Lieutenant Governor Ed Reinecke today announced that the federal government will not strictly enforce the mandatory fuel allocation program in California during the remainder of November but it will be in full effect beginning December 1.

Reinecke received the change in federal plans from Marmaduke Ligon, director of the Division of Oil and Gas in the Department of the Interior. Ligon said in a statement to Reinecke:

"Because of the unique seasonal variations between the months of November, 1972 and November, 1973, in California, the mandatory allocation program for middle distillate fuels within this state only, will not be strictly enforced.

"All suppliers and wholesalers will be held harmless from strict compliance through the balance of November. During this transitional period, all suppliers, wholesalers and users will be expected to take a common sense approach in dealing with voluntary allocations and to use restraint in the consumption of these critical fuels.

"Mandatory allocations, however, will go into full force and effect in California on December 1, 1973."

Reinecke sent telegrams Thursday to President Nixon and Governor John Love, director and assistant to the President in the Energy Policy Office.

He requested that a moratorium be immediately declared on the mandatory allocation program for middle distillate fuels for the month of November. He also made the request in a telephone conversation with Fred Bensen, Love's assistant.

"I am extremely pleased with the federal action in this matter," Reinecke said. "If the allocation program had gone into effect as originally announced, agriculture in California would have come to a near standstill.

"We will continue working with the Energy Policy Office to assure that California agriculture will have sufficient fuel to meet its needs."

Reinecke is chairman of the State Energy Planning Council.

Governor Ronald Reagan today warned that "if Proposition 1 fails, politicians who feel taxes aren't high enough will pass nearly $2.3
billion in new spending bills" next year.

He said this will occur because the "big spending politicians will feel they have a mandate for greater spending.

"Taxes will again skyrocket if Proposition 1 doesn't pass," the governor added.

In a statement the governor said:

"I have fulfilled my promise of 13 months ago. Tomorrow, Californians will have a chance to vote themselves a tax cut.

"But they may not do so because they are being confused by the massive, big lie technique of those opposing Proposition 1. The latest poll shows that two-thirds of the people who say they will vote against Proposition 1 are doing so because they think it will raise their taxes.

"I want to assure every voter that Proposition 1 cannot and will not raise their taxes. Indeed, it prohibits their taxes from ever going up faster than their income without their permission.

"It is a Taxpayer Bill of Rights.

"The biggest lie of all is the assertion that local taxes will increase because of Proposition 1. That is false. The Proposition absolutely prohibits local tax rates from increasing without the consent of the people.

"There is one thing certain: taxes will increase quickly and much more rapidly even than they do now if Proposition 1 fails.

"Here is the clear proof of that assertion:

"Pending right now before the legislature are billions of dollars in spending bills just waiting for Proposition 1 to fail. A few of the opponents and their spending plans are:

Senator Moscone: $1.631 billion in additional spending.

Assemblyman Burton: $356 million;

Speaker Moretti: $300 million.

"Thus, if Proposition 1 fails, these and many other spending bills will be passed in short order by politicians who feel that taxes aren't high enough. Without Proposition 1, it will be very difficult for me to make my vetoes of these bills stick because the politicians will feel they have a mandate for greater spending. Taxes will again skyrocket.

"There is only one way taxpayers can protect themselves from more expenditures, bigger government, and much, much higher taxes. That is to vote 'YES' on Proposition 1 tomorrow."

Governor Ronald Reagan today issued the following statement:

"Today I fulfilled my promise to give the people a chance to vote themselves a tax cut, and a limit on the percentage of their earnings the state could take from them.

"My fellow Californians have responded---some at the ballot box, some by staying home.

"They have opposed the proposition.

"This does not change the fact that the present tax burden is too high and is increasing too rapidly, and that it should not continue to rise faster than the people's earnings. But those who were concerned enough to vote today evidently felt Proposition 1 was not the solution. Perhaps some felt that it should not be in the Constitution; or that local taxes might somehow be increased, and the burden shifted to local government. This, of course, was untrue but those who led and financed the campaign against Proposition 1 effectively exploited these concerns without ever having to admit or explain their basic purpose; which is to retain unlimited taxing authority while increasing public spending and the size of government.

"One benefit at least has resulted from Proposition 1---putting it on the ballot forced the legislature to give $800 million surplus back to the taxpayers.

"Naturally I wish we could have won, but I do not regret the attempt we made.

"I look upon this campaign as a first step in alerting the people to the incredible rate of government growth, and the speed with which the tax burden is increasing faster than the income of our citizens. The effort was timely and worthwhile. We can all take pride in what has been accomplished, and we must now direct our efforts at further progress toward tax reduction.

"I am, of course, disappointed. I wish the basic philosophical issues could have been more clearly drawn without the distracting, irrelevant and confusing play on human fears and the basic emotions of the people.

"But we will look ahead. There can be no recount, no reassessment, no unproductive exchange of recriminations.

"I shall continue to seize every opportunity to hold down spending, the size of government and the taxpayers' burden.

"We will just have to try harder."

Governor Ronald Reagan today offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the murder of Oakland School Superintendent Marcus Foster.

Foster, a 50-year-old educator who came to Oakland in 1970, and his deputy superintendent Robert Blackburn were gunned down in an Oakland parking lot Tuesday evening. Blackburn remains in critical condition at this writing.

Governor Reagan offered the reward under provisions of the state Penal Code.

"I am shocked and saddened over this vicious attack and the resulting tragedy," Governor Reagan said.

"Marcus Foster was an outstanding man in the midst of a brilliant career. I am confident that if this tragedy had not occurred, he would have received national recognition as one of our country's leading educators.

"He was a 'no nonsense' type individual whose main purpose in life was to improve the quality of education for all children. His loss will be felt by present and future students in Oakland, by California and the entire educational community.

"Mrs. Reagan and I extend our sincere sympathies to his wife and children. We join all Californians in mourning his death."

Governor Ronald Reagan today reluctantly accepted the resignation of his press secretary, Ed Gray, who is leaving the administration to become vice president of one of the state's largest financial institutions the San Diego Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Gray, 38, has been a key member of the governor's staff since November, 1967. He joined the administration as assistant press secretary was promoted in 1968 to associate press secretary, and was again promoted to press secretary to the governor in March, 1972.

During his six years on the governor's staff, Gray has drafted most of the governor's important public policy statements, including major messages to the legislature on welfare reform, revenue control and tax reduction, the budget, consumer protection, environmental protection, as well as many veto messages.

As press secretary, Gray has served as the governor's chief spokesman and representative with the press, including working newsmen throughout the state, newspaper publishers, editors and radio and television general managers.

Governor Reagan said he was accepting Gray's resignation reluctantly and with mixed emotions. "Early in 1972, Ed was about to accept an offer from the same firm, but we managed to talk him out of it and keep him on the staff as the governor's press secretary," the governor said.

"I regret that he is now leaving, but I understand his desire to renew his career in business. Like most members of this administration, he never planned to make state government a career.

"Ed Gray, through his outstanding performance, his energy and dedication to the goals of this administration, has earned the respect and admiration of all of us who have worked so closely with him during these past six years. We will miss him and his talents very much.

"At the same time, I am pleased and proud that his abilities have been recognized outside government and I know he will continue his outstanding performance in his important new job in the private sector. I wish him every success in the future," the governor said.

Gray called his years on the governor's staff "the opportunity of a lifetime, an incomparable experience and one for which I will always be immensely proud and deeply grateful. Ronald Reagan is the finest boss anyone could ever have and the greatest governor California has ever had," Gray said. Gray's resignation is effective tomorrow, November 16.

A graduate of Modesto High School and Fresno State College, Gray was a member of the public relations staff of Pacific Telephone before joining the Reagan administration.

He previously worked as a staff writer and day news editor in the Madrid, Spain bureau of United Press International from 1961-63, and was a newsman at radio station KMJ, Fresno, from 1957-60.

A successor will be named shortly.

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced the appointment of Clyde Walthall as his press secretary.

Walthall, 46, who has been the governor's associate press secretary since March of 1972, succeeds Ed Gray. Gray has resigned to become a vice president of the San Diego Federal Savings and Loan Association.

The appointment is effective immediately.

Walthall served as press secretary to former Assembly Speaker Bob Monagan (1969-70) and was an assistant to the secretary of the Human Relations Agency (now the Health and Welfare Agency) in 1971-72.

He came to Sacramento in 1967 as the administrative assistant to Assembly Minority Caucus.

Educated at Coffeyville, Kansas Junior College and the University of Kansas, Walthall was managing editor of the Coffeyville Daily Journal and sports director of radio station KGGF in Coffeyville (1952-62). He also was managing editor of the Grand Island, Nebraska Daily Independent (1963) and was an editorial writer for the Oakland Tribune (1964-67).

He is a former director of the Kansas Press Association and a past president of the association's third district.

Walthall and his wife Lucille have a 14-year-old son. They make their home in Sacramento. He will receive an annual salary of $32,256.

Governor Ronald Reagan today issued the following Thanksgiving

Day message:

"As we pause on this special day to give thanks for our individual blessings, we may also thank God that our nation is at peace, that the fiber of our country remains strong, and that the chances for a lasting peace are enhanced by the spirit of Thanksgiving.

"When we as a people bow our heads and offer thanks to the Creator for the good that is ours, peace becomes more precious and our resolve is strengthened.

"We may be thankful that the spirit of Thanksgiving abounds today as it did in the hearts of the Pilgrims. They faced almost unbelievable hardships, but they would not be defeated because they believed in themselves and what they were doing. Yet, they were grateful to God for his guidance and benevolence.

"May it ever be so in our great country."

The California Pollution Control Financing Authority has given initial authorization for issuance of $31,234,000 in additional bonds for pollution control in California, Authority Chairman Verne Orr announced today. (The action was taken at the Authority's regular meeting November 27).

Orr, who is director of the state's Department of Finance and a member of Governor Reagan's Cabinet, said the new authorization brings the total of bonds initially authorized by the Authority to $180,173,000. They will be distributed among 15 industrial firms in California.

The revenue bonds are issued by private industry with approval of the Authority under the terms of Proposition 3 approved by the voters in November, 1972.

Purpose of the program is to alleviate pollution problems ordered corrected by local authorities.

The major portion of the Authority's authorization, $125,176,000 has been on behalf of energy producing firms such as utility and oil companies. Acting Governor Ed Reinecke today announced the appointment of John A. Maga as Deputy Secretary of the Resources Agency.

Maga, 57, executive officer of the state Air Resources Board, has 30 years of experience with state agencies in the environmental field. He is a Republican.

He is a 1938 graduate of the University of California at Berkeley with a B.S. degree in civil engineering, and he earned an M.S. degree in sanitary engineering from University of California in 1953. He did graduate work in meteorology at the U.S. Naval Academy Postgraduate School in 1945.

Maga entered the employment of the state in 1940 with the Department of Fish and Game, where his work concerned water pollution control. Except for three years' service with the U.S. Navy, he has been involved in California environmental matters ever since.

In 1948, Maga moved to the state Department of Public Health and assumed duties concerning water supply and pollution, solid waste, and mosquito control.

He became chief of the bureau of air sanitation within the Department of Public Health in 1955, and organized and staffed the bureau. Under his direction, the department established the first air quality and motor vehicle emission standards in the United States.

Since 1968 Maga has been the top administrative employee of the Air Resources Board, the state agency responsible for air pollution control. As Deputy Secretary of the Resources Agency, he will receive an annual salary of $33,960.

Norman B. Livermore, Jr., Secretary of the Resources Agency and a member of the governor's cabinet, said he was very pleased with the appointment of Maga.

"We are fortunate to have a man with the broad environmental background of John Maga," Secretary Livermore said. "He has extensive experience in appearing before federal, state and local legislative bodies on air pollution problems and legislation.

Maga, a registered engineer, is a member of the Air Pollution Control Association, American Society of Civil Engineers, American Academy of Environmental Engineers, California Water Pollution Control Association, and the American Water Works Association.

Maga and his wife, Mary, have two children.

Maga replaces Ford B. Ford, who was appointed chairman of the newly established Occupational Safety and Health Appeals Board. Maga will assume his new position in mid-December.

California's Foster Grandparent Program is going overseas, thanks to Mrs. Ronald Reagan.

Mrs. Reagan, who is accompanying Governor Reagan on a trip to Australia, Indonesia and Singapore to promote U.S. exports, has interested a member of the Victoria state government in the Foster Grandparent Program as it is conducted in California.

During a question and answer session in Melbourne, which included Victoria's Minister for Youth, Sports and Recreation, Bryan Dixon, Mrs. Reagan explained how the Foster Grandparent Program was benefiting both senior citizens and children in California.

Dixon has since announced that Victoria should consider the program and has requested detailed information so that it might be studied by the state's departments of health and social education.

Mrs. Leslie (Betty) Miller, state director of the program in the Department of Health, is sending details of the program.

"I think it is marvelous that the Victoria government is interested in the Foster Grandparent Program," Mrs. Miller said. "It provides a wide range of activities that help keep senior citizens active, and because of their experience and wisdom thousands of youngsters have been helped. I'm sure the program could be as successful in Victoria as it is in California."

The Foster Grandparent Program, supported by a $1.25 million budget provided by the federal government and the state on a 65-35 funding basis, is in operation at nine of the state hospitals, along with various juvenile halls and day care centers.

Youths who are hospital patients, including the mentally retarded, along with problem children under the care of juvenile hall, are visited by the more than 800 foster grandparents active in California.

According to Mrs. Miller, "the 'grandparents' perform those functions that many grandparents do for and with their grandchildren."

The foster grandparent is paid $1.60 an hour, receives $1 a day for transportation and a hot meal. They are limited to four hours of work a day and are given an annual physical. Each grandparent is limited to two or three children.

The program began at Pacific State Hospital in Pomona in 1967 and has been operational on a statewide basis since 1972.
