Dear Mike:

This letter is in response to a request from your secretary that I put in writing the favor I am asking.

First, I realize how many people call requesting such help, however, I assure you that unless it's a very high priority for me, I will not ask for your time. This happens to be a high priority since Issam M. Fares, a Lebanese, is a very close personal friend of mine. He is a venture capital partner in the group that bought my company in 1976. Issam has a good friend by the name of George Abdallah who is an American citizen and very active in the American Lebanese League. Would you please take the time to talk with three of Mr. Abdallah's representatives from the League. They want to discuss the present situation in Lebanon. Issam has asked that the meeting take place with someone very high in the White House. If you feel there's a person more appropriate than yourself at a level they will feel very good about, then I would appreciate you arranging an appointment with that person. It would also be nice if the meeting could be held within the next two to three weeks.

As I said, Mike, I wouldn't ask this favor unless it was very important to me. Issam Fares has been a special friend and has done many favors for me. This is the first time he's asked for one in return. Thanks for your help.

Look forward to seeing you.

Sincerely,

Joe M. Rodgers

Dear Mrs. Shide:

Thank you very much for your message of support. This is a time of great opportunity for all those concerned with preserving our liberties and the integrity of the free enterprise system. In his Inaugural Address, President Reagan promised that we would work to reclaim America's destiny. He advocated policies that would assist the recovery of our economy and reaffirm the values of our forefathers. The President promised to return the capacity for initiative and responsibility to local levels of government and to restrict the regulatory and tax burdens imposed from Washington.

This Administration is now working to deliver on those promises. Our success will require the dedication and cooperation of all Americans, but we are confident of their patriotic response. Your help so far is an indication of the public-spirited concern that will assure our success.

I am sure that I speak for the entire Administration when I convey my deep thanks for your assistance and support. I know that with your help and prayers we shall be able to move forward in beginning this era of national renewal.

Final Draft

ARTICLE BY PRESIDENT REAGAN FOR PARADE MAGAZINE, JULY 4, 1981

For one who was born and grew up in the small towns of the Midwest, there is a special kind of nostalgia about the Fourth of July.

I remember it as a day almost as long-anticipated as Christmas. This was helped along by the appearance in store windows of all kinds of fireworks and colorful posters advertising them with vivid pictures.

No later than the third of July -- sometimes earlier -- Dad would bring home what he felt he could afford to see go up in smoke and flame. We'd count and recount the number of firecrackers, display pieces and things and go to bed determined to be up with the sun so as to offer the first, thunderous notice of the Fourth of July.

I'm afraid we didn't give too much thought to the meaning of the day. And, yes, there were tragic accidents to mar it, resulting from careless handling of the fireworks. I'm sure we're better off today with fireworks largely handled by professionals. Yet there was a thrill never to be forgotten in seeing a tin can blown 30 feet in the air by a giant "cracker" -- giant meaning it was about four inches long.

But enough of nostalgia. Somewhere in our growing up we began to be aware of the meaning of the day and with that awareness came the birth of patriotism. July Fourth is the birthday of our Nation. I believed as a boy, and believe even more today, that it is the birthday of the greatest nation on earth.

There is a legend about the day of our Nation's birth in the little hall in Philadelphia, a day on which debate had raged for hours. The men gathered there were honorable men hard-pressed by a king who had flouted the very laws they were willing to obey. Even so, to sign a Declaration of Independence was such an irretrievable act that the walls resounded with the words "treason, the gallows, the headsman's axe," and the issue remained in doubt.

The legend says that at that point a man rose and spoke. He is described as not a young man, but one who had to summon all his energy for an impassioned plea. He cited the grievances that had brought them to this moment and finally, his voice falling, he said, "They may turn every tree into a gallows, every hole into a grave, and yet the words of that parchment can never die. To the mechanic in the workshop, they will speak hope; to the slave in the mines, freedom. Sign that parchment. Sign if the next moment the noose is around your neck, for that parchment will be the textbook of freedom, the Bible of the rights of man forever."

He fell back exhausted. The fifty-six delegates, swept up by his eloquence, rushed forward and signed that document destined to be as immortal as a work of man can be. When they turned to thank him for his timely oratory, he was not to be found, nor could any be found who knew who he was or how he had come in or gone out through the locked and guarded doors.

Well, that is the legend -- but we do know for certain that fifty-six men, a little band so unique we have never seen their like since, had pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor. Some gave their lives in the war that followed, most gave their fortunes and all preserved their sacred honor.

What manner of men were they? Twenty-four were lawyers and jurists, eleven were merchants and tradesmen, and nine were farmers. They were soft-spoken men of means and education, they were not an unwashed rabble. They had achieved security but valued freedom more. Their stories have not been told nearly enough.

John Hart was driven from the side of his desperately ill wife. For more than a year, he lived in the forest and in caves before he returned to find his wife dead, his children vanished, his property destroyed. He died of exhaustion and a broken heart.

Carter Braxton of Virginia lost all his ships, sold his home to pay his debts, and died in rags. And so it was with Ellery, Clymer, Hall, Walton, Gwinnett, Rutledge, Morris, Livingston and Middleton.

Nelson personally urged Washington to fire on his home and destroy it when it became the headquarters for General Cornwallis. Nelson died bankrupt.

But they sired a nation that grew from sea to shining sea. Five million farms, quiet villages, cities that never sleep, three million square miles of forest, field, mountain and desert, two hundred twenty-seven million people with a pedigree which includes the blood lines of all the world.

In recent years, however, I've come to think of that day as more than just the birthday of a Nation. It also commemorates the only true philosophical revolution in all history.

Oh, there have been revolutions before and since ours. But those revolutions simply exchanged one set of rules for another. Ours was a revolution that changed the very concept of government.

Let the Fourth of July always be a reminder that here in this land, for the first time, it was decided that man is born with certain God-given rights; that government is only a convenience created and managed by the people with no powers of its own except those voluntarily granted to it by the people.

We sometimes forget that great truth and we never should.

Happy Fourth of July.

Dear Mike:

We are planning a meeting of the Republican National Committee to be held in Washington, D.C., at the Mayflower Hotel on June 12-13, 1981. This will be my first meeting of the full Committee.

In discussing the luncheon program for Friday, June 12th, we felt that it would be exciting and extremely interesting to have the three key people around the President -- you, Edwin Meese and Jim Baker -- each speak to the Committee on your approach to your new job, your relationship to the President and to each other.

I hope that you can accept this invitation. The luncheon will be in the STATE ROOM of the Mayflower Hotel (Lobby Level). There will be a short reception preceding the luncheon in the adjoining room, the East Room. The reception will start at 12 Noon and the luncheon will begin about 12:30 P.M.

You would honor the Republican National Committee by your presence, and I know that the members would enjoy you so much.

Dear Mike:

To be sure there is no implied connection between my desire to be helpful in the matter we discussed this noon - or on any other subject in the next eight years for that matter - I resisted mentioning a piece of client business.

One of my accounts is the Budd Company which is the last U.S. railcar producer, a major supplier to the automotive and trucking industries and one of the nation's billion dollar corporations.

I mention that Budd is a client of my firm not because I expect that to give the suggestion any extra consideration whatsoever. Rather I want to be very sure through this Administration if I have a client interest I state it early on so that interest can be discounted if it need be.

Two years ago Budd was purchased by the German steel conglomerate Thyssen. As a result both its chairman and its president are personal friends of Chancellor Schmidt.

I am hopeful they can be considered in connection with the upcoming Schmidt visit.

The two gentlemen are: Mr. (and Mrs.) Gilbert Richards, (chairman), 1009 Stratford Lane, Bloomfield Hills, MI 48013; and Mr. (and Mrs.) James H. McNeal (president), 592 Woodway Court, Bloomfield Hills, MI 48013.
