Governor Ronald Reagan announced today he will ask the legislature to pass emergency legislation which would revise the state's new age of majority law to conform with the 1971 Welfare Reform Act.

The welfare reform law specified that 18-through-20 year old students in the AFDC program making satisfactory progress in school could continue to receive the assistance.

However, the age of majority law, which goes into effect March 4, denies AFDC assistance to these students if they are 18 or over.

The legislation the governor seeks would defer the operative effect of the age of majority law as it affects certain state education and health programs designed to assist persons 18-through-20 years of age.

He said he has directed State Social Welfare Director Robert B. Carleson to inform the counties that the emergency legislation is being requested and to instruct them to continue to receive and hold applications for the AFDC assistance after March 4. Notices of discontinuance of aid to those persons affected will be held until the latest possible time and will not be sent if the remedial legislation is passed on an urgency basis before March 15.

"It is clear," he said, "that the age of majority law, if not amended, would abruptly deprive thousands of families and individuals of education and health benefits they have been receiving."

A parallel problem which the governor hopes to solve with this remedial legislation is the loss of state funds which the community colleges have been receiving for students under 21.

The Reagan administration today announced a pioneering multi-agency plan to monitor environmentally harmful materials in the Monterey Basin this year.

The pilot project is an all-encompassing plan designed to help guide the state in developing a comprehensive integrated statewide environmental monitoring system, the first of its kind in the nation.

Dr. Raymond A. Fleck, an environmental toxicologist at the University of California at Davis was chief architect of the plan and serves as project director.

Thirty-five staff members of governmental bodies and 15 from private organizations contributed to the data pool for the program study.

A number of heavy metals, chemicals and other environmentally hazardous materials will be measured during the 1972 calendar year under the program.

Specific substances whose source, movement and fate will be studied include lead; mercury; cadmium; arsenic; boron; DDT and its metabolites; other organochlorine compounds including 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T; parathion; asbestos; nitrates and ethylene.

Samples will be taken of air, surface water, underground water, waste discharges, fish and wildlife, and food and soil elements. Biological indicators of environmental quality will be included.

The primary study area will be the lower portion of the Salinas Valley and the near-shore portion of Monterey Bay. This area was selected because it is a limited, well-defined geographical entity that will allow researchers to develop methods and procedures to measure and track all potential sources of pollution: industrial, municipal and agricultural.

Dr. Fleck and his study team have identified in the area 30 industrial waste dischargers, 12 municipal waste dischargers, six solid waste disposal sites and three mining and miscellaneous sources of potentially harmful materials.

Farm crop production and chemicals used in agriculture and mosquito abatement will also come under surveillance.

State agencies involved in the study will use existing resources, facilities and budget allotments in contributing to the project. Particularly active in the program will be agencies with responsibilities for environmental protection, such as the California Departments of Agriculture, Fish and Game, Public Health, and Water Resources, and the Air Resources and Water Resources Control Boards.

The program is designed to include and coordinate with many existing monitoring projects being conducted in the area by these agencies and such others as the Monterey County Department of Public Health, Monterey-Santa Cruz Air Pollution Control District, the U.S. Geological Survey, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments (AMBAG), and the Hopkins Marine Station.

In addition to providing an evaluation of current conditions, the environmental sensing and measuring program will allow California to anticipate undesirable changes long before they occur and take steps to prevent them, according to Dr. Fleck.

Governor Ronald Reagan today made the following announcement to newsmen in Sacramento.

"I am gratified and very pleased that the Nixon administration has now given us the authority we have been seeking to implement one of the most innovative and far-reaching elements of our welfare reform program.

"As you know, one of the major provisions of the Welfare Reform Act of 1971 enabled us to test the concept that able-bodied, employable welfare recipients should be required to seek work, accept a job if offered, participate in job training, or work in selected jobs for the community in return for their welfare grants.

"Now that HEW secretary Richardson has approved the demonstration project, we intend to push forward immediately with our plans to implement the three-year program in 35 California counties beginning April 1.

"When I discussed the program with President Nixon at the Western White House last year, he assured me that he wanted to see it put into effect on a scale large enough and broad enough to give the concept of a fair and accurate test.

"Human Relations Secretary Jim Hall and those who work under him then prepared a comprehensive plan which would satisfy these objectives.

"Under our agreement with HEW, the project will register an estimate 58,000 welfare recipients, 30,000 of whom will be given work assignments during the first year. The kinds of community work projects they will be assigned to will range from schoolyard monitoring to the maintenance of park and recreation facilities. These community work activities will be limited to meeting only those genuine community needs which otherwise would go unmet for lack of funds and manpower.

"We are confident that these work activities will be considered by many welfare recipients as opportunities to help serve and improve their communities while they are waiting to get off welfare and move into regular jobs.

"I am deeply grateful to President Nixon, Vice President Agnew and Secretary Richardson for the efforts they have made to permit the project to go forward.

"I am convinced that the concept of community work experience by the able-bodied on welfare holds enormous promise for the future, not only in California but throughout the nation. It can reintroduce the principle of the work ethic to our way of life--a concept which, over the years, has made America the most productive and prosperous nation in the world.

"There is no question in my mind that this type of program must be considered an integral part of any approach to true welfare reform. We believe our program will bear out this view as the program proceeds in California during the months and years ahead."

March 7, 1972

Dictated by Bob Tuttle in Washington.

Senator Robert Dole, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, issued the following statement today.

"The position of the National Committee has always been, and remains the position stated on November 30, 1971 by Mr. R. L. (Dick) Herman, vice chairman of the arrangements committee for the 1972 Republican National Convention.

"Mr. Herman said at that time neither ITT nor its subsidiary, the Sheraton Corporation, has offered the Republican Party or the arrangements committee any money at all.

"I understand that an offer was made to the San Diego Civic Committee....however the arrangements committee feels that it would be improper to take such a disproportionate share of the Republican Party's convention needs from a single source."

Herman said, however, that ITT and Sheraton, like most major corporations, would be offered opportunities to advertise in the official convention program.

March 7, 1972

RE ITT CONTRIBUTION

The governor's understanding was based on inferences he drew from general conversations and newspaper accounts which gave him the impression that the local people in San Diego would reduce the Sheraton pledge to the city proportionately as other convention support came in. Whether or not that local support has yet reached the point where Sheraton's guarantee is no longer needed is a determination which San Diego Civic Committee must make.

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced the resignation of State Board of Education member Henry T. Gunderson.

In announcing the resignation, the governor said, "I wish to express my deep regret that Henry has found it necessary to resign from the board because of health.

"Henry has served with distinction since 1968. He has been a wise and effective president who has provided thoughtful and creative leadership during this period of hope and frustration in public education. Henry's contributions to education in California include service as president of the Board of Trustees of the San Jose Unified School District and president of the Board of Trustees of the San Jose City College. In addition, he has contributed significantly to the advance of the community college movement in California and to the growing recognition of the importance of occupational education for our children. It is my expectation and desire that Henry will be willing and able to return formally to a leadership role in California education in the near future. I know that he will, in any event, informally continue to provide counsel and stimulus in this field.

"I wish to take this opportunity to thank this exceptional public servant in the name of the people of California."

Governor Ronald Reagan today urged the Senate to act quickly on emergency legislation passed yesterday by the Assembly which would revise the state's new age of majority law to conform with the 1971 Welfare Reform Act.

Without swift passage, the educational support thousands of needy students are depending on is in jeopardy. He expressed the hope that Senator Anthony Beilenson, chairman of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee, would move immediately to assure that the entire Senate can vote on the measure without delay.

The welfare reform law specified that 18-through 20 year old students in the AFDC program making satisfactory progress in school, could continue to receive public assistance. However, the age of majority law which went into effect March 4 and granted 18-year-olds the right to vote, denies AFDC assistance to students 18 and over.

The emergency legislation which the governor called for March 1 amends the age of majority law so that these students can continue to receive the assistance they need to be able to carry on their education.

State Social Welfare Director Robert B. Carleson has asked county welfare directors to continue to receive and hold applications for the AFDC assistance in anticipation of swift legislative action. Notices of discontinuance of aid to those young people affected are being held until the latest possible time and they will not be sent if the Senate passes the remedial legislation by early next week.

However, it would seem that when a man finds he can no longer accept the philosophy or principles of a political party and he is unable to persuade that party to accept his, he should affiliate with a party more attuned to his own thinking."

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced that agreement had been reached with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare on funding arrangements to continue the Commission on Aging through fiscal 1972-73.

The negotiations, which have been underway for several months, involved the determination of the amount of credits for services provided, and the amount of cash which the state would need to continue to qualify this year for the $2,685,418 in federal funds under the Federal Older Americans Act.

The agreement concluded that the state could continue to qualify by providing $34,000 in services, and $69,000 in cash.

The agreement also settled the question of cash versus services which would be required to continue the program for the rest of the year. The governor directed that the necessary $45,000 in cash be made available from emergency funds.

"California has a larger percentage of the nation's older persons than any other state," the governor said.

"I am pleased that we have been able to arrange to continue this important program of assistance to our senior citizens."

Governor Ronald Reagan today urged citizens to join in the observation of National Parks Week (March 20-24) in California.

He called for the observance in connection with plans to commemorate the National Parks' centennial in California with a series of events centered in Fresno and the San Joaquin Valley near Sequoia, Yosemite and Kings Canyon National Parks.

These were the second, third, and fourth national parks established in the United States, preceded only by Yellowstone National Park, established in 1872 in Wyoming and Montana.

"California has played a significant role in the development of the park concept in the United States," Governor Reagan said.

He noted that Yosemite National Park, established by Congress in 1890, was originally a California State Park, set up in 1864 under an Act signed by President Lincoln. "This marked the beginning of the state park concept, not only in California but in the Nation," he said.

California now has five national parks, eight national monuments, two national historic sites, a national seashore, and a national recreation area.

"These scenic areas receive over 10 million visitors a year---tourists from all over the nation and the world. They are an excellent complement to our own State Park System of over 200 units and our many hundreds of local parks and outdoor recreation areas," the governor said.

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced his support of the Nixon Administration's policies and proposed legislation for the financing of the Corporation of Public Broadcasting which administers funds provided by Congress for the support of local public broadcasting stations.

The governor said that critics of the Corporation of Public Broadcasting have expressed concern over what appears to be a move towards centralized control of public broadcasting under the influence of the corporation, but the Nixon Administration's legislative goals are directed toward keeping the national public broadcasting system from becoming a government-run system, preserving the autonomy of the local stations while at the same time assuring a diversity of program sources for stations to draw on in addition to their own programs.

The administration has prepared legislation that would limit the corporation's funding for a one-year period during which time a serious study could be made of public broadcast structure and funding. Other bills introduced in Congress provide for continued long-term financing of public broadcasting, the governor pointed out.

In a letter to Dr. Clayton T. Whitehead, President Nixon's director of the Office of Telecommunications Policy, Governor Reagan said, "I support the administration's legislative proposal to the degree that it forestalls further development in a centrally controlled national public broadcast system and fosters the development of a nationwide public broadcasting system whose bedrock will be the strong, independent local station."

The governor's Educational Television Advisory Committee has also gone on record opposing a centrally controlled national public broadcast system.

Following is a statement attributable to a spokesman for the governor in response to Speaker Moretti's press conference remarks:

Mr. Moretti's allegation that the governor has had such a poll taken or that he is in possession of such a poll is an outright and unabashed lie.

If Mr. Moretti has any such poll it must be one that only he has access to since no such poll has been requested or presented to the governor. This bizarre availability of a poll to Mr. Moretti, if such is the case, in itself raises strong doubt about its credibility.

In calling attention to the gross failures of the Democratic leadership, its sad record, its do-nothingness and its continual foot-dragging on the people's business the governor has obviously touched a very sensitive nerve.

On the subject of polls, the governor does not know whether Mr. Moretti is in possession of any recent polls concerning the people's rating of the legislative leadership, but the governor thinks that the people of California might be very interested in the results.

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced a new state-wide program to rehabilitate state employees injured on the job and help them find their way back into the work force.

He announced the plan during a meeting with state agency and department heads at which he reported that his program for the reduction of on-the-job injuries has surpassed its 1971 goal.

The new program, which will become a part of the Governor's Program to Reduce Occupational Injuries, calls for the formation of return-to-work councils at state-wide facilities to deal with the problems of those employees whose injuries have forced them to remain off the job and those whose on-the-job injuries have led to permanent physical handicaps.

"This will provide another avenue for us to assist those state employees whose injuries or permanent physical handicaps have resulted in severe economic hardship on their families and often spells the end of the employee's working life in state service," he said.

The goal of the program to reduce occupational injuries in 1971 called for a 10 percent reduction in the number of work days lost because of the job-injuries.

In 1971, there were 683 fewer lost time injuries and the number of work days lost decreased by 21,598 compared with 1970, the first year of the program, the governor reported.

Since 1969, the year before the program was initiated, the rate of disabling injuries has been reduced by 21 percent; there were fewer than 809 lost time injuries and the number of work days lost decreased by 33,73

"In addition to the human anguish and the economic hardship this can cause state employees and their families, this record has resulted in a savings of more than $4 million to taxpayers," the governor said.

In announcing the results the governor paid tribute to Paul B. Cossaboon, who managed the program last year, to Robert Benjamin, the 1972 program manager, and Secretary of Agriculture and Services Earl Coke, cabinet coordinator of the program.

State Department of Social Welfare Director Robert Carleson
today issued the following statement:

"After a very quick review of the so-called report presented by Senator Beilenson, I find that it is nothing more than a rehash of the same charges made by Senator Beilenson as he started hearings of his personally created committee last November.

"In my appearances in those hearings, I submitted three separate documents and reports answering all of the points and demonstrating that the State Department of Social Welfare had been, in fact, implementing those sections of the Welfare Reform Act, over which we have responsibility and all of its facets as quickly as was humanly possible. In addition, I submitted to the committee copies of Attorney General's opinions refuting his charges that our regulations were illegal.

"I am very disappointed but not really surprised that virtually none of this material submitted by us has been included or referred to in the so-called report. I believe that Senator Beilenson and some other legislators who have been fighting real welfare reform from the start and who have done everything possible to obstruct this reform are now finding it impossible to explain to their supporters in welfare rights organizations and other groups why they were a party to the Welfare Reform Act. The Act is a good act. It is being administered and implemented properly. Some sections of the Reform Act which were rewritten by legislative staff members are in court. We hope that even these sections will survive court tests and will be effective.

"I am firmly convinced that neither Senator Beilenson nor most of the other legislative negotiators fully realized to what they were agreeing when they agreed to the Welfare Reform Act.

"Contrary to Senator Beilenson's claim, welfare reform has been successful, legal and has and will continue to result in tremendous savings to the taxpayer, notwithstanding some additional administrative costs borne by the counties and the state in order to meet last-minute and obviously confusing and conflicting court orders which as the law required had to be submitted to the counties by the State Department of Social Welfare."

"At the same time, the president is proposing bold steps to assure that every child will receive the best possible education."

Governor Ronald Reagan today issued the following statement:

"The California Supreme Court's denial of the attorney general's request for a rehearing on the court's capital punishment decision is extremely unfortunate although not unexpected.

"However, we intend to vigorously pursue our appeal before the U.S. Supreme Court.

"Both the appeal, and other efforts now underway to overturn the effect of the state court ruling by amending the constitution are based on our firm conviction that only the people themselves can and must make the ultimate decision on whether capital punishment is retained in California.

"We intend to do everything in our power to assure that the people themselves have the right to decide on this grave issue at the ballot box.

"As I have said before, I believe the state court's decision represents a lethal blow to society's right to protect itself against assassins and murderers.

"We dare not forget that the 107 persons now on death row in California are there because they were convicted in the courts of the most cruel and heinous crimes which can be committed against society.

"The outrageous cruelty and barbarism of their acts---which they perpetrated on their victims without the slightest degree of humanitarian concern or mercy---has resulted in the deaths of at least 166 men, women and children---including 14 policemen.

"The 107 convicted murderers and kidnappers sent to death row were arrested during their criminal careers for more than 500 felonies.

"Without the death penalty, there can be no ultimate sanctions against those murderers who would take, and take again, the lives of policemen and correctional officers whose sworn duty is to protect the law-abiding from the criminal.

"An overwhelming majority of our people believe that the death penalty is a deterrent to crime. I agree.

"It is the people who have established our constitution and our laws. We will not give up our fight to assure that the people have the last word on this issue of their own protection."

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced the formation of the Manpower Policy Task Force and charged it with the responsibility of developing a comprehensive manpower and job creation policy for the State of California.

In announcing his action, the governor made it clear that the task force would not engage in just another study.

While speaking to task force members at their initial meeting today, the governor said:

"The task force will be comprehensive and provide an in-depth analysis of all on-going programs in the areas of manpower and job creation. It will identify the critical elements in these fields and provide decision-making information for the administration.

"When we speak of manpower, we must think of the entire spectrum---jobs, employment, job training, employment demands, and job placement.

"Federal manpower programs have not solved the problems associated with manpower and employment because they have been largely a reactive or responsive mechanism to satisfy a particular crisis. The result has been a hodge-podge and proliferation of programs.

"Last year the U.S. Department of Labor spent approximately $500 million in California on more than 100 different programs. Until now, the state has been a manager of federally funded programs with tight categorical restrictions and little flexibility. About the only thing accomplished in the use of manpower during the past 30 years is to find out what does not work. With the formation of this task force, we plan to reverse the trend and find out what works."

James M. Hall, secretary of the Human Relations Agency, which includes the Department of Human Resources Development, said the state will cooperate fully with the task force.

"HRD, which is the state department most concerned with manpower and employment, and other state departments will contribute whatever is necessary to help the task force complete its assignment," Hall said.

"California is fortunate to be able to call upon the collective talents of a cross section of business, labor, professional, academic, and citizen leaders to man this task force. They have committed their personal time and expertise to seek creative solutions to the problems of manpower and employment.

Thomas Hamilton, member of the San Diego law firm of Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps, will be chairman of the task force. Other task force members include:

Robert Bell, president, Alliance Ventures, Inc., Los Angeles; Daniel P. Bryant, chairman and president, Bekins Company, Los Angeles; Ruben Castillo, Ruben's Engine Rebuilding, Los Angeles; David Chow, president, David Chow & Company, Inc., Los Angeles; Joseph T. Governor Ronald Reagan today announced he is proposing a new legislative program designed to relieve the financial burden on state employees who are required to wear a uniform as a condition of their employment. The State Personnel Board has estimated the cost of the program at $2 million.

The governor said Assembly Minority Leader Robert T. Monagan of Tracy, who made a major contribution in developing the program, will sponsor the enabling legislation.

Under the governor's proposal, the state would provide an annual uniform allowance of up to $150 and in addition would furnish all protective and safety equipment, including firearms. Some work clothing, worn to protect employees' regular attire, would also be provided.

"I am extremely pleased to make this announcement," the governor said, "because I have felt for some time that our state employees who have to wear uniforms deserve a special allowance. My only regret is that the state's financial problems have prevented us from making this proposal up to now.

"This is not to say that all of our fiscal problems have been solved. However, providing a uniform allowance, particularly for the state's law enforcement and correctional personnel, is something this administration has wanted to do for some time. I am happy that we can do it now."

Assemblyman Monagan, whose district includes the Deuel Vocational Institution at Tracy, said the State Board of Control will be required to establish a procedure to determine what articles of clothing are to be included in the uniform allowance.

"The board will also determine the average annual replacement cost for each type of uniform," Monagan said, "and annually review and adjust the allowances when necessary."

In addition, the board will:

--Determine when new employees will become eligible for a uniform allowance;

--Decide the need for changes in uniforms based on departmental requests, and;

--Determine what degree of need for identification is necessary to support a uniform requirement.

H. W. Sullivan, commissioner of the Highway Patrol, said the governor's proposal was "most appropriate and desirable at this time.

"The allowance will assist new officers coming into state service to be properly dressed and equipped. This will be an important factor in the morale of the entire department," Sullivan said.

Raymond K. Procunier, director of the Department of Corrections, also expressed his approval of the uniform allowance:

"Our correctional officers deserve this additional support. At present they have to purchase all uniforms and equipment with their own funds. The people of this state ask them to do a difficult and sensitive job, and it is only right that the state provide them with this basic assistance," Procunier said. "I certainly hope the legislature will act favorably on this legislation."

Monagan said he would request an early hearing on his bill when the legislature returns from its Easter recess.

Acting Governor Ed Reinecke today sought to ease the plight of victims of heavy rains and flooding last January in California's North Coast Counties by declaring a state of emergency in Humboldt County and requesting President Nixon to declare both Humboldt and Del Norte Counties as major disaster areas, opening the way for federal disaster relief.

Governor Ronald Reagan had declared Del Norte County in a state of emergency on March 1, 1972.

In his request to President Nixon, Reinecke said damage due to heavy winds, rain, flooding and mud and silt slides had caused more than $5.5 million damage in the two counties. Restoration work costs were set at $6,817,618.

Damage to private property in Del Norte County was estimated at more than $380,000. Damage to public property, including highways and utilities, was set at $1.92 million in the same county.

Humboldt County reported damage to private property at $1.19 million and public property damage at $1.88 million.

Reinecke said damage to state highways alone in the two counties totaled more than $1,424,000.

A Presidential declaration of the two counties as major disaster areas would provide more than $2 million in federal assistance.

In his request Reinecke noted that all available state and local resources have been used in carrying out disaster operations in accordance with existing Mutual Aid agreements. Primary assistance was provided by the State Office of Emergency Services, State Department of Fish and Game, State Department of Public Health, and Division of Highways.

The state of emergency declaration for Humboldt County was sought by that county's Board of Supervisors.
