Governor Ronald Reagan today announced "with a great deal of regret" that he has accepted the resignation of his assistant legal affairs secretary Richard K. Turner.

Turner, 34, a native of Bakersfield, will enter private practice in Sacramento.

"Dick Turner's contribution to the success of this administration has been considerable," Governor Reagan said, "and it is with a great deal of regret that I have accepted his resignation. I have relied upon his keen legal judgment from the first day he came with us, and his counsel will be sorely missed.

"I am confident he will have an outstanding career in private practice and he has my deep appreciation and every good wish for the future."

Turner joined the governor's legal affairs office in 1969. Prior to his appointment he was a member of the state attorney general's staff for six years and was chief attorney for the California Highway Patrol.

He received a B.A. degree in political science from Stanford University in 1960, and his law degree from the University of California's Boalt Hall in 1963.

In his letter of resignation Turner said: "I will always be grateful to Governor Reagan for giving me the opportunity to serve the people of California. My tenure in the governor's office will always be a source of great personal satisfaction."

His position involved providing legal advice to the governor on all official matters, liaison with all law enforcement agencies on behalf of the governor, and development of the governor's policy on criminal justice. He was also responsible for emergency operations in which the state is involved such as riots or disturbances and major natural disasters.

Turner and his wife Robin have two minor children. They make their home at 2740 Montgomery Way in Sacramento.

MEMO TO NEWSMEN: Full details of the following revenue control and tax reduction program being proposed by Governor Reagan will be presented at a background press briefing in the governor's office today, Thursday, February 8, at 2 p.m. In line with the background briefing policy which has been long established by this office in connection with the budget and other Reports to the People, we are asking that no film cameras or broadcast tape recorders be used during the briefing itself. However, following the briefing, radio and television newsmen who wish to film and record interviews with members of the briefing team are invited to do so.

Governor Ronald Reagan today proposed a long-term and far-reaching program to reduce state taxes by imposing a constitutional control on the total amount of state revenues which California state government can take from the people in taxes in the years ahead.

The governor outlined his plan---which also includes a permanent, ongoing 10 percent slash in state income taxes beginning in calendar 1974---in a radio and television "Report to the People" scheduled for broadcast this evening.

He said he will ask the legislature to place major elements of the proposal on the ballot to be voted on by the people at a statewide election later this year. If the legislature does not agree to the constitutional amendment, the governor will head a petition drive to place the plan on the ballot by initiative.

The overall program, first of its type to be proposed by any governor, proposes a return of the great bulk of the state's $850 million surplus to the people by means of a tax credit on this year's income and a delay in the one cent sales tax increase which is slated to go into effect June 1. A lesser portion of the surplus would be set aside for one-time construction projects such as making the State Capitol Building earthquake safe. Returning the surplus to the people can be accomplished by the legislature during the current session.

The governor said that stringent economies in the management in state government, more economical operation of the state's welfare and Medi-Cal programs, and an upturn in the California economy, have made possible the permanent 10 percent across-the-board reduction in the state income tax he is proposing. It would be included in the constitutional amendment to be voted on by the people.

Report to the People

The most striking and far-reaching element of the overall program would be the imposition of a constitutional limit on the percentage of total personal income which state government can take from the people in the years ahead. This also would be accomplished by constitutional amendment or initiative.

State revenues are projected to go up from the current $9.8 billion to $47 billion 15 years from now, five times the current level. The "revenue control" function which the program would achieve would gradually reduce the 8.75 percent of total state revenues which the state presently takes down to 7.15 percent in 1989---a reduction of almost 20 percent in the state tax burden.

Thus, after 15 years, state government would be taking in little more than half ($27 billion) of the revenues it would be consuming without the constitutional limitation on revenues.

The almost 20 percent reduction in state taxes which would occur during the 15-year period is nearly equivalent to the entire income tax now received by the state.

But, over the same period, the state will continue to experience generous revenue growth to meet essential needs. In fact, the total revenues of the state will have climbed nearly three times above the present level ($9.3 billion) in 1989, if present economic growth trends continue.

To meet any possible severe economic downturns or natural disasters in the years ahead, the governor's plan provides a continuing emergency fund amounting to up to 4 percent of the budget of any given year.

- - - - -

Here is the text of Governor Reagan's televised Report to the People

"I'm quite sure you already know the state will have a one-time surplus of $850 million at the end of the fiscal year. This has been made possible by stringent economies in the management of state government, by savings realized from the welfare and Medi-Cal reforms, the upturn in business and federal revenue sharing. But whatever the reasons, it is taxpayers' money and it should be returned to you the taxpayer.

"We therefore are proposing a comprehensive program of revenue control and tax reduction. First, with regard to the one-time surplus, we think it should be used in part to delay the increase in the sales tax now slated for June 1. The bulk of the remainder should be given to you as a rebate on the income tax you owe in 1974. You will simply deduct a percentage of your tax and put it back in your pocket. A lesser portion of the surplus will be set aside for one-time construction projects such as making the Capitol Building earthquake safe.

"That takes care of the one-time surplus. But, in addition, our economies have made possible a permanent ongoing tax cut. We propose a 10 percent across-the-board reduction in the state income tax.

"And finally, we are proposing a long-term reduction of the state tax burden and a constitutional limit on the percentage of the people's income that can be ever taken by government. This, of course, means that you will vote on this proposal since it involves a constitutional amendment.

"State revenues are projected to go up from a current $9.8 billion to $47 billion in 1989. If nothing is done to curb this, the state budget in 15 years will be five times its present size.

"Before 1930, federal, state and local governments were taking 15 cents out of every dollar you earned. By 1950 it was 30 cents.

"Today government's share of every dollar you earn is more than 43 cents. Obviously freedom itself is in danger if we continue this rate of increase. The state is presently taking more than 8½ cents from each dollar you earn. In addition to the return of the surplus, and the 10 percent income tax cut, we are asking you to vote an annual reduction of that 8½ percent until at the end of 15 years it has been reduced to approximately 7 cents, thus limiting the total amount state government can ever take in taxes. This amounts to a reduction in your total state taxes of almost 20 percent over a 15-year period. That is almost the equivalent of wiping out the entire present state income tax and yet the state will still have nearly three times as much revenue as it has now to meet the problems of growth.

"In the next few weeks, as soon as the constitutional language can be written, this proposal will be submitted to the legislature with a request that they approve putting it on the ballot at which time I will call a special election. In the meantime, you will be given full information on all the details of this entire plan."

Report to the People

Here are some prepared comments of noted tax experts and economists on the governor's program:

--CRAIG STUBBLEBINE, Ph.D., PROFESSOR OF ECONOMICS, CLAREMONT MEN'S COLLEGE, CLAREMONT GRADUATE SCHOOL CALIFORNIA:

"A constitutional initiative imposing strict limits on the taxation of personal income and wealth is a direct and effective avenue by which Californians may register their preferences with respect to state spending. Should this initiative pass, Californians may look forward to a progressive reduction in the burden of state taxation."

--WILLIAM A. NISKANEN, Ph.D., PROFESSOR, GRADUATE SCHOOL OF PUBLIC POLICY, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, BERKELEY:

"The proposed tax limit amendment represents a fundamental change in the way we conduct our public business in the State of California. Our present governmental processes do not serve us very well, primarily because our elected representatives and public officials have an incentive to spend more for government activities than is valued by the population. The proposed tax limit amendment is based on an assumption that the voters in California have the intelligence, information and the right to determine the total state tax revenues."

--C. LOWELL HARRISS, Ph.D., PROFESSOR OF ECONOMICS, COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY, NEW YORK:

"One of the greatest needs in American government today is control of the growth of spending. The tax limitation plan that Governor Reagan has proposed for California seems to me to offer a unique and valuable opportunity for citizen participation in the spending/taxation process."

--MILTON FRIEDMAN, Ph.D., PROFESSOR OF ECONOMICS, UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO:

"All attempts to keep down government spending and taxes by controlling individual programs have failed--defeated by a coalition of special interests attached to specific programs. The only hope of meeting the public's demands for an effective lid on spending is by tackling the budget as a whole, rather than piecemeal. The governor's proposed tax and spending ceiling to be included in the Constitution is an imaginative venture in this direction. It provides for expenditure control responsibly, allowing for growth in the state's economy, for emergencies, and for a gradual transition to a lower relative level."

"The governor's proposal has an importance that extends far beyond California. It will offer a beacon to every other state and to the federal government. Citizens throughout the land are coming to recognize that they are not getting their money's worth for the 40 percent of their income that is being spent for them by governmental units, federal state and local. They are demanding that they be permitted to keep more of their own income to spend in accordance with their own values. California may show them how to achieve this objective."

--ROGER FREEMAN, Ph.D., SENIOR FELLOW, THE HOOVER INSTITUTION:

"Governor Reagan's plan to reverse the trend of ever-increasing tax burden and of a continuous and limitless expansion of governmental spending and to reduce the tax load gradually over the next few years is excellent. I expect it to be received with enthusiasm by the citizens and taxpayers of California. In fact, I feel that California may in this be setting a precedent and example for the entire nation. Residents of other states may soon be clamoring for comparable relief from exorbitant tax bills."

"I believe that the approach used by Governor Reagan--to reduce the tax burden in small annual steps and to relate the tax limit to the personal income of our citizens--is the only practicable approach to implement it."

--MARTIN ANDERSON, Ph.D., SENIOR FELLOW, THE HOOVER INSTITUTION:

"The governor's plan offers the people of California a clear opportunity to not only stop the increasing tax burden, but also to reverse it. It is a truly innovative, eminently sensible tax reform plan. If the people of California accept it--and I think they will--it will mean more money in the pockets of Californians to be spent for things they personally value and less money for government bureaucrats to dissipate.

"We are now at the point where government spending has become so wild and exuberant that it will only be controlled by restricting the flow of tax money into the government coffers. The governor's plan is a rational way to restrict this flow gradually and may be the only viable alternative to keep us from a future fiscal crisis that could severely damage each and every one of us."

--JAMES BUCHANAN, Ph.D., DIRECTOR OF THE CENTER FOR PUBLIC CHOICE, VIRGINIA POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE:

"Unfortunately, evidence accumulates that legislatures respond largely to the pressures of the entrenched government bureaucracy, rather than to the public at large. Until the legislature is forced by constitutional restriction to face up to the conflicts between the interest of the citizens and that of the bureaucracy, they will continue to take the route of least resistance. This has been, until now, that of allowing government budgets and taxes to continue to grow. I applaud the initiative taken by Governor Reagan of California in attempting to resolve this major problem."

--PETER DRUCKER, Ph.D., MANAGEMENT CONSULTANT, MEMBER OF THE FACULTY OF CLAREMONT MEN'S COLLEGE GRADUATE SCHOOL, CLAREMONT:

"A legislature needs an absolute ceiling on the tax dollars which it receives, so that it can get about the business of setting priorities. Otherwise, legislators can't and won't say 'no' to spending proposals. This is the objective reality of our time."

--DAN THROOP SMITH, SENIOR RESEARCH FELLOW AT THE HOOVER INSTITUTION, AND LECTURER AT GRADUATE SCHOOL OF BUSINESS, STANFORD UNIVERSITY:

"Governor Reagan's proposal will provide a basis for more rational use of state funds and should assure the development of better programs. It should set a precedent for other states. Its adoption in California should help to assure the success of the efforts now being made in Washington to limit federal expenditures."

MAJOR FEATURES OF THE GOVERNOR'S REVENUE CONTROL AND TAX REDUCTION PROGRAM.

1. REVENUE LIMITATION

State tax revenues, except federal intergovernmental transfers, employment insurance trusts, and excluded user fees, shall be limited to that percentage of state personal income derived from dividing the 1973-74 tax revenues by the 1973 state personal income.

2. TAX REDUCTION

The maximum allowable percentage of state personal income which the state may take as tax revenues in 1974-75 and succeeding years shall be reduced by 0.1 percent per year, except that if the allowable percentage would produce less in revenues in a given year than 360 constant (1967) dollars times that year's Consumer Price Index deflator times the state population, the constant dollar limit amount may be used. Upon determination of the tax limit for the prospective year, the legislature shall adjust the tax rates so as to produce a level of revenues no greater than the limit, except as provided in the Emergency Fund section below.

3. EMERGENCY PROVISIONS

(a) Emergency Fund

The state shall create and maintain an Emergency Fund in an amount not to exceed 0.2 percent of state personal income. The fund may be appropriated by the legislature to meet emergency needs due to economic, natural or other disaster outside the control of the legislature and which result in costs exceeding the tax limitation. After exhausting permissible internal borrowing and federal emergency funds which may be available, the Emergency Fund may be utilized upon declaration by the governor of the existence within the state of California of a fiscal emergency, such declaration being concurred in by a 2/3 vote of both houses of the legislature. The Emergency Fund shall be created initially out of tax revenues received by the state which are in excess of the tax limit and shall be re-created each year either through carry-over of the preceding year's Emergency Fund or by tax revenues in excess of the limit for that year. Before the legislature adjusts the tax rates, the Emergency Fund shall be created, or re-created in the event that all or part of its funds have been consumed.

(b) "Safety Valve" - Vote of the People.

Upon exhaustion of the resources available in the Emergency Fund, and if the fiscal emergency continues, the legislature may, by a 2/3 vote, with the concurrence of the governor, impose a specific tax increase for a specific state purpose, required to meet the existing fiscal emergency. Such tax increase shall remain in effect no longer than the date of the next regular statewide election, unless an extension beyond that date is adopted through a vote of the people at such regular Statewide election.

4. SPECIAL TAX LIMITATION INCREASE

The legislature may, by a 2/3 vote, place on the ballot for the vote of the people a referendum proposal to defer the annual decrease in the tax limit or to increase the tax limit, which shall be for a specific purpose and shall involve the increase of a specific tax. If the referendum is approved by the voters, the tax limit level then in effect shall be increased only by the amount specified in such proposal.

5. LIMIT COMPUTATION.

Estimates of State personal income and revenue limitation shall be made by an Economic Estimate Commission, consisting of the State Controller (Chairman), the Legislative Analyst and the Director of Finance. They shall consult with recognized professional economists. Estimates shall be produced and published by the Commission on October 1 and April 1 of each year for that fiscal year and the succeeding fiscal year. Any surplus for a given fiscal year shall be determined and published by the Commission, based upon actual revenue and total personal income data, on August 1 following the close of that fiscal year.

6. LOCAL GOVERNMENT TAX LIMITS

The provisions of Chapter 1.5, Part 4, Division 1, of the Revenue and Taxation Code, with the exception of Section 2164.3, shall be incorporated in the initiative.

7. INTERGOVERNMENTAL COORDINATION OF THE LIMIT

The tax limit may be raised by action of the legislature if the State increases expenditures as required by Federal law or court action to take over a local function, in which event local taxes shall be reduced dollar-for-dollar. The revenue limitation shall be lowered if the state reduces expenditures when required by federal law or court action to transfer a function to the Federal Government.

8. TAX INCREASES

No State tax may be increased if such increase will produce revenues in excess of the revenue limitation. The increase of any State tax within the limitation shall require a 2/3 vote of the Legislature and approval of the Governor. A 2/3 vote of the Legislature shall be required to override a Governor's veto of a tax increase.

9. TAX SURPLUS FUND

The State shall create a Tax Surplus Fund for any surplus of revenue over expenditures and/or any surplus of revenues over the revenue limitation within a given year. The Tax Surplus Fund shall be used first to replenish the Emergency Fund, if necessary, and then only to refund the remaining surplus to the people or decrease tax rates, as determined by the Legislature with the concurrence of the Governor.

Governor Ronald Reagan today amended his January 30 request asking President Nixon to declare disaster areas in three California jurisdictions, to include Solano and Santa Barbara Counties.

In proclaiming a state of emergency in these counties today Governor Reagan said that flooding, wind storms, and unusually high tides in January have depleted all available state and local resources in carrying out disaster operations according to mutual aid agreements.

State assistance has been provided by the Office of Emergency Services, Department of Water Resources, Department of Fish and Game, Department of Public Health, the Division of Highways, and the Office of Architecture and Construction.

The total damage, both public and private, amounts to an estimated $681,356 in Solano County and $490,664 in Santa Barbara County.

State Finance Director Verne Orr today revealed that he would not further press the University of California to study the plan to consolidate research libraries in Northern and Southern California.

"Although the final draft of the plan has not even been written," Orr said, "the University expressed so many reservations about cooperation that it would be pointless to ask them to continue working on it."

Among other objections, University officials stated that the plan would constitute an infringement on their immunity under the Constitution of California.

On the contrary, Orr noted, Chancellor of the State University and Colleges Glenn S. Dumke and his Vice Chancellor Harry Brakebill expressed enthusiasm for the plan and volunteered their full cooperation to see that it became successful. Orr indicated that further effort at consolidation in both Northern and Southern California would be confined to working with the California State University and Colleges System.

The Director of Finance further revealed that his office and the governor's office were working on the outline of a plan to tie participating independent colleges and universities into the computerized California State University and Colleges library network.

"Under the plan as we envision it," said Orr, "any private college or university which wished to join the system would have a computer terminal installed in its library by the state with all computer expenses paid. Students at the participating private colleges and universities could then request acquisition of books from the California State University and Colleges library and have them delivered the following day."

In return, the plan would require that private colleges and universities who chose to enter the network would place on the computer net a listing of all their books. Students at the California State University and Colleges would thus have available to them the entire library resources of every participating private college and university, vastly augmenting material which is now available to students at public institutions.

"We hope to have this plan in form to present to the legislature with the 1974-5 budget," the Finance Director noted.

Orr further stated that some near-hysterical stories of the proposed consolidation of research facilities envision thousands of students busing from one campus to another daily. "Such stories would be humorous if it were not that they were apparently written in good faith and total ignorance," according to Orr.

The proposed consolidation does not anticipate any mass busing of students nor even the transport of tremendous numbers of volumes.

Department of Finance auditors, in a study of several libraries in higher education, found that almost one-half of the books on the shelves were neither circulated nor used within the library once in twenty years.

"We feel that this material could be consolidated, duplication reduced, and substantial economies achieved," said Orr. A professor doing research or a doctoral candidate might find it necessary to visit the central research library, but the vast majority of volumes utilized by undergraduates would not be relocated and few undergraduate students would need to go to the central research library for material.

California State University libraries at Los Angeles and San Francisco are substantially smaller than their counterparts in the University System, according to Orr. However, he indicated that the transfer of little used materials to these libraries would increase the number of volumes and that the Department of Finance might propose to the legislature augmented funding over the next few years to improve the availability of scarce material on the computer network.

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced that he has regretfully accepted the resignation of Edgar M. Gillenwaters, director of the California Department of Commerce, effective March 1.

"Ed Gillenwaters has made a tremendous contribution to the State of California for more than six years in a number of demanding assignments," Governor Reagan said.

"As director of the Department of Commerce, he drafted and put into operation an ambitious range of programs to assure the balanced economic development California must have to provide expanded job opportunities for our people."

"He was active in organizing the California Space Shuttle Task Force in its successful efforts to obtain this important program for the California aerospace industry."

Gillenwaters, 40, will become vice president and director of Sports Medicine Institute, Inc., a new non-profit foundation that will specialize in research, education, and medical programs for the prevention and treatment of athletic injuries. The foundation, being developed by medical and sports world figures, including team owners, players, managers, educators, and business interests involved in athletics, will be located initially at Centinella Hospital in Inglewood.

"Although we regret losing a very capable and talented administrator," Governor Reagan said, "Ed has our best wishes as he undertakes a challenging and exciting new venture that can have a great and beneficial impact on the world of athletics and medicine."

The Department of Commerce includes the Divisions of Business and Industry Development, Tourism Industry Development and International Trade, the California Commission for Economic Development, Council of Product Design and Marketing, and the California Museum of Science and Industry.

Gillenwaters was one of Governor Reagan's first appointees in 1966. As deputy director of the Department of Finance, he served as the state of California's Washington representative, acting as liaison with the White House and Congress.

He became assistant to the governor for Intergovernmental Relations in 1970, and in 1971 he was appointed director of the Department of Commerce and supervised its reorganization.
