RECEPTION FOR SENATE-HOUSE DINNER CHAIRMEN AND MAJOR TICKET SELLERS

DATE: Thursday, May 10, 1984

TIME: 5:00 p.m.

FROM: Margaret Tutwiler ^{not}

I. PURPOSE

To acknowledge the efforts and contributions of the Chairmen, Vice-Chairmen and major ticket sellers for the 1984 Senate-House Dinner.

II. BACKGROUND

The Senate-House Dinner, or "President's Dinner", is an annual joint fundraising effort between the National Republican Senatorial Committee and the National Republican Congressional Committee. Proceeds from this event will assist in electing and re-electing Republican candidates to the House and Senate. Traditionally the most successful fundraiser of the year for the GOP, this year's pledges have far exceeded all expectations. The event is expected to raise $4.5 million through the attendance of approximately 2,700 persons at $1,500 a ticket.

The Reception, held at the White House prior to the Dinner at the Washington Hilton, has served as an incentive to those selling Dinner tickets. Those raising $20,000 or more have been invited to attend. Similar White House Receptions were held in 1982 and 1983.

III. PARTICIPANTS

The President's Dinner Chairman, Drew Lewis; Deputy Dinner Chairman, Ted Welch; PAC Chairman, Jack McDonald; Senator Lugar, Congressman Vander Jagt, Dinner Vice-Chairmen, and major ticket sellers (a total of approximately 350 individuals).

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: RECEPTION FOR SENATE/HOUSE
DINNER COMMITTEE
THURSDAY, MAY 10, 1984

It's a real pleasure to welcome you to the White House. Drew Lewis, for 2 years now you've done a great job of chairing this event. And Ted Welch, this year you've been an outstanding deputy chairman, just as I'm sure you'll do an outstanding job next year when you move up to chairman. And I want to give my heartfelt thanks to every person in this room. Your hard work and determination are what make it possible for us to put our beliefs into practice here in Washington and across the country. Because of you, we carried the day in 1980. And I have a hunch that, if you have anything to say about it, we'll win again in 1984.

You know, the past few years have been quite an education for me. It's the first time in my life I've seen Democrats pretend to be worried about balancing the budget. Now, I don't have anything against actors in politics, but I'm afraid I object when politicians start acting. Let's look at the facts.

Back when the Democrats were in control, the cost of living rose 30 percent in 3 years and interest rates hit the highest levels since the Civil War. Since 1980, we Republicans have cut inflation by nearly two-thirds, and chopped prime interest rates down by 9 percentage points. And, while under the Democrats, Federal spending rose by 17 percent a year in 1980 alone, we Republicans have cut that in half. Under the Democrats, the American people were taxed at the highest rates in our history;

we've given Americans an across-the-board tax rate cut of 25 percent.

So forgive me, but the next time Tip O'Neill comes to the Oval Office with advice on how to run the economy, I'm going to tell him, one Irishman to another, go peddle your blarney some place else.

Just as we've put the economy back on course, we Republicans have begun rebuilding our Nation's defenses and given our foreign policy a new sense of direction. The world knows once again that America stands for the political, religious, and economic freedom of mankind.

We still have much to do, and that's why your support during this campaign is so vital. This year we must keep the White House, retain our majority in the Senate, and increase our seats in the House. Only then can we take the steps -- from tax reform to a firm defense of liberty in our hemisphere -- that our country will need in the next 4 years.

Churchill once said something to the effect that Americans did not cross the Ocean, cross the mountains, and cross the prairies, because we're formed out of sugar candy. He was right, and in the next 4 years, we'll show the world the stern stuff we're made of.

Thank you, and God bless you.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: SENATE/HOUSE DINNER
THURSDAY, MAY 10, 1984

Thank you, Drew, and thank you everyone. After using chopsticks for 6 days in China, tonight I'm glad to see that they threw in a knife and fork.

But Nancy and I are delighted to be with you this evening. Drew Lewis, Dick Lugar, Guy Vander Jagt, Ted Welch, and Jack McDonald, you've done a superb job of putting this event together. To the Members of the House and Senate here tonight, you have my heartfelt thanks for all you've done over the past 3 years to help put America back on course. Special thanks to Howard Baker and Bob Michel for your outstanding leadership on the Hill. And to those of you who have come here tonight from across the country, you have my deepest gratitude for your generous support of the cause that unites us. With your help, we're making history.

Now, it's no secret that this is an election year, and we've already begun to hear talk about various political strategies -- the Northern strategy, the Western strategy, the Sunbelt strategy. My favorite is the Rose Garden strategy -- a sure winner if all you want is the horticulture vote.

But I want you all to know that I've already decided on my strategy. It's as simple as this: Whatever the Democrats do, we won't hide behind rhetoric. We'll stand on the record.

Think back just 3 years ago. Big taxing and spending had led to soaring interest rates and inflation. Our defenses had grown weak. All over the world, America's reputation was no longer one of strength and resolve, but of vacillation and self-doubt. Many in Washington seemed to forget that the bedrock values of faith, freedom, and family were what made us a great and good people. It seemed for a season as though any sense of justice, self-discipline, and duty was ebbing out of our national life, and that our Nation was in an inevitable decline.

But on this Earth there's no such thing as "inevitable," and the American people decided it was time to put a stop to that decline -- time to give our country a rebirth of freedom and faith, time for a great national renewal. We Republicans took office determined to make a new beginning. And today, America is back.

We've knocked inflation down to less than half what it was when we took office. The prime rate has fallen 9 percentage points. And all across the country, a surging economic expansion is taking place. Retail sales and factory orders are up. The stock market has shown new strength. Since the expansion began 16 months ago, 5.4 million Americans have found jobs, and the unemployment rate has shown the steepest drop in 30 years. Today, more Americans have jobs than at any other time in our history.

Despite the overwhelming success of our economic program, the opposition won't rest. They'll never stop calling our tax cuts "unfair." That shows just how the Democrats think. When inflation pushes Americans into higher tax brackets year after year, taking more and more money away from the people who earned it and giving it instead to big Government, the Democrats think everything is hunky-dory. But when we pass through a long-overdue, 25-percent, across-the-board personal income tax rate cut, the Democrats scream foul play.

With regard to fairness, let's take a look at the facts. In 1982, the last year for which we have complete statistics, people with incomes below $20,000 a year contributed 10 percent less to tax revenues than they did a year before -- in large part because of our tax cuts. For those with incomes from $20,000 to $50,000, tax payments dropped by 1 percent. But those with incomes of $50,000 and more contributed not less, but 8 percent more to total tax revenues. And if you go one step further and narrow that group down to those earning $500,000 and up, taxes paid increased by a whopping 41 percent.

Nineteen eighty-two wasn't a fluke. History has shown again and again that when high marginal tax rates are cut, and the economy expands, revenues actually rise. In the 1920's, Treasury Secretary Andrew Mellon instituted a series of tax cuts that reduced the top rate from 73 percent to 25 percent. The cuts increased revenues from the rich by 186 percent between 1921 and 1928, the share of total income taxes paid by those with net incomes over $50,000 rose from under a half to more than three-quarters.

Just 20 years ago, the Kennedy tax cuts reduced marginal rates on personal income by an average of 20 percent. Did the rich pay less? No, they paid more -- and overall revenues rose.

The plain fact is that at the same time our tax cuts spurred the economy on to new productivity, they actually shifted a larger percentage of the tax burdens from the middle class to the rich. Today, our tax code is fairer than it was under the Carter-Mondale Administration. For all the Capitol Hill Democrats who'll read this with disbelief in tomorrow's papers, let me say that again: Today our tax code is fairer than it was under Carter and Mondale.

The opposition needs to spend less time carping and more time supporting things, like tax cuts, that truly help the American people. Earlier this month, liberal Democrat Paul Tsongas put it well when he rose on the floor of the Senate to say this to his fellow Democrats: "The weakness that we have is that we, as Democrats, have never convinced the country we know how to run the economy; that Democrats are viewed as people who care less about how well the economy is doing and spend all of their time worrying about how you distribute the golden eggs. The goose's health is irrelevant."

"You know," he added, "the funny thing about it is, we deserve it, because it is true."

Just as we've moved ahead on the economy, our Administration has taken vigorous action against waste and fraud in the Federal Government. We've taken aim at crime; increasing drug-related arrests, more than doubling organized crime convictions, and setting up drug task forces across the country. And we've moved education to the very top of the national agenda. When we took office, only a handful of States had task forces on education. Today that number is 50.

At the same time, we've begun rebuilding our defenses and given our foreign policy a new sense of direction. In Grenada, we set a nation free. In Europe, we and our NATO allies went through months of Soviet bluff and bluster, and came out of it more firmly united than ever.

In the Pacific, my trip to Korea and Japan strengthened our ties with our Asian allies. Our recent visit to China improved the prospects for a continued development of this important relationship, and produced agreements to cooperate more closely on trade, investment, technology, nuclear energy, and scientific and managerial exchanges. No one should underestimate the differences between China and the United States. Yet the Chinese have chosen not to threaten our interests, but to follow the path of cooperation.

In Central America, our Administration has firmly supported the forces of democracy and economic progress. Three out of four dollars of American aid to the region have been not military, but economic. And as I said last night to the Nation, the United States must not allow the free governments of this vitally important region to be overrun by Soviet- and Cuban-backed guerrillas.

And while I'm on this subject, I want to ask those who seem ready to desert the forces of democracy in Central America: Name one totalitarian country where the people can practice the freedom of speech that these critics themselves value so highly, and that people in free Central American nations now enjoy. Name one country that was taken over by Marxist guerrillas that has held a truly democratic election like the one that just took place in El Salvador. And name one communist country where the people are as free to worship their God as the millions of faithful are in El Salvador, Honduras, and the other free Central American nations. They can't do it because no such country exists. That's why I, for one, refuse to negotiate away the liberty of our hemisphere.

Yes, from the economy to foreign policy, we have made a new beginning. It's a record we can take to the people with pride.

But we must give the people more than our record; we must give them our vision. We Republicans see an America forever free from the evils of inflation. To make that dream a reality, we will enact structural reforms like the line-item veto and the balanced-budget amendment. We see an America with a fair and simple tax code that allows the American people to keep a greater share of their earnings. To bring that about, we'll design a major tax reform -- not tinkering here and there, but a sweeping and comprehensive reform of the entire tax code. We see a world of peace and ever-growing freedom. So we'll keep our defenses strong, support the forces of progress in Central America and elsewhere, and remain eager to negotiate equitable and verifiable nuclear arms reductions, not just limitations.

The Democrats can run on gloom if they want to, but we'll run on reality -- and the American reality is good. Our basic industries are gaining new strength, and we're leading the world in a dazzling technological revolution. Our people are once again self-confident, and polls show that Americans are more optimistic about the future of the Nation than at any time in the past 5 years. Together, we're building an opportunity society here at home, and making America a powerful force for peace among nations throughout the world.

The Republican message is simple: Our country's best days are still to come, and with faith, freedom, and courage, there's no limit to what the American people can accomplish. If we do everything in our power to carry that message to the voters, on November 6th, they'll respond by keeping Republicans where we belong -- on the job.

Thank you, and God bless you.
