right in 1970 and 1976 retiring from the Senate in 1982. Although he caucused in the Senate with the Democrats, he supported Rep. Paul Tribble as his successor in 1982 and was also supportive of Ronald Reagan in 1980.

William Roy Smith is currently retired from his position as Vice President of A.H. Robbins Company, a health care and pharmaceutical company in Richmond. A Byrd organization stalwart, Smith served in the Virginia House of Delegates for 21 years winning the chairmanship of its Appropriations Committee before retiring in the late 1970's from public service. He occasionally supports GOP candidates, but was a strong backer of Charles Robb's candidacy for governor in 1981. Smith remains active in the network of Virginia politics especially through fundraising.

WINNER

1984 President's Volunteer Action Awards

Levi Strauss & Co. (Corporation)
San Francisco, California

CATEGORY: Corporate

Background

Over 7,500 Levi Strauss employees were involved in volunteer activities through the company-sponsored Community Involvement Teams (CITs) during the past year. CITs are groups of employees who make their own decisions about their involvement and in the development of their volunteer projects.

CITs research and analyze community needs, develop either short term or long term projects to address those needs and recruit other employees and their families to participate as volunteers. Currently there are 70 CITs active in 52 communities in 14 states. The average CIT is comprised of 15-20 members and undertakes 18 different projects in a year.

The company supports the team activities through the Community Affairs Department. Through department staff, the company provides assistance in the development of CITs, training in community needs assessments, technical assistance to nonprofit organizations with which the CITs work and sponsor seminars which allow CITs to share information.

Through the Employee Social Benefits program, the company provides grants between $500 and $1,500 to organizations with which employees volunteer. Once a CIT completes a project with a community organization, CAD staff provide assistance in developing grant applications to the Levi Strauss Foundation. The foundation makes grants totaling more than two million dollars to organizations with employee volunteer involvement.

WINNER

1984 President's Volunteer Action Awards

Bill and Pat Barton (couple)
Naples, Florida

CATEGORY: Health

Background

In the spring of 1978 Bill and Pat Barton, concerned about the use of drugs by their children and other young people in the community, called together several parents to discuss the problem. Out of a series of meetings the Naples Informed Parents was formed. It is a volunteer organization with a dual purpose of educating the community about the hazards associated with drug and alcohol use by young people and of creating a community environment which would encourage drug-free activities and attitudes.

Over the next five years, NIP worked successfully with community organizations developing a program which included drug education in the schools, community education, youth programs, a resource center, counseling and referral services and anti-drug legislation. Because of its early dramatic success, NIP began to attract national attention and members were soon assisting groups across the country in developing similar programs.

Representatives of a number of the local programs saw the need for a national clearinghouse and in 1980, the Bartons joined with parents from 20 other states to form the National Federation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth. In the first year, NFP grew from 360 parent groups to over 1,000. It continues to grow and today involves over 4,000 parent groups.

Mr. Barton served as the first elected president and for nine months managed the organization from home. Mrs. Barton served as Parent Group Development Chairman and developed two educational manuals for NFP. In 1980, she formed Florida Informed Parents and, working with the state drug abuse office, established the first state network of parent groups.

WINNER

1984 President's Volunteer Action Awards

Corporate Angel Network (Group)
White Plains, New York

CATEGORY: Human Services

Background

~~Priscilla~~
^{Priscilla} Blum and Jay Weinberg founded the Corporate Angel Network in 1981 to provide free transportation for cancer patients to the 21 comprehensive cancer centers and 50 institutions that offer additional specialized cancer care across the United States. Ms. Blum and Mr. Weinberg, both recovered cancer patients, realized that empty seats on corporate aircraft were an important underutilized resource.

It is frequently necessary for cancer patients to spend large amounts of money on transportation to and from treatment centers, costs that generally are not covered by insurance. CAN is a major innovation because corporations can offer an invaluable service - the use of empty seats on already scheduled flights for cancer patients traveling for treatment - at no cost to the corporation.

Referrals to CAN are made by physicians and staff at the cancer treatment centers. CAN is coordinated by a group of 15 volunteers and one paid staff member headquartered at the Westchester County Airport in White Plains, New York. Each month CAN coordinates approximately 20 flights.

Still growing, the program now includes more than 750 aircraft belonging to over 250 participating corporations and a number of labor unions.

WINNER

1984 President's Volunteer Action Awards

San Diego & Imperial Counties
Labor Council, AFL-CIO (Union)

CATEGORY: Union

Background

The San Diego and Imperial Counties Labor Council, with the cooperation of the United Way, the Regional Employment Training Consortium and the Employment Development Department, formed the Unemployment Information and Assistance Center to address the varied needs of the unemployed union members in the San Diego area.

The Council recruited from within its membership more than 350 active volunteers, both employed and unemployed. Volunteers conduct food drives, help with the preparation of food packages and assist with the distribution of surplus commodities. Those with trucks pick up foodstuffs and supplies; volunteers with cars provide transportation to medical appointments. Others assist in the union office with paperwork and filing. When an unemployed person calls and asks for assistance, he or she is requested to assist in the distribution process in return for food.

During 1983, the Council raised enough food and money through special drives to prepare 1,250 family size boxes which members distributed to the unemployed. The Council also distributed 25,000 pounds of surplus commodities such as cheese, butter, flour, rice, honey and dry milk. The Labor Council distributed more than 35 tons of food during the year.

Through the participation of Joseph Francis, Secretary-Treasurer, the Council is able to provide assistance to unemployed workers with utility bills, rent and mortgage payments, dental care, water bills and referrals to community clinics.

WINNER

1984 President's Volunteer Action Awards

Tom Rader (Individual)
Dos Palos, California

CATEGORY: Public Safety

Background

Tom Rader, a Merced County volunteer probation officer for eight years, supervises and counsels more than 20 adult and juvenile probationers at a time. Three years ago, he volunteered to take on the added responsibility of developing, supervising and maintaining a program whereby juveniles may be assigned to a work program in lieu of fines or sentencing.

His interest in young people led him to develop a program involving inmates of San Quentin Prison to act as counselors for pre-delinquent and delinquent youths in an attempt to divert them from the criminal justice system. In 1983, he established a neighborhood watch program in Dos Palos and for over three years he taught courses in the fundamentals of gun handling and game laws to help youths and adults attain their hunting licenses. He also conducted food and household goods collections for needy families and counseled veterans on their veteran benefits.

Mr. Rader accomplished all of this despite the fact that he is a retired disabled Vietnam veteran.

WINNER

1984 President's Volunteer Action Awards

Children of the Night (Organization)
Hollywood, California

CATEGORY: Human Services

Background

Dr. Lois Lee conducted a research study on prostitution in the Hollywood area which focused on the relationship between the prostitute and the pimp. The 1975 study revealed many young people, both girls and boys, arriving in Los Angeles alone and without support, became involved in the life of prostitution.

In 1979, Dr. Lee founded Children of the Night, a community-supported program designed to help the children lead profitable lives. Contributions from the Playboy Foundation and the Soroptomists of Hollywood-Wilshire allow the program to provide a 24-hour hotline, counseling, food and medical care for the youths.

A network of volunteers, many of them former prostitutes distribute literature to street prostitutes informing them of the temporary shelter and hotline. Children of the Night counselors assist the youth in finding employment or returning to school.

Children of the Night now depends on a network of volunteer homes that provide shelter for the young people. There is a fund raising effort for purchasing its own shelter facility. Since the program began, Dr. Lee and Children of the Night volunteers have provided temporary housing for over 250 prostitutes.

WINNER

1984 President's Volunteer Action Awards

Elizabeth Cooper Terwilliger (Individual) CATEGORY: Environment
Mill Valley, California

Background

Elizabeth Cooper Terwilliger uses her interest in nature and ecology as a teacher of nature programs in the Marin County schools. She conducts her "bird-in-the-hand" technique of teaching ecology from a Volkswagen van outfitted as a nature laboratory equipped with stuffed birds and mammals and through hiking, canoeing and bicycling field trips.

In addition to her six day a week program with the local schools, she has appeared in five habitat films, "Tripping with Terwilliger". She wrote nature exploration books for families and developed special handbooks for teachers. Through her personal appearances in the Bay Area and her appearances on film, she reaches over a million school children each year.

As an advocate for the preservation of open space, she was instrumental in the acquisition of 700 acres of private land for a wildlife sanctuary, an area which has been used since that time by the Bay Area schools for their field trips.

In 1975, the nonprofit Terwilliger Foundation was formed to expand her work. The Foundation includes four salaried naturalists and 100 volunteer docents who present the nature program yearly to over 75,000 school children in the Bay Area. The volunteers use vans to present the program five days each week to kindergarten through eighth grade classes and to special workshops for senior citizens and the handicapped.

WINNER

1984 President's Volunteer Action Awards

Friends of Copper Mountain College (Group) CATEGORY: Education
Twentynine Palms, California

Background

Friends of Cooper Mountain College was formed by residents of the high desert area when the district lost their state funds to build a community college facility. Although the 40,000 citizens living in the Morongo Basin area were served by a community college district, the main campus was a two hour drive away. The Basin is an area of 1,800 square miles or large enough to contain the state of Rhode Island. The Marine Corps Air Ground Combat Center is located near Twentynine Palms and, along with their dependents, the 7,000 marines stationed there make up a significant percentage of the enrollees in the community college system.

When Friends of Copper Mountain College was formed, the citizens set the goal of "A Community College Built by the Community" and all segments of the community would be involved.

Fundraising began with the sale of two rugs quilted by senior citizens and later included Sale of Certificates of Participation and sponsorship of special events.

Within 18 months, Friends of Copper Mountain College had raised $1,850,000 and the first buildings and access roads was completed. Plans are now underway to raise the funds to build additional buildings.

WINNER

1984 President's Volunteer Action Awards

James F. "Buck" Burshears (Individual)
LaJunta, Colorado

CATEGORY: Arts & Humanities

Background

When Buck Burshears, the first Eagle Scout in the LaJunta area, was asked to take over a floundering Boy Scout troop, he accepted and decided to incorporate his interest in Indian lore.

He founded the Koshare Indian Dancers which research, preserve and demonstrate Indian culture, much of which would have been lost, except for the work and interest of Buck Burshears and the troop. Through his efforts, the Koshare Dancers of Explorer Post 2230 have become world renowned for accurate performance of the American Indians traditional dances. Through performances, the troop raised $10 million to build the Kiva and Museum in LaJunta. Today, Koshare Kiva has a fine collection of Indian art and one of the largest Indian lore collections in the world. Over one million people visit the museum and each year 5,000 Scouts visit Kiva on their way to the national Scout ranch.

Over the past 50 years, Mr. Burshears has become one of the world's foremost authorities on Indian dance and today commands high respect in the Indian community. The Chippewa tribe made him a blood brother and the Blackfoot tribe named him an honorary member.

Under his leadership and dedication over 525 boys attained the rank of Eagle Scout - a record more than five times the national average.

WINNER

1984 President's Volunteer Action Awards

Americares Foundation (Organization)
New Canaan, Connecticut

CATEGORY: International

Background

Robert Macauley founded Americares Foundation in 1979 to provide relief supplies to countries around the world. He founded Americares on the premise that a relief organization could operate with a low overhead. Because of his success in securing contributed space, telephones and supplies and the strong involvement of volunteers, the foundation operates with an overhead of one-half of one percent, the lowest overhead of any relief organization in the U.S.

In the past 22 months, Americares made 21 major shipments of medicines, pharmaceutical supplies and new clothing valued at over $14.5 million. Americares was among the first private foundation to ship needed medicines to the people of Poland. Distribution was arranged through the Polish Episcopate of the Catholic Church and the Ministry of Health. The foundation has an agreement to continue sending medical supplies to Poland for the next five years.

Working through the Middle East Council of Churches, the foundation was also among the first to assist Lebanon. Shipments to Pakistan and Afghanistan are managed through the Swedish Committee and those to Guatemala and El Salvador are managed by the Knights of Malta. By working through these intermediaries, Americares guarantees that the medicine and supplies reach the people for whom they are intended.

At Christmas 1983, Americares sent 5,000,000 chocolate covered nutrition bars and 2,000,000 disposable diapers to Poland. Each carton was marked "From the kids of the U.S. to the kids of Poland, with love."

Delaware Vietnam Veterans
Leadership Program (Organization)
Wilmington, Delaware

CATEGORY: Jobs

Background

The Delaware Vietnam Veterans Leadership Program, founded in 1981, serves the state's veteran community with a special emphasis on the 25,000 Vietnam veterans. VVLP utilizes a buddy system, matching successful Vietnam veterans with those having difficulty adjusting or finding employment.

The program utilizes volunteers and its newsletter "Vetwork" to solicit Delaware's corporate community to train and hire veterans for unsubsidized jobs or to help them to identify existing job training programs. VVLP works closely with the Veterans Administration, the Small Business Administration, the U.S. Department of Labor and the State Department of Labor.

VVLP sponsored VET INFO '83 to provide employment and career information to veterans. More than 300 veterans attended and spoke to representatives of over 60 companies. Seminars were conducted on topics such as job search strategies, selling yourself, life and career planning, small business administration loans and training and educational opportunities.

In 1981, when the program began, Delaware ranked 49th in the nation at placing veterans into jobs, 50th in veteran benefits and was rated the second worst state for small business. By 1983, the VVLP placed over 55 veterans into unsubsidized jobs and Delaware moved from 49th to 16th in the state ratings for small businesses.

Irene Auberlin (Individuals)
Detroit, Michigan

CATEGORY: International

Background

Irene Auberlin founded World Medical Relief in 1953 to donate American surplus medicine and medical supplies to medical facilities in countries having no access to needed drugs and equipment. Now 87, she continues to serve WMR as a volunteer. She founded WMR on the premise that unused samples of medicine could be collected and sent to clinics and hospitals abroad to assist in areas with high levels of poverty.

WMR with over 200 volunteers, sorts, packages and packs drugs under the guidance of professional registered pharmacists and nurses. Other volunteer repair and service donated medical equipment prior to shipment. The volunteers are supplemented by a paid staff. Much of the overhead - printing, plumbing, truck repair, trucks - is contributed and the administrative costs of the operation are only 1.5% of the total value of contributed funds and supplies.

During the past 20 years, WMR sent nearly 6,000 tons, or half a billion dollars worth, of needed materials to missionary doctors, hospitals and clinics worldwide. Materials and equipment went to Haiti, Pakistan, Ghana, Taiwan, the Philippines, Columbia and other countries.

WMR also provides free prescriptions to 111 Michigan Way relief agencies and clients of the Visiting Nurse Association and provides supplies to three drug and alcohol clinics, the Volunteer Optometric Services to Humanity and to Interplast, which provides plastic surgery to deprived children.

Volunteer for Minnesota (Organization)
St. Paul, Minnesota

CATEGORY: Mobilization

Background

The State Office of Volunteer Services developed Volunteer for Minnesota in 1981 to address local problems which would result from state revenue shortages. The two year project was designed to enable communities to meet their unique needs through local partnerships. A 50 member Planning Committee representing a wide range of state government personnel as well as representatives of business and voluntary organizations was appointed to design and develop VFM.

The Committee developed two community handbooks and trainers' manuals, participant handouts, a slide show, issue brochure and volunteer recognition packets to prepare communities for a wide range of citizen participation from recruiting through recognition. They also developed and conducted a two part training program, marketed the VFM program to over 25,000 community leaders and provided technical assistance to the 38 communities participating.

Through the program, the state is able to identify a wide range of local leaders - business and labor, volunteer and local public officials. Over 150 volunteers assisted at the state level in developing the program. Funding for the project was provided by 20 corporations and foundations allowing the state to provide the service to the communities at little cost to the taxpayer.

Among the accomplishments of VFM are a new statewide public/private/voluntary sector partnership, the emergence of state level leadership as a catalyst in assisting communities and a new awareness among policy makers of the capability of volunteers.

Laid-Off Employees Assistance Program
(LEAP) Armco (Corporation)
Middletown, Ohio

CATEGORY: Corporate

Background

The Laid-Off Employees Assistance Program, LEAP, was formed in 1982 by a group of blue and white collar employees of Armco as a result of concern for the 1,150 steelworkers laid off at the company's Middletown Works. LEAP's immediate goal was to provide food certificates for the holiday season. The long range goal was to raise $250,000 to assist the unemployed through the winter.

Within days, over 600 employees volunteered to solicit monetary contributions and letters were sent to the homes of all active and retired employees. By the end of "Laid-Off Employees Assistance Week" in early December, LEAP volunteers had raised $249,000 from company employees corporate headquarters and even from some employees who had been laid off. By the end of the campaign, they had more than $278,000.

The committee arranged with a locally-owned supermarket for substantial discounts and needy employees were given $100 food gift certificates. The committee also established guidelines for continuing the program including making periodic distribution of food certificates providing hotlines for laid-off employees to discuss personal and financial problems, providing assistance with creditors, developing and distributing a list of local service agencies and establishing a job-matching committee. LEAP has provided assistance to over 900 families.

Ray G. Villarreal (Individual)
El Paso, Texas

CATEGORY: Health

Background

Ray Villarreal, who operates a corrective shoe business, became aware of the orthopedic needs of the children in Juarez, Mexico. For nearly 20 years, he has devoted his energy and resources to meeting those needs. Many of these children have defects that could be corrected if found early enough, but as the child grows older, they can be assisted only by corrective shoes or braces.

Every Sunday for the past 18 years, he has traveled to Juarez, established himself at the local fire station and fit orthopedic shoes and donated artificial limbs and braces on crippled children. When he arrives, there is a line of children waiting to see him. During the Christmas holidays in 1983, he organized a distribution of toys and 3,000 pairs of shoes to Juarez children. There was nearly 14,000 children waiting to receive these gifts.

For many years Mr. Villarreal transported crippled Mexican children to Galveston for treatment at the Shriner's Hospital. He has convinced the Mexico City and Salt Lake City Shriner's hospitals to hold periodic orthopedic clinics in Juarez and local doctors are donating their surgical services.

Because there was no clinic in Mexico to provide special training for treatment of burn victims, he worked with El Paso's Sister Cities Havoc Committee and the Rotary Clubs to provide transportation for five doctors and nine nurses to visit the burn center in Galveston for special training.

Each Christmas, he donates shoes to as many as 2,900 needy El Paso children through the local police and sheriff's departments.

Nick Monreal (Individual)
San Antonio, Texas

CATEGORY: Education

Background

Nick Monreal developed Teach the Children program which provides necessary school supplies to children from economically disadvantaged families. He feels that regardless of other obstacles confronting a child, even a modest positive influence in a child's life such as adequate clothing and school supplies can help a child begin making sound decisions about the future.

Teach the Children involves all segments of the community in contributing toward the welfare of children who otherwise would be lacking the tools to complete their education. The program raises funds through corporate contributions, collection cans and special events such as picnics, car washes and a local telethon. Funds are used to buy school supplies which are made into packages and given to the children. None of the money raised goes into administration.

In 1976, the first year of the program, Teach the Children raised $350 and provided assistance to 284 children in six school districts. The program continues to grow and, in 1983, the campaign raised $105,196 and assisted 9,718 children in ten school districts.

Currently Teach the Children is expanding into the Rio Grande Valley and plans are calling for replication of the program statewide during 1985.

Chris Stout (Individual)
Lynnwood, Washington

CATEGORY: Material Resources

Background

Soon after Chris Stout moved to the agricultural community of Lynnwood, Washington, with her husband and children, she realized that she could supplement the family's limited resources by gleaning the fields after the commercial harvester had left. Because the harvest time is limited, she learned to can and preserve the fruits and vegetables for the winter months.

Realizing there are other families in similar financial situations, Stout encouraged them to glean and taught them to preserve the food. Two years ago, she began collecting and distributing used clothing. As the distribution grew, she rented a small building and opened a thrift shop and later incorporated the operation as "Sparrow Ministries."

Today Sparrow Ministries involves approximately 150 participants who glean fruit and vegetables. Many of them also work part-time in the thrift shop.

Glenn Williams (Individual)
Seattle, Washington

CATEGORY: Public Safety

Background

Glenn Williams has been active in the development of services for the families of prison inmates since his own release from Alcatraz 23 years ago. Shortly after his release, he began volunteering with Job Therapy Corporation, an organization which assists released felons with rehabilitation.

After serving as a volunteer and paid staff person for a year and serving as a board member for five years, he resigned from Job Therapy and organized Attica, Inc., a nonprofit organization designed to provide transportation to prisons for the families of inmates. Using his own finances, he purchased a bus and over the next 11 years transported over 15,000 women and children to visit a family member in the penal institutions in Washington state.

In 1981, Mr. Williams began focusing his attention and energies on helping children who had problems with drug abuse. While continuing his volunteer work with Attica, Inc., he founded Teen Intercept, a program aimed at educating high school and college age youths about the consequences of the illegal use of drugs and alcohol. He spoke to hundreds of church congregations, civic organizations and business organizations. Coordinated with local schools and churches, Teen Intercept provides free counseling to both children and parents.
