Dear Brothers:

I am delighted to send my congratulations as you celebrate the 75th Anniversary of Eta Chapter. As a Delta Sigma Phi myself, I understand the importance of this significant milestone to your members and alumni.

Over the years, the fraternity system has had its critics, but you and I know of the wonderful opportunities it has offered us and countless other millions of young people to develop our leadership potential, participate in service to our communities, and enjoy good fellowship.

Many times the experiences shared in a fraternity chapter find their way into our homes and schools, the halls of Congress, the boardrooms of corporate America, and, even the White House, where today our President and many of the men and women who serve him are fraternity members.

As you reflect on your history of service and brotherhood at the University of Texas, you have my best wishes for continued success in the future.

Yours in the brotherhood of the Sphinx

Dear Mr. Deaver

My name is John Danielson and I am presently a freshman ~~business student at the University of Texas at Austin~~. In addition to my studies, I spend a great deal of my time working for the Texas Senate, supporting the University Republicans, serving on the College of Business Administration Student Council, and participating on Governor Bill Clements' re-election campaign. However, more importantly, ~~I am actively involved in what I consider to be the best fraternity in the world--Delta Sigma Phi~~. I am writing you now with regard to our fraternity, and on behalf of the Eta Chapter at the University of Texas.

On May 8, my fraternity chapter will be celebrating its 75th anniversary of service and brotherhood on the U.T. campus. We are very proud to reach this point in our chapter history, and are hoping you can do us a small favor to help celebrate.

Mr. Deaver, as I am sure you can remember, one of the most important characteristics Delta Sigma Phi instills in its members is that they do something with their lives to make the fraternity proud. The fraternity will give its members an excellent foundation for which to accomplish this, and what they ultimately build upon that foundation is their gift back to the fraternity. Well, ~~the Eta Chapter is very~~, very proud of you and all that you are doing to help our country. It is indeed impressive to have someone like yourself in the ranks of our alumni, for you give us an example to look up to, and one that we can identify with through a common bond--for, in truth, we do have a lot in common--we are brothers.

What we would be so grateful for, ~~is a letter or certificate of congratulations from you that we can present to our alumni and chapter members at the Anniversary Formal on May 8~~. We want to present it at the big celebration, and then have it framed and placed in the Main Hall of our fraternity house for all to see and be reminded of. We would also be very pleased if we could get a similar letter of congratulations from your boss to present at the formal. I realize how difficult a request this is, but because it is our 75th anniversary, it would really help to make it even more special.

There was a problem with an apparently lost letter a few weeks ago, or you would have received this request and enclosed invitation much sooner. Understanding the extraordinary demands on your time, we realize you will probably be unable to attend. However, if by a very slim chance you could, our fraternity would be happy to fly you down to Austin and provide hotel accommodations during

Dear Michael:

The author of the enclosed book review, my old friend Jerry Wiesner, longs to meet you. I told him that you have nothing against scientists, as far as I know, but that you preferred singers for company. He has asked if he could some time join the group around the piano so that he might, between numbers, have a word with you. The reasons will be obvious to you.

If that is agreeable to you, please let me know. I have the feeling that the Lower Macomb Street Choral Society ~~we~~ have to have another emergency meeting in June, when Sean and Lula may be coming for Monica's graduation. Did you know, by the way, that Monica will be singing the lead in the Georgetown Visitation production of "Brigadoon." I trust she will be properly accompanied.

The new Ambassador of Ireland, Tadgh O'Sullivan wish to audition. His number is "Johnny, I Hardly Knew Ye." I said I would alert the Official Accompanist.

I wish, for all sorts of reasons, we could have gotten together sooner about the naming of the ship. I am so glad that it finally happened, however, that I do not cavil.

My best always to you and Carolyn.

Dear Mike:

I am offering this to you despite your crowded schedule on the basis of the pretigious source, Axel Springer, who has a great deal of power and influence in Germany.

As you know, Mr. Springer is the publisher of a chain of newspapers which reach about 18 million Germans and other Europeans daily. He has been a strong supporter of the President and also is regarded as highly conservative.

In a telegram received today, Mr. Springer said the President's trip to Berlin would be greatly enhanced if he makes a public appearance.

Mr. Springer said: "All of Berlin is looking forward to the President's visit in June. Many Berliners fear that the organizer's caution and over-anxiety might cause him to avoid the public here and limit his stay to just a few hours with official Berlin."

"That would be a mistake. A public statement by the President would be most welcome and instrumental for strengthening the ties established in the immediate post-war years. Berliners will never forget the Luftbruecke - the Allied airlift in the face of Soviet threats and guns. May I suggest Tempelhof Airport - under U.S. authority in the center of Berlin as a meeting place? There security would pose no problem, and the visitor would be assured of a rousing and undisturbed welcome."

I also have passed on his message to Bill Clark.

Warmest best wishes.

I was delighted to learn that the Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law of Yeshiva University has established the Cardozo Arts & Entertainment Law Journal.

Benjamin Cardozo exemplified the highest traditions of legal scholarship throughout his distinguished career, culminating with his service on the New York Court of Appeals and the United States Supreme Court. In carrying forward those traditions, the faculty and students of the School of Law named for Justice Cardozo honor his life and memory.

I know that the Journal will display the same devotion to excellence to which Justice Cardozo was, and Yeshiva University remains, committed. As you know, I have a special interest in the arts and entertainment, and you have my congratulations and best wishes as you launch a publishing venture that will contribute to learning and scholarship in this field.

With your purchase of Harry Adamson's fine oil painting, "Winter's Prelude - California Pintails", you are supporting both artistic excellence and a most worthy conservation organization. Proceeds from the sale of this painting will greatly assist the California Waterfowl Association's on-going efforts to preserve our threatened waterfowl resources.

This important goal of protecting and restoring our vanishing wetlands has been an important personal objective for many years. As Governor of California, I signed into law legislation preserving the Suisun Marsh and creating the nation's first state-sponsored Duck Stamp Program. It is gratifying that many other states have since followed California's example.

Just a short note to thank you and Carolyn for taking time out to join us in Washington and for the special things you set up for our group. I can assure you that every person returned home a better American for the experience.

I have enclosed two items. One is a sample letter that would greatly aid the cause of the California Waterfowl Association. This would be in conjunction with the painting presentation you arranged between board of director members and the president when he was in Los Angeles. Ken Hofmann paid $21,000.00 for the original at the Mzuri auction, all of which will be used for habitat enhancement. The president still has the #1 print if he still wants it. If you see fit to have the president sign a letter like this it will be presented to Ken and will hang by the painting in his home.

The second item is a press release that will keep you up to date on the progress of one of your appointees.

N.E. congressmen prepare

By John S. Day
NEWS Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — During the next few days President Reagan and the leaders of Congress are expected to announce a budget compromise that could increase the annual heating bills for New England residents by approximately $140 next winter and hike the price of gasoline by about 12 cents per gallon.

Chilled by that prospect, the region's 35 members of Congress launched a united political effort Wednesday to head off inclusion of a $5 per-barrel fee on imported oil in that budget package.

Resolutions sponsored by Maine Sen. George J. Mitchell and Rep. Silvo Conte, R-Mass., were introduced in the Senate and House which would place Congress on record as opposing the imposition of such a fee by either presidential executive order or legislative action.

The resolutions are not legally binding. Their intent is to warn the administration it will have a fight on its hands should it attempt to include the $5 fee in a bi-partisan package to reduce Reagan's projected $180 billion deficit.

Administration aides say the fee would accomplish two goals. It would generate $10 billion in new federal revenues, reducing the budget deficit, and would insure there would be no slacking of conservation efforts by consumers because of declining oil prices.

New England members of Congress maintain the fee is unfair and inequitable. Because their region depends on imported oil for 70 percent of its energy, the six states would pay the biggest burden of the higher oil costs. The total cost of the $5 fee on the six states would total $340 million next year if adopted by Congress.

Eventually, all regions of the country would end up paying higher energy costs because domestic oil prices almost certainly would increase to the level of imported petroleum. That factor, opponents of the fee argue, would increase energy costs across the country by between $40 and $60 billion, causing inflation to rise by sixth-tenths to nine-tenths of one percent.

Several hundred New England heating oil dealers huddled with their lawmakers Wednesday morning and then fanned out to personally lobby members of Congress on the issue.

fight on $5 imported oil fee

Mitchell, citing the recent decline in inflation brought out by lowered oil prices, told the dealers "An oil import fee would reverse the only good economic news that consumers have had in recent years ... Rather than allow consumers to continue to enjoy this relief from higher prices, the imposition of a $5 per-barrel import fee would raise the price of gasoline and other petroleum products by 8 to 12 cents a gallon."

Sen. William S. Cohen asked the dealers not to "lay this (fee) on President Reagan's doorstep." The GOP senator said the idea did not originate with the White House, but from Senate negotiators, many of them from western states, who have been meeting in secret during the past month to develop a bi-partisan budget package.

Rep. Olympia J. Snowe also addressed the dealers during a later meeting and denounced the import fee.

Cohen suggested that northeastern lawmakers might retaliate if the westerners ram the $5 import fee through Congress.

"We in New England rely on oil. It is our lifeblood, just as water is the lifeblood of the west ... Those men who are negotiating (the budget package) have an obligation to be fair," said Cohen, who warned northeast lawmakers might push for higher federal interest rates on water projects in the western states.

Those projects are subsidized by federal loans with interest rates as low as 3 and seven-eighths percent. "We could save a lot of money by charging 15 or 18 percent for those projects," the senator indicated.

Steve Powers, president of the Maine Oil Dealers Association, led a delegation of 15 oil dealers from the state to Washington to participate in the lobbying campaign. He insisted the $5 "hidden tax" was not needed to maintain conservation efforts in Maine and expressed concern that once the fee was adopted, lawmakers would gradually increase the fee in the future as an easy way to increase federal revenues.

Congress overwhelmingly rejected a similar $5 import fee on gasoline in 1980.

Mitchell, expressing optimism that the import fee will be rejected, said "After that overwhelming defeat, I don't see how many of those members who denounced Carter could turn around and support (the fee)."
