciate you being here and appreciate the contribution you are making. And a special word of thanks to Glenn Campbell for the fine job he's been doing as Foundation Chairman these last 3 years.

A primary goal of our Administration has been encouraging people to get directly involved in charitable activities and community building projects. Certainly, that is what this is all about.

In years to come, historians will undoubtedly focus on the economic turnaround of the 1980's, the resurgence of American leadership, and the rebuilding of our military strength. Yet, I would hope they don't miss the success we've had in our Private Sector Initiatives program in mobilizing the humane and loving side of the American character. The amount of contributions to worthy causes is up 61 percent over these last 5 years. In a time of low inflation, that figure represents something to be proud of.

Being individuals of means, I'm certain you've been approached for a number of worthwhile endeavors. Of course, asking for help doesn't suggest you always get it.

There's the story of the clergyman who visited a wealthy businessman to remind him that he had yet to contribute to the community relief fund. The tycoon heard the request and asked, "You're asking me to contribute, but do any of you know about my destitute brother, a drunkard, unable to hold meaningful work, a man with five children? Or are you aware that my father has been in a convalescent hospital for years due to an injury he received as a young workman, leaving my mother to this day with no means of support? Now, you ask me for contributions. I say, if I don't give anything to them, what makes you think I'd give to you?"

Well, there are some -- and I'd say very few -- like that. But we can be proud that, for the most part, we live among people with a magnificent sense of generosity. It is an aspect of our national personality, noted as early as the 1830's when Alexis de Tocqueville toured our young country. It remains a strong current among our fellow citizens from every walk of life, at every income level.

One person this brings to mind is Andrew Carnegie, who came to this land young and poor, but managed to amass a great fortune, building our industrial might as he did. Carnegie deeply believed in the right to make a profit and accumulate wealth, but also preached that a heavy responsibility went with that right. "Surplus wealth," he wrote, "is a sacred trust which its possessor is bound to administer in his lifetime for the good of the community."

This immigrant from Scotland took advantage of the freedom and boundless opportunity he found in the United States to become rich. He then enriched our country, through his zeal for philanthropy and his love of peace. As I'm certain you are aware, his contributions, among other things, built free, public libraries in cities and towns across the land -- a gift that I've always thought reflected something special about this truly great American.

Last year, I was honored to be on hand for the opening of President Carter's library in Atlanta, Georgia. I told them I thought I was invited because I was the only one they could think of who might have known Andrew Carnegie personally. Seriously though, President Carter was not, as we have not been, able to rely on the largess of Mr. Carnegie. But, we have benefitted from a group of special Americans -- men and women, corporations and foundations -- with an appreciation of history and with a desire to pass on a gift of knowledge and understanding.

We want future Americans to learn from our mistakes and build on our successes. President John Adams challenged us to "tenderly and kindly cherish... the means of knowledge. Let us dare," he wrote, "to read, think, speak and write."

We Americans consider our willingness to look truth squarely in the face as one of our country's greatest assets. And not every country has this attitude.

There's a joke among the dissidents in the Soviet Union about how frequently information concerning their history seems to change. What is a Soviet historian? they ask. Answer: Someone who can accurately predict the past.

Well, with your support, we are passing on to our children a treasure of information. It will be housed in a library, with state-of-the-art audio visual technology and computer craft. In the end, what we are building together will be a pre-eminent resource for scholarly research. It will be a lasting gift, because, as another American President once noted, "Ideas are the only thing in this universe that are immortal." James Garfield said that.

So today, I'd like to thank each of you from my heart for the honor you do me and for the inheritance you are helping us leave for those who will follow. Let us hope that when this Administration is over, and decades from now when young scholars are poring over the documents of our time, they will think highly of us, and know that we had them in mind. Thank you and God bless you.

COUNSEL TO THE PRESIDENT

I have attached a proposed letter for the President to send to the chairman of the board of trustees, or other appropriate governing organization, for certain of the charities which raise funds implicitly or explicitly with his blessing. I would like your comments on whether this would be satisfactory for the purposes we want to achieve.

Letter to the Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Ronald
