JUNE 291981

Dear Congressman Peyser:

Max Friedersdorf, Assistant to the President, forwarded to the Secretary a copy of your letter of May 26 to the President on the attitude of our NATO Allies toward the role of the United States. The Secretary has asked me to thank you for sharing your observations with us.

We are very much aware of the attitudes you found among some of the leadership in Europe, and we too are concerned about it. However, we believe the negativism you heard there is not fully reflective of the attitudes of the top Allied leadership. In their many discussions with European leaders, President Reagan and Secretary Haig have stressed the need for each Ally to do more in contributing to the common defense, and they have been assured in return of the recognition of that need and of the dedication to respond to it. Most notably, the recent NATO Ministerials in Rome and Brussels issued strong statements of accord on doing the "utmost to make available all the resources needed to provide the requisite strengthening of their deterrent and defense forces."

This is not to deny that there are those in Europe, both in positions of influence and throughout the public, who would like to see the US continue to bear the brunt of the defense burden in Europe and outside the NATO Treaty area. To combat this attitude, the Department -- in conjunction with the Defense Department, the International Communications Agency, and other US concerned agencies -- has undertaken an extensive effort to acquaint the European public with the nature of the worldwide Soviet threat in order to generate support there for needed defense improvements. This program involves public release of intelligence data on Soviet capabilities, speeches by US and European officials to European audiences, and greater support for high-level official participation in European defense-related conferences such as Wehrkunde. To provide you more information, Mr. Charles Thomas, Director of the Office of European Security and Political Affairs will be contacting you shortly to see if we might learn some more about what you found during the NAA meeting.

Thank you again for sharing your thoughts and for the support for our efforts through your strong representation at the meeting of the North Atlantic Assembly.

Sincerely,

Richard Fairbanks

Dear Peter:

The President has asked me to thank you for your May 26 letter which you wrote following your participation in the North Atlantic Alliance meetings in Venice, Italy.

Your remarks are particularly significant in light of your firsthand exposure to the views expressed by a number of our allies concerning the role they feel the United States should be playing in NATO and their role in NATO.

I know that the President's foreign policy advisers will be greatly interested in your comments and suggestions regarding steps that might be taken to better acquaint our allies with the situation we face at home. For that reason, I have forwarded your letter and offer of assistance to them for a most careful review.

With cordial regard, I am

Sincerely,

Max L. Priedersdorf Assistant to the President

Dear Mr. President:

I have just returned from the North Atlantic Alliance meeting in Venice, Italy. I have had the opportunity of attending meetings of this group over the last several years.

I am presently quite disturbed over the attitude that I heard expressed, both publicly and privately, from a number of our allies concerning the role they feel the United States should be playing in NATO and their role.

I addressed the Plenary Session at the Assembly and expressed the point of view that many of our allies did not have a clear understanding of the situation that exists in the United States today. I explained that we are making major cutbacks in our domestic programs, the impact of which will be felt by Americans next year. At the same time, we in the Congress (with the guidance of the Administration) have substantially increased our defense expenditures, which will obviously prove to be an advantage in the defense of Western Europe. I expressed the point that by next year the American people would be most anxious to know the kind of increases our NATO allies were making in their defense expenditures and the kind of sacrifices they were making to ensure the safety of Western Europe. I also pointed out in my talk that we in the United States certainly felt that there should be a far greater involvement of the North Atlantic Alliance countries in areas outside of the present geographic boundaries, such as the Persian Gulf.

The response I received from these parliamentarians was for the most part a negative one in which they stated that they were having economic problems of their own and that they were already making substantial contributions to NATO. They clearly expressed the point of view that it was up to the United States to do more and as one member stated, "If you want to be a Superpower, then act like a Superpower and assume your responsibility". There also was very little real interest on the part of the parliamentarians to recognize any responsibility at all for the happenings in the Persian Gulf.

It is obvious that we want to maintain a strong NATO for both ourselves and our European allies. In my opinion, it is time for some hard talk at the very top levels with our allies, explaining to them not only the actions we are taking today as far as our military and domestic programs are concerned, but also something of the impact on our public when these programs go into effect in fiscal '82. I needn't remind you that many of these European countries have social programs that far outreach ours in benefits to their people in the fields of medicine, senior citizens, and education.

In truth, I believe we have some major problems that must be resolved | and I think they can be resolved if the leaders in the member countries have | a clearer view and understanding of what is happening over here.

If any members of your staff would like to talk further to me about ) this, I would, of course, be pleased to do so.

Sincerely

Peter A. Peyser Member of Congress

May 15, 1981

Dear Mr. Alexander:

Thank you for your letter of May 1, 1981, requesting statements made by me or other members of the administration on the subject of appealing to European members of NATO to reduce their social welfare budgets in order to divert resources to security needs. I have given no such advice to our European allies. I have stated that uncontrolled public spending in Europe has contributed to deep economic problems of rising inflation and slowing growth on that continent as it has in the United States. It is important for all the nations of the Western Alliance to gain control of their economic destinies, and to improve their economic health. This health is the most fundamental component of our national and alliance strength. Another fundamental component is military strength; which must be increased after a decade of decline. We support the official position of the NATO alliance that it is crucial for the Alliance as a whole, and for each country separately, to increase the efforts it is making in the defense area.

These basic elements of this Administration's policy are well known both to Americans and to our allies. I have not presented them in a public statement in a manner implying advice to cut welfare programs in order to increase military spending. Such budget decisions are the prerogative of individual governments.

Sincerely,

Richard V. Allen

Mr. Alexander wrote a letter objecting to your purported advice to our allies to cut their welfare budgets in favor of their military budgets. The reply for your signature at Tab I states that you have given no such advice, and restates Administration positions on the necessity for economic reforms and for increasing military budgets. Clearly, Mr. Alexander is not going to be swayed in his opinions, but at least he gets a civil and substantive reply to his letter.

Rud Poats, Norm Bailey, Jim Rentschler and Gen. Schweitzer have no comment.

Dear Mr. Allen:

I'm writing to you in my capacity as Executive Director of the National Association of Social Workers, U.S.A., and also as President of the International Federation of Social Workers. It has recently come to my attention that as an advisor to President Reagan, you appealed to European member states of NATO to reduce their social welfare budgets in order to divert more resources to European security needs. Please provide me with whatever statements have been made by you or other members of the administration on this subject.

I'm fully aware of the policy decision reflected in the proposed federal budget to increase military expenditures and reduce social welfare expenditures in the United States. I consider that to be a disastrous policy, and have expressed our opinion to Mr. David Stockman, of OMB, and to the Congress. The current budgetary proposal for block grants is one which will be harmful to millions of Americans as a result of the administrative chaos, increased costs, and inadequate services which will follow such a move. I'm enclosing a copy of my testimony, which presents some of the facts and arguments against such a proposal and derives from extensive experience with similar types of programs. Although I recognize that a particular ideology drives those who advocate such proposals and who place armaments above human services, I would hope to alert you to the practical consequences of such actions that will result in economic deprivation and social disorder.

Aside from our own internal U.S. economic and social policy differences, I would hope that we would not project to the European member states or to any other nations the concept that social welfare resources should be reduced or limited in the interests of additional military expenditures. Aside from the fact that the nations of the world are being crippled by the undesirable escalation of military expenditures, it is a pragmatic fact that the attitude of millions of people in these countries, who will suffer by such a policy, will reduce the friendship to the United States of other countries.

I will appreciate hearing from you as soon as possible regarding your viewpoints on this matter.

Sincerely,

Chauncey A. Alexander, ACSW, CAE

Dear Mr. Chairman:

This replies to your request for comments of the Department of Defense on H. Con. Res. 74, "Requesting the President to call on pertinent member nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and on Japan to meet their respective commitments to increase defense spending in 1981." We have no objection to the resolution in principle, but suggest the changes on the enclosure to enhance its precision.

The Office of Management and Budget has advised that, from the standpoint of the Administration's program, there is no objection to the presentation of this report for the consideration of the Committee.

Sincerely

William H. Taft, IV

Enclosure

- 1. First paragraph of the resolution the words in lines 2 and 3 "to meet their respective commitments" should be deleted and "to meet or exceed the goal of 3 percentum real annual increase" added to the end of the sentence. Fationale: Japan has made no formal commitment to increase defense spending and the NATO atties formal goal is to "aim" for 3 percent. This was reworded in such a way to encourage our allies to meet or exceed a 3 percent goal.
- Z. On page I, first whereas, fifth line the words "and the country of Japan" should be deleted. Retionaler Secause of its constitution, our Treaty with Japan cannot call for the common defense and, therefore, calls only for the defense of Japan.
- 3. The following whereas should be added to the bottom of page 1: "Whereas the country of Japan has stated that it will achieve the capability of providing its own self-defense." Rationale: While Japan was deleted from the previous whereas, because it cannot participate in the common defense, it can and has stated it would do more for its own defense.
- 4. On page 2, third whereas, second line, after "nations" insert "taking part in the integrated defense structure". Fourth line, the words "aim for" should be sutstituted for the word "undertake". Rationale: To make the statement factually correct. Nations at the London Summit did not pledge to "undertake" a 3 percent annual increase but did agree to "aim at" an annual increase in the region of 3 percent.
- 5. On page 2, the last whereas should be deleted. Rationale: This statement could be needlessly irritating to the Japanese. The Commanding General of Japanes Joint Staff made the statement three days before he planned to retire and resulted in his being fired the very next day.
- 6. On page 3, the first whereas, first line, the words "expects to" should be replaced by "has plans to" In the second line "at least 9.7" should be replaced with "7.6." Rationale: Change is to make statement factually correct.
- 7. un page 3, third whereas, first line. The Netherlands and Norway should be added to the list of countries that did not achieve 3 per centum real increase in defense spending in 1980. Rationale: Change makes statement factually correct based on the latest fully evaluated information we have available.
- 8. On page 3, fourth whereas, second: line, the quantity "$2,435,605,283." should be changed to "$1,416,000,000." Rationale: Change makes statement factually correct based on the latest fully evaluated information we have available.
- 9. On page 3, starting on line 3 of the resolve the words "the pertinent member nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and Japan to meet or exceed their pledges for at least a 3 per centum real increase in defense spending in 1981" should be replaced with "our allies, especially Japan, and those NATO countries not meeting the goal of at least a 3 per centum real increase in defense spending in 1981, to increase their defense efforts." In line 7, the word "our" should be changed to "the". Rationale: To increase pressure on all NATO countries especially Japan, and NATO countries not meeting the 3 percent aim. Since Japan plans more than a 3 percent real increase in 1981, it would not otherwise be subject to the full pressure it deserves.

STTH CONGRESS FE CON RES. T.

In this administration we feel strongly the need to rebuild the sort of bipartisan, informed consensus for foreign policy on both sides of the Atlantic which existed before Vietnam. Efforts such as those you are supporting are important parts of the program to achieve that goal.

Dear Mr. Baker:

Helping Europeans Who Support U.S. Policy

Despite all the grim news about Europe's passivism and slide to the left, let me report modest progress by friends who work with our Center to strengthen NATO:

- #1. The University of Kiel, with our support, is running a Defense Seminar for European scholars who will teach academic courses in strategy and security. We are sending Dr. Bill Van Cleave, author of our "quick fix" military studies, to serve as part of the faculty at Kiel. Professor Klaus Knorr of Princeton, formerly of the CIA oversight group, will also lecture. This West German initiative is based directly on the NSIC/ New York University program which, over the last decade, has led to the teaching of Defense Policy at some 500 of our own universities.
- #2. Anti-Soviet social democrats and conservatives in Portugal -- veterans of the political infighting against Communists in Lisbon -have created their own Strategic Studies They'll sponsor an all-European Conference in October on the Soviet threat to Europe and the "African mineral flank" of NATO.

- #3. As a follow-up to our Paris Seminar last November, West German leaders have asked us to cosponsor another "Resource War" Conference in Europe to focus on Moscow's strategy of outflanking the platinum, cobalt, chrome and manganese of southern Africa. We expect good participants from business leaders at this seminar, scheduled now for March of 1982 in Munich.
- #4. French journalists, scholars and moderate labor leaders are organizing to (a) publicize the Soviet arms buildup, (b) monitor and oppose the acts of Communist Ministers in the new French Government, and (c) support Mitterand whenever he denounces Moscow or defends U.S. aims to upgrade NATO's theater nuclear defense.

Obviously, much more must be done to support allies who welcome President Reagan's resolution to re-arm the West; but the cause is not hopeless.

With best regards, I am

Faithfully,

Frank R. Barnett

TO THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith a certified copy of a protocol to the North Atlantic Treaty on the accession of Spain, signed in Brussels on December 10, 1981 on behalf of the United States and the other parties to the North Atlantic Treaty. I transmit also for the information of the Senate the report made to me by the Secretary of State regarding this matter.

Spain's rededication to the values and purposes underlying the North Atlantic Treaty, and her decision to seek full partnership in the effort to maintain Western security, are historic developments and a source of inspiration in these troubled times. Spain's strategic location, and human and material resources, will make a major contribution to the security of the Alliance. Accordingly, I urge that the Senate give early and favorable consideration to this protocol.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE WASHINGTON

January 15, 1982

The President:

I have the honor to submit to you, with a view to its transmission to the Senate for advice and consent to ratification, a protocol to the North Atlantic Treaty on the accession of Spain, which was opened for signature at Brussels on December 10, 1981 and which has been signed on behalf of the United States of America and the other parties to the North Atlantic Treaty.

Spain's influence on the evolution of Western culture and values has been profound. In the aftermath of the disastrous Civil War of 1936-1939, however,

Spain was relatively isolated from the mainstream of Western European and North Atlantic developments, particularly in their institutional manifestations. The death of General Franco in 1975 signalled the beginning of the end of this unfortunate era. Since that time, Spain has made extraordinary progress in the restoration of democratic institutions. It is now seeking to resume its rightful place in the councils of the free nations of the West. These developments warrant the continued support and encouragement of the United States and its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies.

The President,

The White House.

The enclosed protocol to the North Atlantic Treaty on the accession of Spain constitutes a concrete manifestation of the recognition by the United States and its allies that the time has now come for Spain to assume full partnership in the basic mechanism for the preservation of Western security. Accession of Spain to the North Atlantic Treaty will be a matter of great significance, not only for Spain, but for the Alliance as a whole. Spanish membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization will provide the means for integrating into Alliance defense planning the important contribution that Spain can make to the maintenance of peace and security in the European and North Atlantic area. Geographically, Spain is of unique strategic importance, occupying the bulk of the Iberian Peninsula and fronting both the Atlantic Ocean and the Mediterranean Sea. Participation in the various NATO military programs will assist in the modernization of the Spanish armed forces and also help those forces to exercise a role compatible with democratic institutions.

The United States and Spain have enjoyed a close bilateral military relationship since 1953, when Spain first granted to the United States access to and use of important military facilities in that country. Accession by Spain to the North Atlantic Treaty will permit that cooperation to be broadened to take into account the NATO dimension, and will entail, for the first time, the extension of a security commitment to Spain.

This new broadened cooperation will be reflected in the bilateral agreement now being negotiated to succeed
the Treaty of Friendship and Cooperation of January 24, 1976.

The enclosed protocol is comparable to prior protocols of accession to the North Atlantic Treaty, and does not alter the substantive provisions of that Treaty in any way.

Article I of the protocol provides that upon the entry into force of the protocol, the Secretary General shall, on behalf of all the parties, extend an invitation to Spain to accede to the North Atlantic Treaty. Thereafter, Spain shall become a party to that Treaty on the date upon which it deposits its instrument of accession with the United States in accordance with the provisions of Article 10 of the Treaty.

Article II of the protocol provides that it shall enter into force when each of the parties to the North Atlantic Treaty has notified the United States of its acceptance of the protocol.

Article III of the protocol provides for the equal authenticity of the English and French texts, and for its deposit with the United States, the depositary state for North Atlantic Treaty purposes.

The protocol transmitted herewith, providing for the inclusion of Spain among the States party to the North Atlantic Treaty, will be a direct and material contribution to the security of the Western alliance, and hence to the security of the United States. It is hoped, therefore, that action of the United States with respect to the ratification of the protocol can be completed quickly in order that it be possible for Spain to assume a full partnership in the North Atlantic Treaty structure and institutions.

Respectfully submitted,

Luesa Stousets.

January 27, 1982

TO THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith a certified copy of a protocol to the North Atlantic Treaty on the accession of Spain, signed in Brussels on December 10, 1981 on behalf of the United States and the other parties to the North Atlantic Treaty. I transmit also for the information of the Senate the report made to me by the Secretary of State regarding this matter.

Spain's rededication to the values and purposes underlying the North Atlantic Treaty, and her decision to seek full partnership in the effort to maintain Western security, are historic developments and a source of inspiration in these troubled times. Spain's strategic location, and human and material resources, will make a major contribution to the security of the Alliance. Accordingly, I urge that the Senate give early and favorable consideration to this protocol.

RONALD REAGAN
