MR. PRESIDENT

THIS TURTLE IS A GIFT TO YOU FROM THE ALFRED OJEDA CO.

HE IS NOT HARD TO KEEP, HE LIKES TO EAT FRUIT + VEGETABLES SUCH AS APPLES, STRAWBERRIES, AND LETTUCE, AND REQUIRES A DISH OF WATER FOR HIS THIRST.

OUR COMPANY IS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE SUPPLY OF EXOTIC PETS (SNAKES, LIZARDS, TURTLES + AMPHIBIANS) TO THE PET INDUSTRY.

WE ARE THE UNKNOWN BACKBONE TO THE INDUSTRY.

FRW ARE AWARE OF THE IMPORTANT LINK WE ARE TO EDUCATION, RESEARCH, AND INTERNATIONAL TRADE.

IN EDUCATION WE GIVE LECTURES AND DISPLAYS IN AREAS SUCH AS THE SOUTH BRONX TO HELP AQUIANT THEM WITH ANIMALS FROM OTHER CONTINENTS.

IN RESEARCH WE SUPPLY FACILITIES WITH REPTILES FOR COMPARISON TO OTHER ANIMALS.

IN THE INTERNATIONAL TRADE COMMUNITY WE TRY TO HELP BUILD AN ECONOMIC BALANCE IN THE UNITED STATES, AND IN ALL THE DEVELOPING COUNTRIES WE DO BUSINESS WITH.

WE WORK IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE FISH + WILDLIFE SERVICE LAWS, WHICH ARE SOMETIME ONE SIDED AND CREATE ECONOMIC HARDSHIP.

I HOPE THAT SOME DAY THAT MR. ALFRED OJEDA + MYSELF (WHO'S NAME BY THE WAY IS JOHN J. MEEHAN III) WILL HAVE THE HONOR AND PLEASURE OF MEETING YOU.

THE BOX TURTLE IS FROM THAILAND.

CONGRATULATIONS + GOOD LUCK

THANK YOU

John J. Meehan III 1/20/81

I HOPE THAT PRESIDENT REGAN DOES RECEIVE THIS TURTLE + LETTER AND NOT SOMEONE WHO WILL SCREEN THIS AND DISREGARD IT.

Dear Dr. <sup>Dale</sup> Marcellini: (Nat'l Zoo)

Per our telecon, I am herewith transmitting the box turtle from Thailand, which was sent to President Reagan as a gift. According to Dr. Zug, to whom you referred me, the turtle is not currently on any endangered species list and no papers are required for transmittal of the turtle. With your kind cooperation, the turtle is therefore being given to you for transference to another zoological facility. Please be assured that the White House greatly appreciates your cooperation in this confidential matter.

My dear Mr. President,

You have little time for reading, but this is a significant book which can help express many of the positive concepts behind your economic programs.

Professor Hayek feels this is the most important book on economics he has read in a generation.

We hope this can be of help.

REVIEW & OUTLOOK

Liberty and Bread.

Those who are worried the Reagan administration lacks an appreciation for Third World issues—and such worries have been widely voiced—would do well to consider the speech delivered in Geneva last week by America's new representative to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights. The topic is development, on which the Western initiatives in the past generation have been: a World Bank-sponsored drive toward income transfers and official state planning; a litany of complaints about the alleged rapaciousness of big corporations; and a constant harangue about the dangers of too many people being born.

Now into the midst of this debate comes Mr. Reagan's representative, Michael Novak, uttering the one word that America seemed to have all but abandoned — capitalism. Not "anti-communism." But capitalism. C-a-p-i-t-a-l-i-s-m. This is the system that allows individuals to invest their capital and labor and reap for themselves the wealth it produces, a system that provides that one man's good fortune is another's as well. Mr. Novak's use of this word in the midst of a Third World forum is no small matter, and we can only hope that it is an opening chord in what will become a broader initiative by the new administration.

It is, after all, both an irony and a tragedy that America should have allowed itself in recent years to be put on the defensive in the debate on development. It is an irony simply because America is the most developed nation and also the most free, a combination that has captured Third World imaginations even while America seemed to be shying away from the ideas on which its own success was built. It is a tragedy because the anti-capitalist concepts that have taken hold during the period have produced incalculable setbacks in nations as diverse as Tanzania and China, Jamaica and Burma, Poland and India.

The recognition that capitalism might have something to offer the Third World has been growing throughout the Third World of late, however. It has been stirring, moreover, in some remarkable places, not merely in such capitals as Peking and Warsaw, but even in such redoubts, we would venture, as Pyongyang. And no opportunity could be riper than the one the Reagan administration is seizing to explicate some of the basic ideas on which America was developed.

The key principle Mr. Novak put well. It is that wealth can be created. Wealth isn't a limited quantity to be transferred from the rich nations to the poor. It is created by the application of human muscle and brain. This in turn means that having a lot of people (widely, but erroneously viewed as a Third World "problem") creates an opportunity to have more wealth. And people apply their muscle and brain to create wealth when they are given the incentive of being able to keep what they earn and the freedom to use their wealth for their material and spiritual fulfillment, as they please.

This is another key point. Freedom is an integral part of capitalism. Totalitarian states that deny this freedom deny the incentive to develop, and this is why they have been so roundly outpaced. President Carter seemed to understand this link between freedom and development; he stated explicitly in his first big foreign policy speech at Notre Dame in 1977 that the great democracies of the world aren't free because they're rich, but are rich because they're free. But then he pressed a human rights campaign that talked a lot about freedom of speech, of assembly, of religion, but all too little about a co-equal freedom—the freedom of enterprise.

Here you need the freedom to set up corporations to handle jobs too big for the individual proprietor and a system of law individuals and corporations can trust. For decades a school of thought has been attacking one variety of corporation, the multi-national, for allegedly "obscene" profits. But now America has sent Mr. Novak into these debates asking: "Are we to understand that losses are 'virtuous?'"

Another school of thought holds that capitalism can't address the real problem of the Third World—poverty among agricultural peasants. This is a canard, nowhere more thoroughly demolished than in an important, if little known, book called "Wealth of Nations in Crisis," whose author, Ronald Nairn, sets out a capitalist ethic for peasant farming. He takes you from the plains of America, to the pastures of New Zealand, to the mushroom farms of Taiwan and the paddies of Thailand and Japan to demonstrate the sort of productivity that can be unleashed by freeing Third World farmers from government and bureaucratic inhibitions.

Freedom is, in the end, the enormous attraction of this whole idea of capitalism. Communism, as Mr. Novak points out, has been forcing much of the Third World to choose between bread and liberty, producing meagerly even of bread. That liberty and bread can be grown together—and, ultimately, only together—is precisely what America has been all about. We can think of no more relevant or timely idea for America to be pressing in the so-called North-South dialog than this, and it is heartening to see the administration making such an eloquent beginning as Mr. Novak has done in Geneva.
