December 5, 1983

Dear Dick:

I greatly appreciate your recent letter informing me of the excellent work done in connection with the German-American Tricentennial by Charlie Wick and his staff at USIA. I am very pleased with the spirit of cooperation and friendship that the many German-American events have helped generate. We have no more important ally than Germany. I plan to tell Charlie personally about your laudatory comments. Thank you for writing.

Best wishes to you and Pat.

Sincerely,

Ron

Dear Mr. President:

Your decision to designate 1983 as the Year of the German-American Tricentennial was a most important one, and as this year of festive celebration draws to a close, I thought it might be appropriate to draw to your attention the splendid role played by USIA in assuring a successful commemoration.

Although the preparations had a somewhat belated start, Charlie Wick took the reins and gave the project momentum. During the period of my Chairmanship of the Commission, I came to know of the splendid work that the dedicated USIA staff performed on behalf of this year of celebration, and I take the liberty of making specific mention of Mr. Vic Olason, a USIA employee who served also as Executive Director of the Tricentennial Commission.

Mr. Olason assembled a competent team of professionals, performed splendid liaison work with Charlie Wick's office, and marshalled his troops for the very busy period highlighted by the visit of President Carstens to the United States. He and his deputy, Mr. Jan Zehner (also a USIA employee), certainly contributed on a basis that was "above and beyond the call of duty." I thought that you should be aware of the valuable contributions made by these outstanding professional people in the service of the Federal Government.

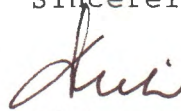

The relations between Germany and the United States have not been better in many years; you will recall our first visit there in 1978, and the mood that prevailed between that time and the inauguration of your Administration. You have much to be proud of in this accomplishment, and you can also be proud of the fact that you have many people helping you make this special year of 1983 one of great significance.

Pat joins me in sending you our warm good wishes and best regards,

Sincerely,
