Governor Ronald Reagan today made the following statement with regard to Tuesday's election:

"I am disappointed at the overall outcome of Tuesday's election, but I am far from being disheartened. The Republican Party is still the party of the future.

"I look forward to seeing those programs that will be put forward by the Democratic-controlled statehouses and the Congress. The people are obviously concerned about inflation. I see nothing in the results of the election that would encourage anything other than balanced budgets and fiscal responsibility."

Governor Ronald Reagan today issued the following statement:

"We are here today to announce a project pertaining to the continued preservation and maintenance of the quality of California's lakes and reservoirs. It is of particular interest because our water resources have been an enduring concern.

"We justifiably take great pride in our lakes. They are some of the nation's finest, cleanest, and most distinct. And we believe we have an outstanding water management program under the direction of Win Adams, chairman of the State Water Resources Control Board.

"There is evidence which relates population concentrations, industrial wastes, and run-off from fertilized croplands to potential, damaging nutrient enrichment---a lake condition known as eutrophication.

"This project will provide further insight. The information we gain will augment California Water Resources Control Board programs which now assess water quality.

"Our California National Guard will play an unusual role in this research. It's a continuation of their proud tradition and performance. Militarily, their record is praiseworthy; in relatively peaceful times, our Guardsmen have furthered their renown through their good works.

"Now we are asking our Guard to assist the Water Resources Control Board in a comprehensive identification and analysis of the eutrophication threat to selected California lakes and reservoirs.

"Those with me will explain the details. Now may I introduce Robert Payne, the coordinator of the National Eutrophication Survey at the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency in Washington.

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced that the California National Guard has agreed to spearhead an environmental project in cooperation with the California State Water Resources Control Board and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Governor Reagan said the effort is aimed at helping state and federal authorities identify and analyze potential threats to selected fresh water lakes and reservoirs in California.

The agreement provides for the use of National Guard personnel and resources to collect an estimated 1,372 water samples from the tributaries flowing into the 29 California lakes designated for the year-long research effort. The lakes and the counties in which they are located include:

Iron Gate Reservoir, Siskiyou; Lake Pillsbury, Lake; Lower Klamath Lake, Siskiyou; Lake Mendocino, Mendocino; Lake Hennessey, Napa; Nicasio Reservoir, Marin; Santa Margarita Lake, San Luis Obispo; Lopez Lake, San Luis Obispo; Casitas Lake, Ventura; Lake Britton, Shasta; Lake Amador (Jackson Creek Reservoir), Amador; Tulloch Reservoir, Tuolumne;

Don Pedro Reservoir, Tuolumne; Shaver Lake, Fresno; Upper and Lower Twin Lakes (Bridgeport), Mono; Topaz Lake, Mono; Lake Crowley, Mono; Lake Mary, Mono; Silver Lake, Mono; Fallen Leaf Lake, El Dorado; Boca Lake, Nevada; Lake Elsinore, Riverside; Lake Irvine, Orange; Lower Otay Reservoir, San Diego; Lake Henshaw, San Diego; Lake Tahoe, Placer-El Dorado; Lake Havasu, San Bernardino; Lake Shasta, Shasta.

Win Adams, chairman of the California State Water Resources Control Board, said his staff has been coordinating the project with EPA. The board was involved in the selection of the California lakes to be investigated and provided background documentation for the development of the study.

In announcing the agreement, Governor Reagan emphasized, "This project gives our California National Guard an opportunity to render another valuable community service, one that goes beyond the normal involvement of the military."

Specifically, California National Guardsmen will conduct monthly sampling at 98 sites, both to enable assessment of the pollution and eutrophication threat endangering surveyed lakes and to assist in the identification of waste sources. During summer 1975, three specially equipped jet helicopters, supplied to EPA by the Department of Defense, will land on the 29 California lakes to conduct a series of intensive water quality samplings.

The California study is a portion of EPA's National Eutrophication Survey.

"Eutrophication" is one of the more serious water quality problems facing many areas of the nation today. Excess chemical nutrients can cause an over-abundance of aquatic plant growth. Ultimately, the eutrophication process can deteriorate water quality so that fish die and the lake's aesthetic and recreational values may be lost. Over an extended period of continued growth and decay of plant life, the lake can slowly fill to the point where it will disappear.

The nutrients which feed plant growth enter lakes from natural land runoff, effluent discharged by municipal sewage treatment plants and industries, and from fertilized farmland.

The National Eutrophication Survey attempts, in light of existing state information, to discover a surveyed lake's present condition, the threat of any future worsened eutrophication, and the principal sources of any damaging nutrient entering the lake. The survey's product will be comprehensive reports on these 29 lakes, prepared in consultation with the State Water Resources Control Board.

Participating Guardsmen will operate from their local units--13 in all--taking samples on weekends, each month for a year, according to Brigadier General Robert S. Johnson, the Deputy Adjutant General, Army of the California National Guard.

The State Water Resources Control Board will furnish a team of specialists to assist in the technical training of guardsmen.

The Guard and EPA have agreed that the first samples will be taken at all state points on Saturday and Sunday, November 16 and 17. Those samples, like subsequent ones, will be shipped to EPA's National Environmental Research Center at Corvallis, Oregon, for analysis. The final report on survey findings will be made available following the conclusion of the one-year sampling program.

General Johnson has appointed Second Lieutenant Terry L. Barrie of Sacramento as project officer for the California survey. The State Water Resources Control Board's survey liaison is Thomas E. Bailey, assistant chief, Division of Planning and Research.

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced the resignation of Robert J. De Monte, director of the Office of Planning and Research.

De Monte is joining the Consolidated Capital companies, a Bay Area group specializing in real estate investment programs for multiple investors and the management of income producing properties. He will be the controller and senior financial officer of Johnstown Properties, the property management division.

The division is responsible for nearly $300 million in properties and has marketing offices throughout the United States.

"Like many of this administration's appointees, Bob interrupted his career in the private sector to enter state service. He is now renewing that career and he does so with my deep appreciation for a job well done," the governor said.

"He is an outstanding young man and I am confident that he will go far in the business world."

De Monte joined the Reagan Administration as chief deputy director of the Department of General Services. He was instrumental in introducing the concept of pricing services provided by the department to stimulate competitive comparisons and serve as a workload measurement device.

Subsequently, De Monte led the effort to reorganize state authorities involving building codes and, as director of Planning and Research, was instrumental in the enactment of power plant siting legislation and the introduction of legislation to improve the land use decision-making process and prevent the damaging of private property rights in California.

Governor Ronald Reagan said today the federal government could revitalize the housing and construction industries and fight inflation, too, by offering incentives to encourage Americans to save in the nation's private financial institutions.

"It can do all this without any great new government programs or the spending and high taxes that produce inflation," the governor said in remarks prepared for the United States League of Savings Association Convention.

"Congress is now considering legislation that would, if passed, have the effect of greatly expanding the amount of private investment money available for new, long-term mortgages. It would mean a flow of $16 billion in savings into your institutions alone---and much more than that through banks and other types of financial institutions," he said.

The legislation, a bi-partisan measure (HR 16994), has passed the House Ways and Means Committee and is up for further consideration when Congress reconvenes. It would give every family filing a joint tax return a federal income tax exemption of up to $1,000 on interest earned from deposits in savings and loan associations, banks, credit unions and other types of financial institutions.

"This kind of positive incentive would generate the capital necessary to meet our construction needs," the governor said. "It would help the saver, by reducing his taxes instead of raising them. The $16 billion (of new funds) in savings and loans alone would be enough to provide mortgage loans for 500,000 residential units, including 200,000 new homes. This, in turn, would stimulate 350,000 jobs in the construction and related industries and this would generate prosperity in other areas.

The governor noted that the Treasury Department is opposing the measure because it would mean a loss of $1.8 billion of tax revenue.

"I don't argue with the figure," the governor said. "But it's a short-sighted attitude (which) ignores the fact that billions of dollars in new tax revenue would be generated by curing the problems of a slumping housing industry through private savings---instead of trying to dream up another government program.

"It also ignores the fact that the slump in construction and housing could mean (additional) billions of dollars in government costs for unemployment benefits and welfare."

The tax incentive, the governor said, would permit almost 100 million small savers to earn a higher effective interest rate on their savings.

"What's wrong with giving small taxpayers the same kind of tax break and higher interest return that is available to large foreign investors who can purchase high yield U.S. securities?," he asked.

"If the federal government really wants to fight inflation, it will start adopting this kind of incentive to save and keep those funds in our own domestic economy.

"Right now, government's policies discourage thrift. If a small investor earns $100 interest in a savings institution and is a typical taxpayer in the 22 percent bracket, he gets to keep only $78 because income taxes take the rest. And because he's earned $100 gross through his savings, he might even find himself in a higher tax bracket...which means that much more^{is}/going to government instead of being retained where it helps the saver and the economy, too.

"If you want to fight inflation, if you really want to bring the cost of living under control and maintain America's prosperity, you have to start encouraging the savings necessary to finance America's private industries," the governor said.

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced the convening of the Governor's Conference on Criminal Justice to be held in Sacramento on December 2, 3, 4, 1974.

The keynote speaker will be United States Attorney General William Saxbe.

The governor's conference is the culminating event of a six month effort by 467 Californians who served on 17 advisory committees to recommend a series of policy goals and performance standards to get all the parts of the state's criminal justice system working together.

"During the eight years of this administration, we have worked hard to bring about a coordinated effort by all of the state's criminal justice agencies to reduce crime through improvements in the criminal justice system," Governor Reagan said. "We found there was no set of guidelines which would insure that all the various parts of the system were working towards the same goals and using compatible methods.

"Project Safer California was launched earlier this year, under the direction of the Office of Criminal Justice Planning, to establish that set of guidelines.

"Seventeen advisory committees met during the summer and fall and have recommended more than 500 standards and goals covering all aspects of the criminal justice system. These recommendations will be presented publicly at the Governor's Conference on Criminal Justice."

Each advisory committee chairman will present the recommendations of that committee. In addition to Saxbe, State Attorney General Evelle J. Younger, Los Angeles Police Chief Edward Davis, and Richard Velde, administrator of the law enforcement assistance administration in Washington, D.C. will address the conference.

F A C T S H E E T

Project Safer California is a program to adopt realistic standards and goals for the California criminal justice system. It follows similar programs on a national level, primarily by the National Advisory Commission which compiled about 700 recommendations, and the American Bar Association with about 400 recommendations. On the state level, the Governor's Select Committee on Law Enforcement Problems last year published a report with nearly 100 recommendations.

The standards and goals process began at the national level on October 20, 1971. Jerris Leonard, administrator of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA), appointed the National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals, to formulate for the first time, national criminal justice standards and goals for crime reduction and prevention. The Commission report was published January 23, 1973.

It then became the responsibility of the states to use the NAC volumes as a model or process to establish standards and goals to meet the needs and problems of their own states.

California began planning their own standards and goals program under the direction of the Office of Criminal Justice Planning in July of 1974, with the appointment of 467 persons to serve on advisory committees covering every aspect of the criminal justice system. Each committee had a balanced membership representing all parts of the criminal justice system.

These committees will make a presentation of their recommendations at the Governor's Conference on Criminal Justice on December 2, 3, 4, 1974, in Sacramento.

Immediately following the Governor's Conference, the California Council on Criminal Justice (CCCJ) will meet to review, revise and adopt standards and goals for inclusion in the planning process of the criminal justice system.

These standards and goals will be incorporated in the California 1976-80 Multi-year Comprehensive Plan, and will provide the basic guidelines for CCCJ funding of these years. In addition, in December of 1974, the standards and goals, as adopted by the CCCJ, will be referred to each of the 21 regional criminal justice councils in the state. Each region will hold its own series of standards and goals conferences, using the California standards and goals as a model, and adopt standards and set priorities to meet the needs of that region.

The national guidelines are not mandated on the states, but are used as a model for the statewide effort. In the same manner, the state standards and goals are to be used as a model for the regional effort.

The Governor's Conference on Criminal Justice will be held at the Sacramento Earl Warren Convention Center at 14th and K Streets, Sacramento, on December 2, 3, 4, 1974.

The Press Room will be in the San Joaquin Room in the Convention Center Activities Building, telephone (916) 449-5108.

The Information Office of the Office of Criminal Justice Planning, 7171 Bowling Drive, Sacramento, California 95823, telephone (916) 322-5886, will handle public information and press information for the Governor's Conference.

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced the resignation of his legislative assistant, John S. Tooker.

Tooker will become director of association services for the American National Cattlemen's Association in Denver, Colorado. The association, with a membership of more than 260,000 throughout the country, represents all segments of the cattle industry. Current president of the association is Gordon Van Vleck of Plymouth, Amador County.

"It is with mixed emotions that I accept John's resignation," the governor said, "...sadness from the standpoint that this great adventure of the past eight years is coming to an end, but happiness over the fact that John is returning to an industry he knows and enjoys."

Tooker joined the staff of the Resources Agency in January 1968 and later was appointed director of the Office of Planning and Research. He became Governor Reagan's legislative assistant in July 1973. He is a native Californian and graduate of the University of California at Davis.

Governor Reagan also announced that Martin B. Dyer will become his legislative assistant for the remainder of his term. Dyer, 30, is a graduate of Pomona College, where he earned a master's degree in political science. Since last March he has been the deputy legislative assistant. His prior work experience includes legislative representation with the California Manufacturers Association and consultant to several legislative committees.

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced publication of the California State Park System Stewardship Report for 1973-74, the final year of his administration.

"During the eight years of stewardship covered in this report, the administration of the State Park System has been improved considerably and many innovative steps taken to meet the public's changing needs," the governor said.

"Over 145,000 acres have been added to the State Park System, including 41 miles of ocean frontage and 275 miles of lake and river frontage. With the lands now being acquired through the 1974 Park Bond Act, the Bagley Conservation Act, and other sources, this brings to approximately one million acres the total of scenic and recreational lands preserved in the California State Park System."

Major milestones cited include the passage of two major park bond issues and the Bagley Conservation Act, the successful pioneering of the Ticketron computerized reservation system for park campsites and Hearst Monument tours, the expansion and improvement of the California State Fair, the establishment of a new urban park in the Santa Monica Mountains, and the development, at no cost to the state, of a million-dollar training facility at Asilomar State Conference Grounds.

In the report, State Parks Director William Penn Mott, Jr. credits citizen support for much of the success of the program. The State Park and Recreation Commission, the Historical Landmarks Advisory and Recreational Trails committees, and over 40 citizens advisory committees are all cited for their assistance. Also commended are the Save-the-Redwoods League, the State Parks Foundation, the Sempervirens Fund, and the Anza-Borrego Committee of the Desert Protective Council, and many corporations and individuals who contributed to the State Park System.

The state has received almost $40 million within the last three years in gifts of land, artifacts, or cash, the report states.

Mott's report emphasizes the need to move as rapidly as possible on the planned program for acquisition and development.

"By immediately using the funds now available before they are diminished by inflation, and by energetically implementing plans now coming off the drawing boards, the State Park System can quickly expand its facilities to serve the thousands of recreation-hungry persons who are today being turned away from overcrowded parks," Mott said.

"In recent years the State Park System has been expanded, and it has been reorganized to adjust to the emerging needs of our growing and evolving society. Further expansion and change will be necessary, but for the challenges of the immediate future, the State Park System has been made ready."

Governor Ronald Reagan today presented the Distinguished Service Medal to Major General Glenn C. Ames, commanding general of the California National Guard and the state's military forces.

The award, highest that a member of the military forces may receive in peacetime, is the first to go to an officer in the National Guard while serving with the organization.

The decoration may go to any person who, while serving in any capacity with the United States Army, has distinguished himself by outstanding meritorious service to the government in a duty of great responsibility.

Authority to award the DSM is vested in the Chief of Staff, U.S. Army.

The citation reads:

"The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress, July 9, 1918, has awarded the Distinguished Service Medal to

"Major General Glenn C. Ames
"California Army National Guard

for exceptionally meritorious service in positions of great responsibility:

"Major General Glenn C. Ames distinguished himself by eminently meritorious service in positions of great responsibility as the Commanding General, California Army National Guard and, concurrently, Commander of the California Military Forces from March 1967 to October 1973. His tenure has been marked by manifold improvements in the standards, capabilities and elan of the entire California National Guard and, most notably, of the Army elements thereof. By a combination of soundly conceived objectives, innovative programs, skillful allocation of resources and close personal supervision, he effected substantial upgrading of the quality of training and the combat readiness of all units. Due to his farsighted policies, unflagging perseverance and managerial ability, facilities have been greatly augmented and a viable logistics system is in operation. He has been both the architect and the driving force behind dramatic improvements in all aspects of officer and non-commissioned officer education; and his unrelenting emphasis on military excellence and professionalism led to revitalization of the California Military Academy and heightened standards of performance at all levels. It is a special tribute to his assiduous efforts to insure meticulous preparation for the most sensitive task of coping with civil disorders that his units have responded in support of law enforcement agencies on 27 occasions without a single instance of overreaction. Recognizing that the vitality of the guard is directly proportional to the degree of public support, he reestablished the traditional relationship between Guard units and home community, sparked a dynamic Domestic Action Program and made invaluable contributions to establishment of the statewide emergency services machinery. General Ames, by virtue of his superb competence, his dynamic leadership and his total dedication, has insured that the California National Guard is fully capable of carrying out its actual and contingent missions; has furthered the national security in measurable degree; and has earned the respect and admiration of all his colleagues. Major General Ames' exceptionally outstanding performance of duty is in keeping with the finest traditions of military service and reflects great credit upon him and the California Army National Guard."
