Governor Ronald Reagan announced today that Jerry Chambers Martin, a key member of his personal staff for six years, is joining Standard Oil Company of California.

Martin, 41, the governor's special assistant for research and information, will become Public Relations Counsel with the international oil firm at its corporate headquarters in San Francisco.

"Once again, as I have so often said in recent weeks, I have mixed emotions in announcing the future career plans of a most valuable member of the state administration," the governor said.

"Jerry's outstanding writing ability and his skill at organizing complex factual material into easy-to-understand language has been a major factor in helping achieve broader public understanding and support of the programs and policies of my administration. While I will miss his counsel and assistance, I am pleased that Jerry's experience and talent has presented him this new career opportunity."

Martin, a veteran journalist, joined the Reagan administration in April 1969. As the governor's special assistant for research and information, he headed a unit responsible for assembling, organizing and drafting legislative messages, speeches and other material for special projects and programs. He was the principal author of Governor Reagan's famed Welfare Reform message and handled many other special projects during his six years of state service. He also served as a member of the governor's senior policy staff.

Prior to joining the administration, Martin was with the Oakland Tribune, first as a political writer and legislative correspondent and for four years as Chief Editorial Writer and Editor of the newspaper's editorial page.

He also has been a news editor, correspondent and bureau manager for the Associated Press and United Press International, the two worldwide news services, in Texas, Wyoming, New Mexico and Utah.

Martin attended schools in his native state of Texas and has completed graduate level work in business management through the University of California Extension Division.

During the Korean war, he served three years as an Air Force sergeant in Japan and South Korea. For part of his tour of duty in the Far East, Martin edited and wrote for military publications and served as travel escort for touring American war correspondents.

A three-time winner of Freedoms Foundation awards for distinguished editorial writing, Martin is a member of a family prominent in American journalism. A brother, Wilbur, is managing editor of Nation's Business Magazine in Washington, D.C. Another brother, Edwin, is a former White House correspondent for Copley News Service and press secretary to former U.S. Senator George Murphy, R-Calif. A younger brother, Jack, is midwest editor of Medical Economics Magazine in Chicago.

Martin is married to the former Helen Jean Rowland and has a daughter, Kelly Lynn.

He is a member of Sigma Delta Chi, the Professional Journalism Society and is listed in "Who's Who in America."

Governor Ronald Reagan today issued the following statement:

"Our press office has come up with some facts and figures that might be of interest to you since this is our last regularly scheduled news conference in the Capitol.

"You have been handed a 'Summary of Actions and Programs' that were offered by this administration during the past eight years. The summary is for the record and you may use it as you see fit.

"I thought you also might be interested to know that we spent more time with the press than some of you may have suspected. For example, we had 409 regularly scheduled news conferences and news availabilities during the past eight years and we had some 150 scheduled interviews, most of them here in the office. This, of course, doesn't include those surprises at plane side, in the hallways of hotels or down in the basement of the Capitol. I want to thank each of you for your interest---particularly Marty Salditch, wherever you are.

"And if you are wondering why my hand is permanently cramped, you might consider the following statistics. During our eight years in office we considered 13,480 bills. We signed 12,486 of them and vetoed 994. So, you see, we were not as mean as some of those people upstairs have led you to believe.

"We are also going out of office with our cut-squeeze-and-trim record intact; there is a $121,000 savings in the current fiscal year in our office personnel budget, and the new governor could save another $60,000 in office furniture that was budgeted last year.

"For the last time here, do you have any questions?"

Governor Ronald Reagan today announced the appointment of Fred G. Wade to the Board of Supervisors of Sacramento County, representing the Fourth District.

Wade, 47, succeeds former Supervisor Gene Gualco, who was elected to the state Assembly in the November General Election.

Born in Altadena, California, Wade has been a resident of Sacramento for the past 20 years. He has owned and managed an advertising agency in Sacramento for the past 14 years.

He is a 1953 graduate of the University of California at Santa Barbara with a B.A. degree in communications. He also attended the University of California at Los Angeles.

He served as an enlisted man in the U.S. Navy during World War II, and again as line officer during the Korean conflict.

In making the appointment, Governor Reagan said:

"Four members of the Board of Supervisors of Sacramento County have spent the past 30 days seeking to appoint a fifth supervisor as provided by the charter.

"Their discussions have frequently become intensely personal and acrimonious. Too often they have involved accusations and examples of political partisanship---partisanship that should have no place in county government.

"During these proceedings all of the more than 40 applicants for the supervisor position have been eliminated by the board. Individual board members have expressed their inability to work effectively with the various candidates so eliminated.

"For me, therefore, to appoint one of those previously considered and eliminated would only emphasize the controversy that has split the Board and the county during the past month.

"Instead, I feel that the greatest contribution I can make to the people of Sacramento is to name as supervisor a person whose appointment will clearly be above that controversy and partisanship, a person whose personality and temperament will contribute to stability and harmony on the board, and a person whose experience and ability qualify him to serve as an effective, nonpartisan leader of county government. Fred Wade is that man," the governor concluded.
