Dear Sandy:

I was delighted to receive your note and hear of your wonderful vacation in Bermuda. I was only too happy to be of help. I, too, hope Carolyn and I will be able to treat ourselves to a similar vacation.

Your invitation for a weekend in East Hampton is very tempting. Thank you.

With best wishes,

Dear Luke,

I can't tell you how wonderful our vacation in Bermuda was - and I can't thank you enough for helping it to happen. Not only are the Friedersdorfs delightful but the house we stayed in is lovely. And we celebrated our arrival and departure from this haven with delicious champagne. I only hope you and Carolyn will treat yourselves to a visit there soon.

In the meantime, please try to plan a weekend with us in East Hampton for all the Deavers.

Dear Mr. Jackson:

Thank you for sending me a copy of your letter to the President. Your concern about environmental issues is obviously heartfelt.

The American people elected Ronald Reagan in 1980 because they agreed with him that America was going in the wrong direction. The voters responded to Ronald Reagan's promise of strong leadership by giving him a resounding mandate to implement his plan for turning the nation around. Since he was inaugurated in 1981, President Reagan has honored his pledge to provide strong leadership and the country is now going in the right direction.

It is inevitable that not everyone will agree with every Administration policy. I believe that this Administration's environmental policy balances concern for the environment and for economic growth. Obviously you disagree.

I hope however that you will weigh your vote in 1984 very carefully. I hope that you will take into account all aspects of President Reagan's performance in office. If you do, I think that in 1984 you will find that you are considerably better off than you were four years earlier.

Dear Mr. Baugher:

I am responding to your letter of June 20, 1983 regarding an application from the City of Greenwood, South Carolina for an Urban Development Action Grant.

I have been advised by the Department of Housing and Urban Development that an application for an Urban Development Action Grant has been received. The purpose of the grant would be to assist in the development of a hotel in Greenwood.

A preliminary review of the application was conducted by the HUD field office in Columbia, South Carolina and has been forwarded to Washington for consideration in the UDAG competition during the month of July.

The Greenwood application will soon be assigned to a reviewer at HUD, and you can be assured that your comments will be taken into account in the process.

Dear Jus:

Thank you for sharing with me your letter to Bob Tuttle regarding Russell Byers, a candidate for a regional HUD position in Philadelphia.

I am told by Presidential Personnel that a decision has finally been made on this job. As you probably know, regional positions are highly contested. In this case, Senator Heinz was strongly supporting his good friend Russ Byers from Pennsylvania against another candidate from Delaware. The Delawarean was selected because, among other reasons, the previous job holder was from Pennsylvania, and it is our usual policy to spread plum jobs between states. The decision was made public just last week.

Thanks again for taking the time to recommend individuals for the Administration.

Crusading CPA Coaxes Congress to Adopt Investor Tax-Deferral Plan

By KATHY KRISTOF, Times Staff Writer

Harvey Goldstein has been described by a California assemblyman as a man "possessed."

For the last year and a half, Goldstein, managing partner of a Westwood certified public accounting firm and a member of President Reagan's National Productivity Advisory Committee, has been attempting to coax through Congress a measure that he says could create capital for struggling small businesses by providing tax incentives for investors.

"Don't say I'm doing it for America," Goldstein says of his crusade for the Small Business Investment Incentive Act, a bill he authored. "That sounds so trite."

Actually, Goldstein is persisting because he believes that this bill could be good for small businesses and for the country, although he notes, "It couldn't hurt me, either."

Small business, according to the federal Small Business Administration, employs at least half of all U.S. workers. Small firms are 24 times as innovative—creating more inventions and producing more patents—as large firms, the agency adds, and in California more than 10 million people work for the state's 2 million small establishments.

Small Business

President Reagan, in a recent handbook called "The State of Small Business," said abatement of the serious problems facing small business is "the key goal of my economic program." And raising capital is the foremost problem for small firms, according to many authorities in the field.

Goldstein's measure would provide tax incentives for investors in small businesses, thereby, Goldstein contends, creating a pool of capital that could total more than a billion dollars within four years of enactment and thousands of new jobs.

"I initially conceived the idea in an article I wrote in 1979," Goldstein said. "When I went to Washington with my presidential committee, I wanted to see what the people who could make the thing happen would think about it. They wanted to see it in writing, so I wrote it. And then the process begins to take over."

The process really got rolling in January, 1982. That was after Goldstein got U.S. Rep. Bobbi Fiedler (R-Northridge) to sponsor the bill and it was introduced in Congress as HR-6698. Since then, Goldstein has personally spent thousands of dollars and hundreds of hours attempting to get the bill passed. He has more than 10 pounds of material relating to the measure and to small business. And, Goldstein says, "We have just begun to fight."

Last year the legislation didn't get past the House Ways and Means Committee, which is where it is once again being considered. But Goldstein isn't content to let the bill just lie, or, as was the case last year, die there.

"We repeatedly hear the rhetoric of elected officials—their unfulfilled promises to help small business," he said. "This segment of the economy deserves more than mere lip service. We as a nation will spend millions on welfare, millions for armament and few dollars to assist this most vital section of our country. The cost of this legislation is insignificant compared to the potential of greater employment and a healthier business community."

What Goldstein's measure proposes is a tax deferral. While an investor's money is tied up in the stock of a small business, the amount invested would not be subject to federal income taxes.

For instance, an individual making $50,000 this year but investing $15,000 in the stock of a small business would be taxed only on the remaining $35,000. Once the stock is sold, however, the $15,000 would be counted as additional income that year and be subject to regular income tax rates. Any profit on the stock would be subject to capital-gains tax.

Small firms, defined as companies with fewer than 35 shareholders, would be able to raise as much as $250,000 in increments of $15,000 from private investors. The bill would be limited to corporations that are actively involved in trade or business, excluding personal service corporations such as doctors, lawyers and accountants.

Although not a new idea, Goldstein's proposal has received a great deal of attention recently. It has 20 co-sponsors in the House and will soon be introduced in the Senate.

CPA: Tax Plan

Business, a trade group, is planning to support the bill by making it an element of a four-part plan to alleviate problems of small business. Similar legislation has been proposed in the California Assembly.

Proponents of the measure say it will create 106,000 new jobs and provide more than $1 billion to small businesses within four years of enactment.

The congressional Joint Committee on Taxation, however, says the U.S. Treasury would lose millions of dollars in revenues, an estimated $50 million the first year and $100 million in each of the next three years. Even among the bill's supporters, there are some who believe that the initiative will be difficult to pass and that it might be prone to abuse.

"It's easily open to shenanigans," says John Motley, deputy director for federal legislation at the National Federation of Independent Business. "Paper" or "shell" corporations, rather than real ones, might be funded, he said.

However, Goldstein says that the possible benefits of this legislation outweigh such potential negatives and that the bill should be given a chance.

Proposals Ignored

Proposals similar to Goldstein's have been attached to various bills over the last several years, but until now have been largely ignored. The reason the current bill might be treated differently is, quite frankly, Goldstein.

Aside from his personal expenditures of time and money, Goldstein has a list of more than 100 legislators to whom he sends information about developments with the initiative.

Goldstein says the major reason he's willing to push this legislation is that "it makes sense."

"I've been working with tax laws for 18 years and with small business for the same period of time, and there's nothing I could think of (during that period) that helped small business with their major problem—capital formation," he said.

Goldstein put a number of provisions in the legislation to guard against abuse. For example, to eliminate the possibility that someone would invest on Dec. 31 to receive the tax deduction and reclaim the money on Jan. 1 of the next year, the bill stipulates that money be left in the corporation for at least three years.

The bill puts limits on the amount of stock a single person may own and requires that stock be purchased for cash and that the investment go directly to funding company operations. Nevertheless, Goldstein acknowledges that abuses are possible.

"No matter how careful you are, somebody will always be able to figure out a way to work around the law," he says.

Reason for Dedication?

"It's going to be difficult to enact," Motley notes, "but the whole idea of the legislative process is to bring out the pros and cons. What we are hoping is that when it is subject to the light of day, we'll find ways to make it enforceable. There's got to be some safeguards out there that we can find. But we'll never be able to find them unless we push the original draft."

Even Goldstein can't give a single reason for his dedication. However, he did say his enthusiasm was heightened when syndicated columnist William Raspberry wrote that America might be grateful if President Reagan would look at the bill.

"Here's this guy that I don't know from Adam, and he thinks this could be great for the country. That certainly gives you a stimulus to keep going forward with it," Goldstein said.

"I'm a great believer that when you've achieved a certain amount of success, you should be giving something back to the society that gave you that success. I'm a product of Los Angeles State College and Los Angeles City College. The taxpayers of California paid for my education. There's nothing wrong with trying to pay that back."

Dear Mr. Weaver,

It seems like it would be easier to call you by your first name. ~~Because~~ <sup>that is</sup> the way I had always heard of you.

I remember, when your brother was born, Blanche came over to our house, walking through the kitchen where I was. She had that great smile on her face, and those wonderful eyes were so happy as she told me your brother had arrived, and then she rushed on to find my mom.

I guess we had moved to Vixie by the time you came along, for I don't remember a personal announcement. Mother was going through some old snapshots not so long ago and found a picture of Blanche holding you.

Needless to say, my reason for writing is not to give you all of this fantastic information.

I have been watching the DC July 4 program on TV, and have just heard the greetings from our president. I happen to have the dubious talent of hearing and seeing every spoken & written grammatical error. The one in his two or three sentences has jolted me, as always.

Wont President Reagan's material get screened? It's more than time to tell our leader ~~not~~ to use pronouns in the oblique case with prepositions. This same type of error occurred during the campaign. It's a very common mistake, but I expect something better from our number one man!

Needless to say, I am available for this type of editing. In fact, I considered offering my services when you were writing your book. I find very few books without errors. The author is so close to his work that he is unable to catch them and should have help.

My apologies for the informality of this letter. Were I to wait for typewriter and looking up rules for format, this intention of communicating my feelings to you would drop by the wayside just as it does in other instances.

MEMORANDUM FOR JOANNA BISTANY

FROM: KARNA SMAL KS
SUBJECT: MARK WEAVER, WBAL-RADIO

You asked me about Mark Weaver at WBAL-Radio in Baltimore since he has a request in to interview Mike Deaver. Actually, it sounds like a pretty good show and you might pass on the following to Mike:

- WBAL is a 50,000 watt clear channel and at night it's #1 and is heard up to Canada and out to Bermuda. It is an ABC affiliate.
- The station is considered pretty responsible. It carries RR's Sat. radio talks (as well as Demo. response).
- The station recently (last week) held a straw poll of their listeners on RR vs. Mondale and their listeners voted 2 to 1 in favor of RR over Fritz.
- Mark Weaver is formerly a general assignment reporter with AP and has been in Baltimore 1½ years as a general reporter and anchor of the Saturday night live radio program from 9:00 - midnight. This is an interview show - and the show where they'd like to have Mike. It would have to be live sometime between 9 and 12, preferably for 30 min., although they'd love an hour of his time if they could get it -- it would either be straight interview, or they could take some viewer call-ins (this is negotiable - whatever Mike prefers).
- You can expect Mark Weaver to ask tough questions, but he is not perceived to be anti-administration - just rather straight. He has had guests on from State and DOD, as well as Admin. critics from time to time.

The number at the station is 301-467-3000. For more info, the News Director's name is Jeff Beauchamps.

DEAR MR. DEEVER:

I KNOW YOU ARE A BUSY MAN, BUT THIS MIGHT BE A GOOD OPPORTUNITY FOR BOTH YOU AND ME.

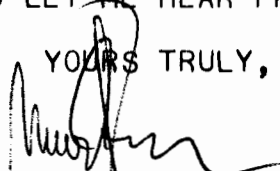

I'M INVITING YOU TO TAKE THE SHORT DRIVE FROM WASHINGTON TO BALTIMORE SOME SATURDAY EVENING, AND APPEAR ON MY RADIO TALK SHOW. IT WOULD BE A NICE CHANCE FOR A PERSON LIKE YOURSELF TO ANSWER QUESTIONS FROM A TYPICAL AMERICAN AUDIENCE.

WBAL IS MARYLAND'S BIGGEST RADIO STATION, AND THE NUMBER ONE STATION IN BALTIMORE. OUR NIGHTTIME SIGNAL IS BEAMED UP AND DOWN THE EAST COAST. WE GET CALLS FROM ALL OVER THE STATE AND FROM NEW ENGLAND.

BALTIMORE IS A VERY TYPICAL EAST COAST INDUSTRIAL CITY, AND ITS RESIDENTS ARE PREDOMINANTLY BLUE COLLAR. IT'S AN OPPORTUNITY TO FIND OUT FIRST HAND WHAT'S ON THE MINDS OF SUCH PEOPLE.

PLEASE THINK ABOUT IT, AND LET ME HEAR FROM YOU.

YOURS TRULY,

MARK WEAVER

Dear Carolyn:

Thank you for your recent letter in support of Mrs. Faith Whittlesey. Her position here at the White House remains secure and she is an active participant on my working group on Women's Issues.

I have made note of your concerns regarding women. Thank you again for writing.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

MICHAEL K. DEAVER
Assistant to the President
Deputy Chief of Staff

Dear Mr. Deaver:

I am writing in support of Mrs. Faith Whittlesey, the White House Public Liaison Assistant. I understand that her position is in jeopardy because she allegedly made an anti-feminist statement.

When will the Reagan Administration realize that this small but very vocal and well-funded minority of Feminists does not speak for the vast numbers of American women who, by-and-large, agree with Mrs. Whittlesey?

Mrs. Whittlesey is a true symbol of American womanhood who has worked hard to achieve her goals and is the sole breadwinner in her family.

Please do all in your power to see that Mrs. Faith Whittlesey retains her position in the Reagan Administration.

For God, family, and country,

Carolyn V. Thomson

Dear Lee:

Thanks for your note of July 5th. As you can imagine I don't see all the correspondence that goes out from each agency. However your response was more than adequate. As for our drink. I haven't forgotten.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

MICHAEL K. DEAVER
Assistant to the President
Deputy Chief of Staff

Dear Mike:

Would you tell the gentleman that when he has a beef with the press he should go to the writer (me) at the same time he goes over my head!

I'll take my lumps if I have any coming.

In 1980 in an airport hangar in Texas you promised me a drink, and I am still waiting.

Best personal regards,

Lee Fremstad

Dear Mr. Chapman:

I now have a copy of your remarkable June 16 letter concerning my May 22 article on the internment of Japanese-Americans in California.

You have made a distinction without a difference. We are both handicapped because we were not there in 1942, but I have the advantage of Justice Clark's statement.

That is, sir, that the Bureau of the Census told him where specific numbers of Japanese lived, in which homes, at which addresses. As you know, Title 13 of the U.S. Code requires that information obtained from an individual be used only for "statistical purposes." Interning civilians is not normally considered an exercise for statistical purposes.

Let me ask that if in the future you have problems with my reportage you write me directly at the same time you are writing my editors.

Yours truly,

Dear Editor:

I would like to comment on one aspect of your recent story (May 22, 1983, by Staff Writer Lee Fremstad) on the internment of Japanese Americans after Pearl Harbor. The article states that Tom Clark, then with the Department of Justice, "was illegally given raw census data to pinpoint the locations of Japanese families for pickup and transfer to relocation camps." Later in the article Clark is quoted as having said, "They would lay out on tables various city blocks where the Japanese lived...and they would tell me how many were living in each block."

Determining the location of concentrations of any racial or ethnic group by inspecting block maps and block data does not constitute illegal access to "raw census data." Such data are only "raw" data when they include the names and addresses of the individuals about whom data are compiled. Clark does not mention names and addresses, and we have never found any evidence that such identifiers were released by the Census Bureau for the internment program. What we do know is that the Bureau, in 1942, furnished aggregate data--total numbers only--to the War Relocation Authority and other officials, and these data were used in the manner described by Clark.

Judgments about the propriety of the internment should be kept separate from the question of whether the Bureau violated its law regarding confidentiality. As nearly as we have been able to determine, it did not, since the use of aggregate data for small areas is completely legal and such data are continually utilized by school districts, neighborhood councils, and legislative redistricting committees for planning and policy purposes.

Sincerely,

Bruce Chapman
