Labor's Bad Bargain

Max Green

The American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations is undergoing a metamorphosis that has profound and disturbing implications for the future of American politics. For decades the labor movement has been criticized by the left for being conservative, if not reactionary. But today there is hardly an item on the most up-to-date liberal agenda that does not have the AFL-CIO's official endorsement. It is a prime supporter of statist remedies for America's economic problems, real and imagined. It supports the current objectives of the civil rights, women's rights, and even gay rights movements. Its foreign-policy resolutions echo the isolationist left: It favors a nuclear freeze and cuts in the administration's defense budget, and opposes aid to countries threatened by Communist subversion or invasion.

These positions are the opposite of what the AFL-CIO has long stood for. They represent a fundamental transformation in the character of the American labor movement, and in particular the abandonment of the guiding principles of its founder, Samuel Gompers. Unlike most of the world's labor movements, the AFL-CIO under the influence of Gomperism had kept its distance both from socialism and from partisan politics. But that has changed. Today, it is forsaking the benefits of independence and forging an alliance with the ideological left of the Democratic Party.

Gompers's Philosophy

Described as either "voluntarism," "trade unionism pure and simple," or "business trade unionism," Gomperism holds that the central purpose of unions is to engage in collective bargaining in order to raise the wages and improve the working conditions of the workers they represent. This is an inherently conservative strategy because it assumes that workers under capitalism can and will prosper once organized into unions. As such, it contrasts sharply with the contending socialist plilosophy that very nearly prevailed at the turn of the century. The socialists argue that whatever gains are made at the bargaining table are necessarily evanescent, certain to be vitiated by the dynamics of the capitalist political economy. Therefore, to be effective in the long run, labor must commit itself to a political movement dedicated to the overthrow or, at the very least, the radical reform of capitalism. In either case, collective bargaining would obviously take second place to political action.

Ironically, Gompers's decision to give priority to collective bargaining was based initially on a vulgar Marxist analysis of capitalist society. He agreed with the socialists that the capitalist state was the "executive arm of the bourgeoisie" and, therefore, that state intervention in the economic life of the country would inevitably be on behalf of business and, ipso facto, against the interests of the working class. So strong was his and other labor leaders' fear of state action that for the first several decades of its existence the American Federation of Labor refrained even from supporting minimum-wage legislation on the theory that what started out as a minimum wage could very well become the maximum. In George Meany's interpretation, if "you depended on the law" you would end up being "controlled by the law." It followed that labor's political objectives, as Daniel Bell has written, should be nothing more nor less than the "negative state," which would allow labor to organize and negotiate contracts with employers.

With the advent of the New Deal, labor began to see government intervention as a tool that could be used to improve society in general and the lot of the workingman in particular. The CIO and to a lesser extent the AFL became major forces in Franklin Delano Roosevelt's New Deal coalition, and were instrumental in passing social-security and minimum-wage legislation, as well as the National Labor Relations Act. Over the next several decades, labor was more often than not in the forefront of efforts to expand the horizons of government. And by the late 1960s George Meany proudly proclaimed that the AFL-CIO had long since left behind what he now derisively referred to as the parochial "bread and butter unionism" of the past. Citing labor's often decisive support for virtually every piece of the Great Society legislation, he announced that it had become "the people's lobby," a title to which it still lays claim.

Bread & Butter Issues

Yet, throughout the Great Society era, labor remained true to Gomperism to the extent that it continued to seek the bread and butter from employers at the collective bargaining table—not from the federal government. While pushing for establishment of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and other regulatory agencies, the AFL-CIO remained committed to a market economy in which fundamental investment decisions were left in private hands. Therefore, labor strongly opposed the no-growth factions of the environmental and consumer movements.

As long as labor's strategy emphasized collective bargaining, it remained faithful to Gompers's "reward your friends, punish your enemics" philosophy of political action. The AFL-ClO endorsed and worked for candidates who had long pro-labor records, such as Hubert Humphrey. But it did not commit itself to any political movement or party. As George Meany argued, if labor ever tied itself to a political party it would be "saying in effect, we do not only want better conditions for the people we represent, we not only want to raise the standard of life, we want to run the country." And indeed, though the labor movement was mostly associated with Democratic politicians, it had close relations with Republicans, e.g., Nelson Rockefeller, and through the 1960s many craft union leaders identified themselves as Republicans.

This nonpartisan stance has been the subject of virtually every energy-sapping conflict within the "House of Labor." To take one well-known and often misunderstood example: When Walter Reuther pulled the UAW out of the AFL-CIO in 1968, he could not, when challenged, name a single significant, unresolvable difference that he had with the AFL-CIO leadership concerning any trade-union or public-policy issue. But there was an unbridgeable gulf with respect to partisan politics: Reuther wanted to develop "stronger ties with labor's historic and essential allies in the liberal intellectual and academic community and among America's young people," an unimportant concern for the majority. As a top

Under founder Samuel Gompers, the AFL steered clear of socialism and party politics.

AFL-CIO official was to note: "Reuther wanted to be known as a leader of the liberal community and was so recognized by many. On the other hand, Meany was a leader of the labor movement. Where he agreed with the liberals he was with them, but he was not part of the liberal movement. He was the leader of the labor movement, a broad spectrum from far left liberals to far right conservatives."

Political Independence

Under Gompers, under Bill Green, under George Meany, labor remained independent of larger movements for economic, social, and political change. Consequently it was free to develop its own positions on the issues of the day.

This was particularly true of civil rights. Though some craft unions earned a reputation for excluding blacks, the trade union movement as a whole became integrated earlier than most other institutions in America. Moreover, the AFL-CIO properly deserves a lion's share of the credit for the passage of the landmark legislation of the 1960s. The 1964 Civil Rights Act included a fair employment practices provision at labor's insistence, and the 1965 Voting Rights Act and 1968 Fair Housing legislation were passed only after intense lobbying by the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, which the AFL-CIO had organized together with the NAACP.

But labor never joined the civil-rights movement. As an institution, the AFL-CIO did not participate in the movement's protest actions, not even in the historic 1963 March on Washington, because it believed that more harm than good would result from mass demonstrations. The AFL-CIO denounced President Nixon's Philadelphia Plan for racial quotas in the construction industry, which had received the enthusiastic support of virtually all civil-rights organizations.

Labor also refused to tailor its foreign policy to the shifting fashions of middle-class liberalism. From the end of World War II through the mid-1970s, the AFL-CIO was the bulwark of anti-Communism in America. This was partly the legacy of bitter struggles against Communists who had tried to subvert the trade union movement in the 1920s through the 1940s. It was also based on a recognition that free trade unions have always been

The basic AFL-CIO line, from which it did not diverge for decades, was that American democracy was locked in mortal combat with the international Communist movement.

among the first institutions to be destroyed by Communist regimes.

The basic AFL-CIO line, from which it did not diverge for decades, was that American democracy was locked in mortal combat with the international Communist movement, whose "ultimate end and unalterable aim was world domination." In his first speech after the founding convention of the AFL-CIO, George Meany argued that "no country, no people, no movement can stand aloof and be neutral in the struggle" against this political evil. This uncompromising anti-Communism virtually determined labor's positions on all conflicts between the free and Communist worlds. It gave unqualified support to the United States effort to save South Korea from invasion from the North, even though the former was ruled by the repressive regime of Syngman Rhee. And it likewise supported the U.S. intervention in South Vietnam, despite its succession of more or less authoritarian governments. Among liberals, labor got the reputation for having a "reactionary anti-Communist" foreign policy. Indeed, the AFL-CIO's insistence on publicly supporting South Vietnam against Communist totalitarianism precipitated a decade-long political battle with the "New Politics" movement.

The seriousness of this conflict first became fully apparent in 1968 when the New Politics Democrats gave lukewarm support at best to labor's oldest and best friend, Hubert Humphrey, because he did not come out soon enough for a program of unilateral withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam. Four years later labor turned the tables on this "constituency of conscience" when it refused to endorse George McGovern. Said George Meany: "[McGovern's] record reflects no real appreciation of the perils of isolationism nor of the continuing need to participate in the defense of human freedom and human rights in a dangerous world."

This was labor's Last Hurrah, the last time it stood alone in defiance of liberal opinion. Soon, to argue for such independence would be viewed in the labor movement as a sign of eccentricity or crankiness.

Labor's Leftward Drift

In retrospect, the first clear harbinger of what lay ahead came in 1972. The motion to remain neutral in the presidential contest that year passed the Executive Council overwhelmingly, by a vote of 27 to 3. But the vote was not binding on the affiliate unions, which were free to endorse a candidate. And, in the end, unions representing approximately half of all AFL-CIO workers endorsed McGovern. On the whole, the leaders of these unions were hostile to the anti-anti-Communism of the New Politics. Moreover, they realized from the start that McGovern had no chance of winning, and therefore devoted almost all of their considerable political resources to campaigning for House and Senate seats. Their endorsement was symbolic. It was a gesture of support for the Democratic Party, a signal that they wanted to come to terms with the movement against which the Meanyites had declared war.

This set the stage for a revival of the old debate over partisan politics. The only difference was that this time the advocates would win.

For several years there was a stalemate. The Meanyites, led by Al Barkan, director of the Committee on Political Education, tried to rally labor against the New Politics takeover of the Democratic Party. But he failed; he could not even get union delegates to the 1974 Democratic Party charter convention to oppose a quota system for delegates that put unions at a disadvantage. On the other hand, the so-called progressives had neither the strength nor the intelligence to beat Meany at political infighting.

This stalemate was broken by increasing doubts about the Gompers-Meany emphasis on organizing and collective bargaining. At the time of the AFL-CIO merger in 1955, the combined organization represented over 30 percent of America's non-agricultural work force. That figure has continuously declined ever since, and is now about 15 percent. While a cause of occasional breast-beating, this decline was not a matter of great concern within the AFL-CIO, because labor was still able to negotiate generous contracts for its members during most of the postwar period. But by the mid 1970s, rising competition from non-union firms—both abroad and at home—was eroding the strength of unionized businesses and thus weakening labor's negotiating leverage at the bargaining table. In the mid 1970s, construction unions that had once enjoyed a stranglehold over trades were reduced to negotiating "give-backs." A few years later the once mighty industrial unions, the automobile, steel, and rubber workers, for example, began to negotiate job-security provisions in lieu of increased wages, and then they too were forced to grant concessions.

Statist Economics

These setbacks have led to a dramatic reversal in labor's approach to economic policy. Once a defender of the market economy, it now supports legislation the sole purpose of which is to protect already unionized industries from competition. This is most visible in its advocacy of such protectionist measures as domestic-content laws and import quotas. Formerly a strong proponent of free trade, the AFL-CIO now favors "fair trade," in which labor costs would not be an element of competition. It opposes efforts to lower trade barriers on imports from developing nations (for example, the Caribbean Basin Initiative), on the disingenuous grounds that for their own good such countries ought to develop their internal markets rather than "exporting to the United States market at the expense of United States workers."

As a domestic complement to protectionism, labor is calling for a tripartite National Industrial Policy Board, made up of representatives of organized labor, government and business. The board would oversee the operations of a new Reconstruction Finance Corporation that would be authorized to make guaranteed loans "to the nation's sick industries and decaying communities" and to "new industries with promise for the future." Labor is fully aware that there already exists an abundance of venture capital for new businesses. Its obvious purpose here is to inject capital into struggling, heavily unionized industries.

Labor is also backing legislation that would require corporations planning to shut down inefficient and/or money-losing plants to give workers up to a full year's notice and to justify their decisions to the secretary of labor.

This new economic policy is a radical rejection of the free-market economy in favor of state capitalism. Unlike the AFL-CIO of old, which had no desire to "run the country," labor today believes its very survival as an institution depends on the enactment of legislation that would transform the structure of the American economy.

To enact such radical proposals would require much more political power than labor ever had, and they are being made at a time when labor's political clout is declining. In 1977, legislation at the top of the AFL-CIO's agenda—including a common situs picketing bill and a set of "labor law reforms"-went down to defeat, and labor had to acknowledge that it no longer had the political muscle to get legislation through Congress on its own. As George Meany put it in a speech to the 1977 AFL-CIO convention that signaled a new strategy of coalition politics: "No group, not in the labor movement, not in the civil-rights and women's groups, can by itself match the raw political financial might of big business. But together these groups represent millions of people, and people, not money, are what this country is all about." No more going it alone, no more fights with potential allies, no more sitting out elections. All that is a luxury labor no longer feels it can afford, because so much, everything, now depends on the outcome of political elections. This new perspective has led to a partisan political strategy, with labor, as Walter Reuther wanted, becoming part of a larger, liberal-left movement for economic, political, and social change.

But, as it is finding out, political alliances do not come cheap. The cost, as labor's former leaders feared and predicted, has been nothing less than the AFL-CIO's traditional political independence and integrity. For instance, a strong alliance with the civil-rights movement was unthinkable unless labor first compromised—or better yet, abandoned—its long-standing opposition to quotas. This logic explains its 1983 policy statement on affirmative action, which "strongly advocates that the federal government abandon its retreat from affirmative action efforts and vigorous enforcement of equal opportunity legislation and regulations." Actually, the only difference between the Reagan and Carter administrations on affirmative action is that the Reagan Justice Department has opposed racial quotas. Not so long ago, labor would have hailed any administration, Republican or Democrat, for this change in policy. But political considerations—the new link to the civil-rights movement—act now as a censor. Labor is no longer free to speak its own mind on such issues.

Labor's position on women's issues has been similarly revised to facilitate its new relationship with the feminist movement. Well into the 1970s, the AFL-CIO opposed the Equal Rights Amendment. Then, at its 1979 convention, the AFL-CIO reversed field with a vengeance. It refused to schedule meetings in the states that had not ratified the amendment, an unusual strategy that the AFL-CIO had never even used against states with right-to-work laws.

At the same convention, the AFL-CIO endorsed the feminist concept of "equal pay for comparable worth." Lane Kirkland, who succeeded George Meany as president, has recently claimed that comparable worth is one of the "foundation stones" of the labor movement. The truth is different, as AFL-CIO Vice President Joyce Miller (one of two women on the Executive Council) testified in 1982. "Unions have traditionally opposed job evaluation systems" (the sine qua non of comparable worth) for the obvious reason that they limit the ability of unions to negotiate, which is what their business used to be. In addition, comparable worth is decidedly not in the economic interest of most union members, the overwhelming majority of whom work at so-called male jobs, which would have to be downgraded under a comparable worth plan.

A further example of the new partisanship is a resolution passed at the AFL-CIO's 1983 convention, calling for legislation guaranteeing the civil rights of homosexuals in employment, housing, credit, public accommodations, and public services. In 1972, AFL-CIO leaders complained about the number of "open fags" at the

Under Gompers, under Bill Green, under George Meany, labor remained independent of larger movements for economic, social, and political change.

Democratic convention. Their unreserved endorsement of gay liberation's legislative agenda today is described by one top staffer as "smart politics."

Soft on Communism

For those familiar with labor's history, even this, however, does not quite prepare one for the current rewriting of the AFL-CIO's anti-Communist foreign policy. This transformation has been so dramatic that it can only be explained by a desire to conciliate the left wing of the Democratic Party, which showed in 1968 that it was willing and able to sabotage any liberal movement that did not subscribe to its foreign-policy views. It also seems to be motivated by a desire to bring back into the fold those "progressives" in the labor movement whose foreign policy has become identical to the isolationist left's.

The AFL-CIO still denounces the actions of Communist regimes throughout the world, and its International Department, headed by the 73-year-old Irving Brown, still encourages the development of democratic trade unions in countries as diverse as Poland and El Salvador. But in the AFL-CIO as a whole, there has been a subtle yet profound change in orientation. Communism is no longer seen as the epitome of political evil, but only as one evil among many. Arguing against the Reagan administration's foreign policy as expounded by Jeane Kirkpatrick, Lane Kirkland declared in 1981: "They have sought to base a fine choice between the lice who are totalitarian and the lice that are authoritarian. We reject such a choice." This new refusal to support the "lesser evil" means that labor can no longer be counted on to back anti-Communist struggles.

The AFL-CIO's current resolutions on Nicaragua and El Salvador are cases in point. One does criticize the totalitarian Nicaraguan regime, but it is abstract, meaningless anti-Communism since it fails to mention, much less endorse, U.S. support of anti-Sandinista contras.

The resolution on El Salvador opposes those "who would impose a Cuban-style dictatorship." But it also opposes any further military assistance to the Salvadoran government unless and until there is progress in implementing land reform, protecting trade union rights, establishing a just judicial system, and bringing right-wing death squads under control. In the meantime, the people of El Salvador will just have to rely on their own resources, as did the South Vietnamese after the United States' withdrawal.

Lane Kirkland played an important role on the Kissinger Commission, which was established to build support for U.S. policy in El Salvador, and the AFL-CIO did pass a resolution hailing the report. But the resolution goes on to say that "Labor is not convinced that the government of El Salvador has met the conditions set forth in the Commission report, and we, therefore, do not support military aid to that government at this time." This has been the AFL-CIO's position for the past several years.

As the fervor of labor's anti-Communism has subsided, so has its support for defense spending. At its 1981 convention, it passed a resolution that "defense problems cannot be solved by blindly throwing money at them," something it has never said about any domestic program, no matter how ill-conceived. More recently, it adopted a statement that acknowledged the massive Soviet military buildup of the past decade, yet recommended an increase in defense spending only "in the range of 5 to 7 percent a year, with a number of affiliates favoring the lower end of that program, or less" (my emphasis). The second half of this sentence is just one of many indications that labor will move even further to the left on foreign and defense policy issues.

Even now, on the level of strategy and tactics there is little to divide the AFL-CIO from other liberal-left organizations. For instance, it endorsed and participated in last year's March on Washington (commemorating the 1963 march that labor did not endorse) despite the fact that the march was organized to provide a public forum for advocates of such causes as the Palestine Liberation Organization, the overthrow of the government of El Salvador, the nuclear freeze, and a 25 percent cut in the defense budget.

Labor's Loss

The AFL-CIO's new political strategy is best exemplified by its endorsement of Walter Mondale long before either party's nominating convention. From labor's point of view, Mondale is the perfect candidate, precisely because he is the "candidate of the special interests." His civil-rights policy is that of the civil-rights movement. His women's policy is that of the women's movement. His foreign policy is perfectly compatible with middle-class liberalism's. And his economic policy is the labor movement's. He is, therefore, the personification of the coalition which labor is now attempting to build within the Democratic Party.

Which prompts one to ask, what has labor got for all its compromising of principle? With the help of labor, civil-rights groups won an extension of the Voting Rights Act that they hope will go a long way toward establishing a right to proportional representation by race. In coalition with labor, women's groups have lobbied successfully for comparable worth legislation in states throughout the country. If not with labor's support, then in the absence of labor's traditional opposition to similar efforts, liberals have caused no end of problems for the Reagan administration's anti-Communist policies in Latin America. Meanwhile, labor's economic policy has gone nowhere in Congress.

And the odds are that it never will, even if Walter Mondale is elected president. For the American people, including many union members, are unlikely to agree to a vast increase in the power of the federal government now that they have tasted the potential benefits of a less regulated economy.

Unfortunately, there is also little reason for believing that labor will turn back from the bad bargain it has struck with the ideological left. With each passing year it becomes mired more deeply in the kind of partisan politics it resisted successfully for nearly a century. The fiercely independent labor movement, I fear, will slip entirely from our view, and American democracy will have lost one of its most distinctive institutions.

Registering For The Examination

DO NOT REGISTER TO TAKE THE FOREIGN SERVICE EXAMINATION UNLESS YOU MEET THE AGE AND CITIZENSHIP REQUIREMENTS. IF YOU DO NOT MEET THE ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS, YOUR TIME AND EFFORT IN TAKING THE EXAMINATION WILL BE WASTED AND YOUR REGISTRATION/APPLICANT RECORD FORM WILL BE CANCELLED.

To take the Foreign Service Examination on December 6, 1986, you must register in advance by completing the enclosed registration form and mailing it to the Educational Testing Service (ETS). IT IS TO YOUR ADVANTAGE TO REGISTER EARLY. Late registrants may have to be assigned to a test center other than that requested or their registration may be rejected completely. NOTE: Only the 1986 registration form will be accepted by ETS.

If your registration is received by the closing date of October 24, 1986, ETS will register you for the center of your choice insofar as space and test books are available. Registrations received after the closing date will not be processed. It is the responsibility of the applicant to mail the completed form in time to reach ETS before the closing date.

Before completing your Registration/Applicant Record Form, study it and the numbered instructions which correspond to item numbers on the registration form. Follow these instructions carefully to avoid errors that may delay your registration at ETS. Use only black pencil when filling out the form. YOU ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR ENTERING ALL INFORMATION CORRECTLY: MISTAKES MAY RESULT IN YOUR BEING ASSIGNED TO AN IMPROPER CENTER OR HAVING THE FORM RETURNED TO YOU.

DO NOT SUBMIT MORE THAN ONE REGISTRATION/APPLICANT RECORD FORM for the examination. To request a necessary change in your assigned test center, send a letter or telegram to ETS, containing the name of the examination for which you are registered, the date, and place of examination. Address cables from overseas EDUTESTSVPRIN. Give your name and address exactly as you gave them on the Registration/Applicant Record Form submitted.

At least two weeks prior to the test date, admission tickets for domestic centers will be mailed by ETS. If you have not received your ticket ONE week before the test date, immediately notify ETS, at telephone number (609) 921–9000. The exact location of the test center will be shown on the admission ticket. YOU MUST TAKE THIS ADMISSION TICKET WITH YOU TO THE TEST CENTER. Please note that Supervisors are instructed to admit only applicants with an admission ticket, or a letter or telegram from ETS. DO NOT RETURN YOUR TICKET OF ADMISSION FOR ANY REASON.

Because of the distances involved, admission tickets for FOREIGN centers are mailed weekly by ETS starting in October. If you have not received your foreign center ticket at least ONE week before the test date, telegraph ETS.

Completing the Registration/Applicant Record Form

The registration form is enclosed in the envelope in the centerfold of this booklet. To complete the registration form, please use only a No. 2 (soft lead) pencil; do not use a pen or other marker. The spaces you blacken on the form will be read by a photoelectric scanner, so please be careful to blacken them neatly, completely, and accurately.

Print your response in the spaces provided on the registration form, and/or blacken the corresponding ovals, for each item.

- 1. NAME. Print your last name, first name, and middle initial, one letter to a box. Do not use nicknames, titles, or religious titles. If your name contains an apostrophe, do not print this punctuation and do not leave a box blank where it would normally appear. Similarly, if a space appears in your name, do not leave a box blank. Use this form of your name in all correspondence with ETS and the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service and on your answer sheet. If you register as John A. Smith, for example, do not later use Jack A. Smith. Also blacken the appropriate ovals in the spaces provided.
- 2. DATE OF BIRTH. Enter your date of birth numerically; i.e., January 9, 1962, should be indicated as 01 09 62; and blacken the corresponding ovals.
- 3. SEX. Blacken the appropriate oval.
- 4. SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER. If you have a Social Security number, enter the digits in the appropriate spaces and blacken the corresponding ovals. If you do not have a Social Security number, or if you do not wish to show it, leave this section blank.

Code List on pages 6–8. Print the center number, and the name of the city and State (or country, if foreign) in the space provided and blacken the corresponding ovals. Be careful to enter the correct code number of the test center you select; a mistake will result in your being assigned to a center you do not want. (Only A or B numbers are test centers.) The exact location of the test center will be printed on the admission ticket sent to you. Foreign examinations will normally be administered at U.S. diplomatic or consular posts as listed.

- 9. & 10. LENGTH OF ACTIVE MILITARY SERVICE AND LENGTH OF FULL-TIME WORK EXPERIENCE. Enter the number of months of active military service and/or full-time work experience in the appropriate spaces, and blacken the corresponding ovals. If the total number is less than three digits, enter a zero(s) before the number (i.e., 009).

These questions are asked pursuant to guidelines issued under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended by the Equal Employment Opportunity Act of 1972.

DO NOT send the form to the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service (unless you are requesting special testing arrangements for religious or physical handicap reasons, in which case follow the directions on page 5). Your registration form must be received at ETS by October 24, 1986.

If applicants wish a receipt from ETS for their registration form, they should send it Registered (return receipt requested) Mail. Should the admission ticket not reach the applicant prior to the test date, ETS and the Board of Examiners will honor a Registered Mail receipt from ETS as evidence of registration.

Neither the Board of Examiners nor ETS can be held responsible for lost, misdirected, or delayed mail.

Use of Data Collected on the Registration/Applicant Record Form

All data collected on the Registration/Applicant Record Form, in addition to that necessary for the preparation and issuing of admission tickets and attendance rosters, will be used to help improve future tests and on research studies based on the results of the examination. None of the responses to these questions or items on the Registration/Applicant Record Form will be reflected in the scores reported for the individual applicant. Your cooperation in providing responses to all items will be greatly appreciated. This form solicits information pursuant to the authority granted the Board of Examiners under the Foreign Service Act of 1980, and is governed by the applicable sections of the Privacy Act of 1974 (5 USC 552a) and the Freedom of Information Act (5 USC 552) as amended.

Admission to the Test Center

At least two weeks before the test date (earlier for foreign centers), you will receive an admission ticket giving the reporting time and the address of the test center for which you are registered. Be sure to take the ticket with you to the center address shown; you will be required to show it to the Supervisor. Also take a second means of identification, such as your student identification card or motor vehicle drivers license. Supervisors can refuse to admit an applicant if his/her identity cannot be positively established.

Your admission ticket is not transferable to another person and can be used only by the person whose name appears on the ticket.

BE SURE TO EXAMINE IT WHEN YOU RECEIVE IT. If an error appears in your name or test center, inform ETS in writing but do not return your ticket.

Your Ticket of Admission number, which you will enter on your answer sheet, will be shown on the front of your ticket. This number is the primary means of identifying your answer sheet during the scoring process.

If you lose your admission ticket, or if you have not received it ONE week before the test date, immediately notify ETS (Princeton, New Jersey) and request an authorization to take the examination. If you are properly registered and it is too late to mail an authorization.

- (a) either a collect telegram of authorization will be sent to you, or
- (b) when you telephone ETS (609–921–9000), you will be given your ticket number, the test center address, and reporting time.

APPLICANTS should report to the test center at the time shown on their admission ticket. NO APPLICANT WILL BE ADMITTED AFTER TESTING HAS BEGUN.

Regulations at the Test Center

The staff of each test center will observe certain common procedures to insure that all applicants have equal testing time and that the operation of the center meets the requirements for standardized testing. The success of the test administration depends on your cooperation with these procedures.

The Foreign Service Examination will be given only on the day and at the time scheduled. Be prompt; Supervisors cannot admit anyone after testing begins. Plan to remain at the center approximately six hours.

"MAKEUP" EXAMINATIONS CANNOT BE AUTHORIZED, no matter how valid an applicant's reason for missing the scheduled examination.

Actual starting time may vary at different centers due to differences in the amount of time necessary for preadministration procedures. However, if you report to the center later than the time stated on your Ticket of Admission, you will not be admitted.

No pencils are furnished at the center. Take three or four No. 2 (B or HB) pencils for marking your answer sheet and an eraser.

Applicants are not permitted to continue any part of the examination beyond the established time limit. Take a watch since there may not be a clock visible to you in the testing room.

Books, slide rules, compasses, rulers, dictionaries, or papers of any kind—other than your admission ticket—are not allowed in the examination room. Supervisors will not permit anyone found with such materials to continue the test.

Scratch paper is not permitted. The margins of the test book may be used for notes and figuring. All responses must be marked on the answer sheet. No credit will be allowed for work done in the test book.

If an applicant is discovered engaging in any kind of misconduct during the course of the test administration, i.e., creating a disturbance; giving or receiving help; using notes, books, or papers of any kind; working on one section of the test during the time allotted for another section; removing test materials or notes from the test room; or taking part in an act of impersonation, the applicant will be dismissed from the center and the answer sheet will not be scored.

When the test books and answer sheets are collected by the test center staff after the examination, make certain that your answer sheet is handed in SEPARATELY. DO NOT LEAVE IT IN YOUR TEST BOOK. If you do, your answer sheet may not be found and scored.

Scores and Score Reporting

ETS will send your score report directly to the address you entered on your Registration/Applicant Record Form and shown on your Ticket of Admission. Scores for all applicants taking the examination will be mailed at the same time, after February 1, 1987. DO NOT TELEPHONE ETS. SCORES WILL NOT BE REPORTED ON THE TELEPHONE FOR ANY REASON. There is no transcript service for the Foreign Service Examination.

If your address will change prior to the score report release date, make the necessary changes on your admission ticket and give it to the Supervisor at the test center. You may also send a letter or call ETS about the change.

Any inquiries after March 1, 1987, should be directed to the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, P.O. Box 9317, Rosslyn Station, Arlington, Virginia 22209.

Special Arrangements for Sabbath Observers and Physically Handicapped Applicants

Applicants whose religious beliefs preclude taking examinations on Saturday, and applicants with certain physical handicaps who might need special arrangements to take the examination, should write to the Board of Examiners, P.O. Box 9317, Rosslyn Station, Arlington, Virginia 22209, before October 24, enclosing their registration form, so that appropriate arrangements can be made for them. Letters received after the October 24 deadline will not be honored. Sabbath observers should include in their letter a self-certification confirming their affiliation with a recognized body that observes its Sabbath throughout the year on Saturday. Handicapped applicants should include in their letter an explanation of the special arrangements they require. DO NOT send your letter or registration form to ETS.

"FIVE TOUGH QUESTIONS TO ASK BEFORE YOU INVEST IN ANY MUTUAL FUND-

INCLUDING MY OWN. - FRED ALGER

WHERE SHOULD I PUT MY MONEY NOW? "Volatile markets like these tempt even professional fund managers to shift from stocks to bonds, T-bills, and money market instruments. But as the chart proves, equities represent the most attractive of the four investments cited for capital appreciation over time. And that's why we created The Alger Fund's Growth Portfolio."

HOW HAS THE FUND'S do INVESTMENT PHILOSOPHY FARED AGAINST THE MARKET AVERAGES?

"The Alger Growth Portfolio is based on a system that outperformed the S&P 500 by 10 to 1 since 1965. In that span, the system produced annual compound growth of 21% for our institutional clients, turning an original $10,000 investment into $651,228 in 21 years.*

Now the same research disciplines and experienced professionals that produced those results can invest your money for you in the Alger Growth Portfolio."

600 500 FRED ALGER MANAGEMENT, INC. OUTPERFORMING THE S&P 500 BY 10 TO 1 SINCE 1965.

WHERE DOES THE FUND • GET ITS RESEARCH?

"Does the fund rely on research available to anyone who can pay the price? Alger doesn't buy any Compound annual growth for different investments, adjusted for inflation, 1926–1985.

Past results do not guarantee future performance.

outside equity research. The original research generated by our 30 analysts is for the exclusive benefit of Alger investors. It's not for sale to anybody."

WHO'S CALLING THE SHOTS?

"At The Alger Fund, the analysts who research stocks don't just feed facts to an investment committee or portfolio manager who makes all the decisions. Our analysts know the stocks they track, so they're the ones who make all buy and sell decisions. And they're held strictly accountable."

DOES THE FUND LET YOU DIVERSIFY?

> "For many investors, a prudent investment strategy means diversification. The Alger Fund lets you balance the aggressive growth objective of our Growth

Portfolio and Small Capitalization Portfolio with the more conservative objective of our Income and Growth Portfolio.

Plus three options to generate high current income: the Alger High Yield, Fixed Income and Money Market Portfolios."

*Through September 30, 1986. Results for Alger and the S&P 500, an unmanaged index of common stocks, reflect capital appreciation and reinvestment of dividends, but not payment of Alger's advisory fees. Alger's results are for fully discretionary, equity-oriented accounts managed for an entire year 1986 accounts managed for an entire year 1986 accounts managed for an entire year 1986 account, an active advisory account. Results are for Alger's only account, an active advisory account. Results are for accounts having the same investment objective and strategies as the Alger Growth Portfolio, which differ from those of the other Portfolios.
