Dear Friends:

Thank you for your kind and thoughtful message. I know that President Reagan will be as pleased to hear of your support as I am. Hearing from you has strengthened my belief that by working together, we can resolve the problems which face our nation. I only hope that this Administration will live up to the faith which you and so many others have placed in it.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Dear Mrs. McGuire:

Thank you for your recent message. I appreciate the time you have taken to write.

Your years of experience overseas has given you a unique perspective on events in our country. Often, in the press of day-to-day problems, we lose sight of the many blessings which have been bestowed upon our nation. Too often the faults of our form of government are given disproportionate attention and our dedication to liberty and justice almost forgotten.

Whatever faults our nation may have, we must never lose sight of the fact that our constitution represents a milestone in the history of popular government and in the establishment of liberty and justice.

With best wishes,

Dear Mr. McLeod:

Thank you for your message. I appreciate the time you have taken to write.

President Reagan has made defense one of his top priorities. In recent years we have witnessed an unparalleled military build-up by the Soviet Union with a corresponding window of vulnerability opening upon our nation and our allies. The President is dedicated to rebuilding our state of military preparedness and to strengthening our ties to the free nations of the world.

I was grateful to have the opportunity to review your thoughts on these topics. You can be sure that your message will receive serious attention from the appropriate members of the Administration.

Dear Mr. Austin:

Thank you for your recent message. I appreciate the interest which prompted you to write.

I was grateful to have the opportunity to review the insights on foreign affairs which you have taken from the Bible. Since the day when the first pilgrim set foot on Plymouth Rock, Americans have always looked to the Bible as a source of guidance and strength. Today we can have no better guide in the conduct of our personal affairs, or in the affairs of the nation, than this great and wise book.

I appreciate the confidence which led you to discuss your invention with me. However, I am sure you will understand that due to the heavy volume of similar correspondence which I receive daily, it is not possible for me to comply with your request for aid in its marketing.

Dear Mrs. Binnis:

Thank you for your recent message. I appreciate the time you have taken to send me your views on Federal spending.

This Administration shares your concern that our Federal government has grown to be too big and too expensive. All too often, the hard earned dollars of the American taxpayer are spent inefficiently and unwisely by their government. President Reagan is dedicated to reducing the level of Federal spending. His Program for Economic Recovery includes the largest reduction in spending in recent history. The President is determined to continue to cut the Federal budget and to improve the efficiency of Federal programs.

Dear Mr. Suttle:

Thank you for your recent message. I was grateful to have the opportunity to review your publication.

One of the greatest tasks which we face as a nation is to renew our commitment to those moral and spiritual principles which have long been a part of our common heritage. From the day when the first Pilgrim landed on Plymouth Rock, Americans have always desired the liberty to worship and to enjoy the fruits of their labors. This simple but powerful belief has inspired Americans throughout history to accomplish great deeds. Your message recalls that we can do no better than to reassert our commitment to the sanctity of the individual, law, and morality as the basis of true progress.
