RE: Byrd Quayle Report on INF and NATO Strategy

Attached is Draft #3 of this report due to the Congress on 25 January.

Wide distribution was given in your agencies of Drafts #1 and #2, as well as many drafts of specific language addressing certain key points raised throughout the report.

This draft is now being sent only to the addressees shown above. In each case you have been designated as the authoritative point of contact representing your agency on this matter.

At this stage I would welcome any further comment that you have just as soon as possible. We are now moving this paper through the Department of Defense system and getting written coordination from each of the principals in the Department -- with a view toward signature by the Secretary of Defense Thursday.

This draft is based on guidance for each specific section of the report received from Secretary Frank Carlucci and Chairman of the JCS William Crowe, in concert. Thus, most major substantive elements of the report represent their personal, as well as institutional views.

The report also reflects the comments which we have received from you. As you know, these have been most helpful and responsive.

A reading of the "Overview" should capture any substantive changes from the previous drafts you have seen -- since the various sections simply reflect major substantive points in the overview framework. However, you are encouraged to give this a careful reading.

Thank you again for your cooperation and support.
