Dear Mrs. Whittlesey:

Please accept my personal thanks and those of my associates for your kind letter of July 20, which indeed clarified a situation which would have been far clearer to begin with, if a certain group would less presumptuously have presented itself as "Evangelical Protestant" rather than "American Coalition for Traditional Values."

I also wish to assure you that my asking your office for the names of the people who attended that July 9 White House briefing -- and engaging even the services of some senators and congressmen in trying to obtain them -- was exclusively prompted by my sincere desire -- as a concerned citizen with contacts all over the country -- to help President Reagan gain "the Catholic vote" in the upcoming election.

That your office did not honor this request of mine is a decision which I fully respect and accept, as you undoubtedly must have good reasons for it. Bear with me, however, if I add the following remarks and explanation.

I was deeply disturbed when I learned that among the people attending your July 9 briefing and personally welcomed to the White House by our President were some of the most fanatic anti-Catholic bigots our country unfortunately still counts among its citizens. Outstanding among them, I was told, was America's best known Catholics-hater, one Jimmy Swaggart, the individual on record as unashamedly describing the Catholic Church as "the whore of the Apocalypse," and as a false religion whose members are being led to Hell by priests who, almost to a man, while claiming to live by the vow of celibacy, in reality lead the most immoral personal lives!!

This past July 31, New York's NBC-TV Channel 4 already carried a prime time editorial calling President Reagan's friendship with "anti-semitic" Jimmy Swaggart as reprehensible as Jesse Jackson's friendship with "anti-semitic" Black Moslem leader Louis Farrakhan. I fear that it is only a matter of time before the Cuomo-Ferraro tandem or a journalist of the Sam Donaldson school will try to embarrass the President by suddenly producing a picture of Swaggart at the White House shaking the

Brother Swaggart Visits President to Discuss New Bill on Voluntary Prayer in School

A personal invitation to visit the White House and review the wording of the new amendment on voluntary prayer in school with the President of the United States and several other religious leaders might have made some people nervous and/or excited. But for Evangelist Jimmy Swaggart, "responsibility" was the key word that described his feelings.

"I was tremendously impressed by President Reagan and his dedication to Godly principles," said Brother Swaggart. "I have always been amazed at the governmental process 'of the people, for the people, and by the people.' It is a Godly concept — unique in the history of mankind. Under God, it is what has made this nation great. If we lose it, we will lose our greatness."

The issue of getting prayer back into the public school systems is one that has been a burden on the hearts and minds of Christians since the late sixties. It was in that era that atheist Madelyn Murray O'Hair used her own son to help abolish prayer in public schools.

Personal from Donnie Swaggart

As a valued friend, we wanted you to receive this premiere edition of our Jimmy Swaggart Ministries UPDATE — a quarterly newsletter designed to inform you on some of the things God is accomplishing through our various worldwide outreaches.

The past several years, Dad has been laying the mantle of responsibility increasingly on my shoulders in the day-to-day administrative duties so that he may devote more of his time to the spiritual aspects of his high calling in Christ Jesus (Philippians 3:13-14).

It is our prayer that you will see in these pages just what your gifts of love have helped us to accomplish in the advancement of the Kingdom in accordance with Christ's Great Commission (Mark 16:15).

GET OFF THE AIR, ANGRY CRITICS TELL TV EVANGELIST

TELEVISION evangelist Jimmy Swaggert has unleashed a storm of controversy nationwide with his continuing assault on "religious minorities."

Now, critics from coast to coast are demanding that his show be given the ax.

In recent months alone, Swaggert has:

- All but said that Jews were gassed, tortured and starved to death in Nazi concentration camps because they didn't believe in Jesus Christ.
- Charged that Mother Teresa's selfless work among the dirt-poor millions of Calcutta, India, "doesn't add one thing toward her salvation."
- Persistently criticized Roman Catholicism as if it's somehow "less Christian" than Protestantism.

"I'm a Christian and I'm put off by his radical, ridiculous remarks," declares Jerry Walsh, who, as general manager of WLVI-TV in Boston, cancelled Swaggert's show after hearing his commentary on the Holocaust.

"Swaggert goes way too far," he alleges, "and we don't want to be a part of that."

Swaggert's show has also been cancelled by WANX in Atlanta, Georgia. Herman Ramsey, general manager of the station, says Swaggert's attacks on other creeds "got to the point where we were required to give those groups equal time on the air."

WAGA, the CBS affiliate in Atlanta, axed Swaggert's show for similar reasons and because the evangelist was soliciting contributions on the air in violation of station policy.

"A lot of viewers were finding his statements very offensive," explains station manager Mark Doyle.

Bishop Stanley Ott, of the show to speak against the Catholic Church.

"It's very unfortunate that this kind of man has so much influence."

"There is general concern among my fellow bishops, and if the onslaught continues we plan to take more definitive steps."

Shirley Cook, a spokesman for Swaggert, told GLOBE that the evangelist was "not interested" in commenting on the charges against him.

Theodore Freedman, of the Jewish Anti-Defamation League, says Swaggert's statements stem from his "narrow" interpretation of the Bible.

"It's difficult if not impossible for someone with such a regimented view to change his opinion," he explains. "We merely hope that in the future he'll try to be a little more responsive to the feelings and beliefs of others."

"In the final analysis, it's unlikely that God is going to be interested in whether a person is Protestant, Catholic, Buddhist, Jew or Hindu," he adds, "but in that person's character and what he did with his life."

"If only Swaggert understood that we'd all be better off."

Baton Rouge Catholic Archdiocese, in Louisiana, has tried — unsuccessfully — to convince Swaggert to be more sensitive.

"He does a grave disservice to humankind by the messages that he preaches," Ott told GLOBE.

"Swaggert says that he loves Catholics, then turns around and does things like invite a former priest on his Jimmy Swaggert is another story. His hatred of the Catholic Church is so obvious that I am led to believe he doesn't know God! He is just a grandiose performer who commercializes religion for profit.

Brother Swaggart Visits President

Ironically, her son has since become a born-again Christian and is working to "undo" his mother's actions.

"Endeavoring to get a bill of this nature before Congress is extremely difficult," said Brother Swaggart. "Anytime Congress strikes down something the Supreme Court has already set in motion as law, a tremendously complicated process develops. Consequently, unless the lobbying group concerned is serious about their project, it will never come to fruition.

However, we believe with the President's strong support and the tremendous feelings among all Christians, the possibility of this bill being made law is very strong."

Literally all of the well-known ministers of the Gospel who attended the meeting at the White House were in agreement with the wording of the new prayer bill. However, irregardless of whether the bill is passed, Brother Swaggart believes that the problems within the public school systems are so intense they'll not go away.

"Basically the only real good this amendment will do, which is of course tremendously important," said Brother Swaggart, "is this: Our nation was founded on the principles of Godliness. Time magazine stated sometime ago that the Bible is really the constitution of the United States. I concur with that. 'In God We Trust' is still the greatest motto of this land. The children in our schools must know beyond a shadow of a doubt that the government of the United States of America is based on the Judeo-Christian concept. The simple act of a teacher leading in voluntary prayer will help reinforce this belief."

Mr. Michael Deaver
Deputy Chief of Staff
THE WHITE HOUSE
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Deaver:

I am an illegal alien, so I cannot identify myself. However, I have lived in the United States long enough to consider myself as patriotic as any American, if not more. I have been an avid supporter of Ronald Reagan since his California days. He has brought this blessed nation from the brink of disaster in 1980 to strength and prosperity unprecedented in two decades; you guys ought to pat yourselves on the back. Now, with the coming election campaign, even though I obviously cannot vote, I am rooting for the President and would like to make a few comments and suggestions. Please bear with me. They might sound amateurish but they represent the views of an average guy on the street.

- 1) All the talk about the budget deficit is overblown; coming from the BORN-AGAIN BALANCED BUDGET Democrats, one is reminded about the story of the hooker preaching the virtues of virginity. The <sup>national debt</sup> ~~deficit~~ represents about 44% of the G.N.P., about where it was in 1967 and half of what it was in 1949. You guys should read George Gilder's "WEALTH & POVERTY". We don't need a TAX INCREASE. No, No, No!!! Let Mondale hang himself. The President should keep his faith in himself.
- 2) For Pete's sake, don't let George Bush debate Gerry & Ferraro. She has a great T.V. personality; George does not. Any gain the President makes in his debates with Mondale will be more than offset by the Vice-Presidential fiasco. So, please!!!!!!
- 3) You should pay some attention to the House races. The Senate will probably stay Republican but you need more Republican members in the House to regain the ideological majority you enjoyed in 1981-82. In 1972, Nixon won a landslide victory but neglected the Congressional races; ask Bob Dole. He was the Party Chairman then and he was really pissed off. You fellows must not repeat that blunder. The President deserves hell of a lot more cooperation from Congress.

- 4) If the President wins, you should consider appointing Tip O'Neill Ambassador to Ireland. He is turning into a real big P-A-I-N. Let him go get bombed with Irish booze. Jim Wright would be <sup>a</sup>B-I-G improvement. You will have to work closely with a Democratic House in 1985 and this change would help.
- 5) Now a word about the 3,000 or so Cuban criminals presently in Federal prisons. They ought to be flown to the U.S. Naval Base at Guant<sup>n m</sup>anamo Bay and marched back into Cuba. CASTRO WON'T HAVE THE GUTS TO DO ANYTHING. This situation is a national disgrace. We should never have been subject to this kind of crap. Sending them back would really make the President a hero, especially in Florida where things are really terrible with these crooks. The contrast with Jimmy Carter will really come through. It would be totally justified and show Castro that we mean business. He and his Nicaraguan pals are now shipping drugs to America and need a big kick ~~in~~ in their behinds.

I wish I could participate more in our wonderful political process. I have no close relatives to sponsor me and I can't find suitable employment because I don't have a "green card", which I can't get until I find a good job in the first place. I am destined to be a second-class citizen for the rest of my life, nervously awaiting the knock on my door from the goons at the Immigration & Naturalization Service. GOD, I WISH AMERICANS WOULD APPRECIATE THEIR COUNTRY MORE ! IT IS THE GREATEST COUNTRY ON THIS EARTH. Watching the Olympics, whenever the flags begin waving and the Star Spangled Banner is played, it brings tears to my eyes. Mike, THANKS FOR HEARING ME OUT. GOD BLESS AMERICA !!!!!

Dear Mr. Speakes:

We are very much interested in running an interview with President Ronald Reagan in the November issue of HOMBRE (copy enclosed), which has a circulation of over 200,000 copies, all over Latin America. We would only require a few minutes with the President, and the opportunity of having some photographs taken during the interview. We agree to submit our questions in writing, and we would also accept a written answer from the President. We do have a deadline: August 20th.

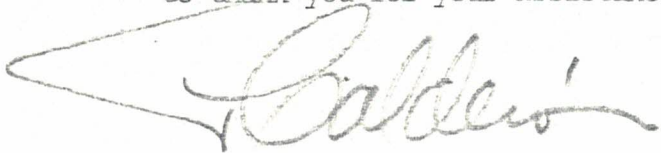

Our company is the largest editorial group in Latin America, also reaching the huge Hispanic market in the United States. I am also Editor-In-Chief of VANIDADES CONTINENTAL (circulation over 660,000 copies every two weeks), catered to the Latin American woman (please see the interview we ran with Mrs. Nancy Reagan in our April 12, 1983 edition). HOMBRE reaches the Latin American executive, politician and business man, at the decision making level. I must emphasize that we have established a solid reputation with our readers as a conservative and democratic magazine, and I personally feel proud of our contribution to divulge true information about the United States and President Ronald Reagan policies, at home and abroad.

Mr. David Rockefeller

Dear David:

Last Friday I met with Jim Larocca, Commissioner of Transportation for the State of New York, and his staff to discuss the Westway project and the State of New York's plan to mitigate the impact of this project on the striped bass.

The draft Environmental Impact Statement of the Corps of Engineers to which the Regional Administrator of EPA was responding stated that the landfill for Westway would have a "significant adverse impact" on the striped bass population. Once this statement was made, EPA's Regional Administrator in New York had no choice but to object to the permit for that landfill. The pertinent EPA regulations, set out at 40 CFR 230.10(c), forbid any permit that would result in "significant degradation" of waters of the United States. The regulations specify, as primary factors in determining "significant degradation", "significantly adverse impacts" on fish, fish habitat, and ecosystem productivity.

EPA comments on the draft Environmental Impact Statement represent the Regional Administrator's best evaluation of the record presented to him at that time. However, the process provides for new information and further study and for reconsideration of these views.

I have instructed those dealing with this issue at my Agency to work with the Corps of Engineers, Fish and Wildlife Service and all other agencies to see if a mitigation plan can be devised that is acceptable to all concerned.

In closing, David, I certainly agree with you that thirteen years is too long a time to have such an important project subjected to uncertainty and a decision must be reached.

Sincerely,

July 27, 1984

Dear Bill:

I am writing to convey my disappointment at the decision of EPA's regional administrator to again oppose the plans for the Westway park and highway complex. As you know, this ambitious and creative design to develop the lower west side of Manhattan has been snarled in bureaucracy and legal delays for more years than one would care to admit. It has been backed by the past three Presidents of the United States, the past four Governors of New York State and every Mayor of New York City since John Lindsay. It has bi-partisan support in the U. S. Congress. It has been endorsed by all three of New York's major daily newspapers, and has had enthusiastic business and labor support since it was first proposed. This project has great promise to do much more than just build a highway. It creates some 80 acres of parkland in an area of town notoriously barren of parks at present, surely a laudable environmental goal. It provides new housing and commercial opportunities. Above all, it retrieves a magnificent river frontage which has not been accessible to New Yorkers for generations.

However, rosy as this picture may be, the project is not without its detractors. In particular, the active and personal opposition of lower level bureaucrats in the Federal agencies again makes this promise a hollow one for most of us in New York. Once again, this project is in danger of being derailed. As a result, it is also in danger of being used for political football. There are indications that Governor Cuomo plans to use Westway as an issue on which to attack President Reagan for failing to follow through on an earlier commitment to New York.

Moreover, I am convinced that the State of New York, after some earlier erratic performance, has in the past year and a half provided a competent and highly professional administration of the project which has not been sufficiently recognized by the Federal agencies, including those of EPA. Accordingly, I feel it might be very useful for you to arrange a meeting directly between your office and that of the Commissioner of Transportation of New York, Mr. Jim Larocca, to review the State's plans to mitigate the impact of this project on the striped bass. I am sure you will find this plan quite impressive, as it proposes to dedicate some 200 acres of river bottom to this purpose. I will be interested to hear your reaction.

Again, I do appreciate your efforts to keep my office informed of on-going developments. I plan to be in Maine during most of August, but I have asked my assistant, Chris Kennan, to stay in touch with Ernie Minor of your staff, and to keep me posted on any new events.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

July 23, 1984

The President
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

Recently, a delegation from my union, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, had an opportunity to visit the Republic of China on Taiwan at the invitation of the Chinese Federation of Labor. If I may, let me take this opportunity to share with you the impressions which my delegation brought back from Taiwan.

First of all, however, I should tell you that, while I recognize the need for pragmatism and flexibility in foreign policy, I have been disappointed and frustrated at the treatment of Taiwan by the last four Administrations. Nothing in my delegation's report lessens that disappointment and frustration.

The blessings of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, so absent from the Chinese Mainland, are alive and well in Taiwan. The island's economic miracle continues, political liberties have been broadened, the morale of the people is still very high and the emotional ties between the R.O.C. and the U.S., despite our shabby policies, remain strong.

Mr. President, I share these thoughts with you in order to urge you to rethink your Taiwan policy and to provide the people there with the arms necessary for their self-defense. I know that you are a long-standing friend of Taiwan and the things for which it stands. But I fear that your will may be weakened by some in the U.S. who would counsel expediency over loyalty and politics over principle.

For the sale of defensive arms to Taiwan is a matter of principle and loyalty. It is also a matter, I believe, of self-interest. The Teamster representatives, while they were in the Far East, also met with trade union leaders from South Korea, Japan and Singapore who all agreed that the gravest threat to freedom and prosperity in the region was an expansionist Communist China. They expressed concern over the drift of American policy and our seeming lack of will to support our friends in Asia.

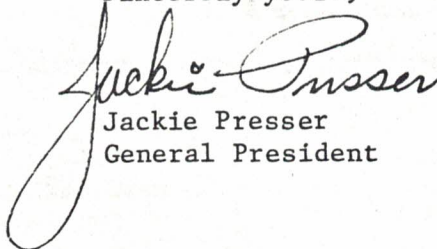

The 1982 joint communique, which calls for a gradual reduction in arm sales to Taiwan, was a mistake and possibly violated the Taiwan Relations Act. The ambiguity of that communique does not relieve us of the moral responsibility to ensure that our loyal friends on Taiwan, who far from ever betraying our trust sent their sons to fight along side ours in South Vietnam, do not fall victim to Communist aggression.

The President
The White House
Page 2

Therefore, Mr. President, I respectfully request that you authorize the sale to Taiwan of the arms necessary to deter such aggression, including F-16 fighters and Harpoon anti-ship missiles. Such a sale would not only demonstrate America's will, but, just as important, America's loyalty to true friends and allies.

Thank you for your time and your consideration in this matter.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Preston:

I'm sorry I can't be with you in Houston on August 14th to honor Jim Baker, but I want you to know how I feel about the tribute you're paying to Jim.

Nobody has served Ronald Reagan better or more loyally over the past four years than Jim Baker. Day after day I have personally seen Jim give totally of his strength, judgement and his wisdom -- not to mention his Texas horse-sense -- in helping our President turn this Nation around. It's truly remarkable how successful President Reagan has been during this first term -- the record speaks for itself, and the American people know it. And I can tell you, a good share of the credit for helping the President make history during these memorable years belongs to Jim Baker. Serving his President so well, Jim has well served his country.

All of you in Texas should be proud of Jim. He richly deserves the honor you're giving him, because he has stayed true to the qualities of patriotism, hard work, and self-sacrifice that define a Texan. So I want you to know this is one Californian -- but not the only one -- who is truly honored to call Jim "friend."

I have felt from the beginning of the Reagan administration, and have so stated in correspondence, that the president had surrounded himself with political neophytes who had egos that exceeded their respective abilities to perform. Your statement in the interview, as related in the enclosed article, has caused me to revise my opinion and add the word stupid. Or did the Democrats pay you to embarrass the president?

The combination of the president's so-called joke and your statement has damaged his campaign. Your statement reflected on his age, and if you are not of his age, it reflects on your lack of mental stability in handling your responsibilities.

Further, it resulted in the following. I had written two checks for the NCPAC. I destroyed them. I had written a check for the Florida Republican Committee. I destroyed it.

I had contributed the maximum under the law to the Reagan campaign. But my concern grows when people on the White House staff who are so eager to be nameless big shots with the media leak information that is distorted by the liberal media, and read and hear Bush's statement which contradicts the president on taxes.

There is one more contribution I would make. That would be to buy zippers to put on the mouths of staff members like you.

that would outlaw Russia forever. We begin bombing in five minutes."

No reporters or network technicians were present, but the joke was heard and recorded at the White House press center in Santa Barbara, where journalists normally monitor the broadcasts.

The two networks that recorded the joke, CBS and Cable News Network, said they agreed that it was off the record under an agreement they had with the White House and did not air it Saturday. Two years ago, while similarly testing his voice, Reagan referred to leaders of Poland's government as "a bunch of bums." The off-the-record agreement was reached after that. In that incident, as in Saturday's, a government employee apparently left open the microphone inadvertently and the networks heard the president's words before the start of his broadcast.

Since news accounts of the joke were first reported Sunday evening, there has been a storm of criticism abroad and from critics in the United States.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., who unsuccessfully sought his party's presidential nomination, suggested

Aide: Dull Cabinet makes chief doze

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — (UPI) — A top White House official acknowledged Monday that President Reagan sometimes dozes off during Cabinet meetings but said it has "more to do with what's going on in the meeting than what time of day it is."

The comment was made in an interview by Michael Deaver with NBC's Chris Wallace in connection with a televised profiled on Reagan.

Wallace observed that "even when he's working, some officials have described a disengaged president" who "just accepts staff recommendations" and sleeps during meetings between 1 p.m. and 3 p.m.

"Just as he did with the pope, Mr. Reagan sometimes dozes off in meetings," Wallace said.

"Yes," Deaver replied. "These meetings are sometimes boring, and I doze off, too. I've seen him have difficulty staying awake, but he wasn't the only one in the room that does. I think it has more to do with what's going on in the meeting than what time of day it is."

When asked about the interview Monday, Deaver asked a reporter: "Have you ever sat through one of those Cabinet meetings?"

During his trip to the Vatican in 1982, Reagan was caught taking a snooze while sitting next to the pope, who was delivering a televised address.

that Reagan's remark reflects the chief executive's true feelings.

"I think we're increasingly seeing the president of the United States exercising very, very poor judgment on matters of extreme importance to this country," Hart said.

"Maybe it's the early stages of the national re-election campaign.

It could be that he's not getting enough vacation time. Who knows?" Hart said.

In Britain, an opposition member of Parliament, Labor's David Winnick, urged Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher "to tell President Reagan that the British people are not amused by his sick form of humor."

Dear Michael Deaver Will

- When the Arab League declined the use of U.S. troops, it signaled that they could not help defend their oil producing facilities against missiles. Troops cannot defend any element of nations against missiles.
- We don't need a targeted land based MX, when we have non targeted Polaris, Poseidon and Trident MXs, targeting the Kremlin, etc.
- We don't need manned B-1 bombers, as sea based Cruise Missile unmanned bombers can readily pierce Soviet air defenses in a saturation assault @ $1 million each, vs $300 million suspect B-1 Edsells.
- We don't need a 'star wars' missile defense system, since Soviet ship and sub based 'flat trajectory' missiles fly pass - target under it.
- We don't need any more 'sitting duck' WW II Class, Kama Kaze and missile prone aircraft carriers, as most mobile missile cruisers, destroyers and frigates are readied for any sea or land support contingency and mission.
- Since our Polaris, Poseidon and Trident missiles can in warm time, pin point assassinate potential enemy leaders and <sup>destroy</sup> their <sup>defence</sup> systems, conventional 'smart bomb' missiles suffice, to protect millions of innocents, among them - our children.

- We don't need a 600 ship navy to keep the sea lanes open, so U.S. grain can safely reach Soviet ports.

This is the Missile Age, and the only effective defense posture needed, is sub based non nuclear missiles, targeted on the leaders and their comms systems, of potential military enemy nations, and we have it - only change to conventional missiles - war heads.

After the Convention, Pres. Reagan should convene a special session of the Congress, for a Balanced Budget, and propose that Social Security - Medicare, which are revolving Trust Funds, be divorced from the single year general revenue budget, and balance the latter, based on the above - only needed, non nuclear, sub based missile defense, with added deficit cuts made based on the Peace Commission Report.

Our physical security is assured, and a balanced budget will assure our economic security - the life blood of nations, with no sacrifices needed, only adjustments inherent with the transition from a war based, to a peacetime economy.

There is no justification for direct tax increases, and a stable peacetime oriented economy, can become reality, with its unimagined productivity and consumption, providing the budget surpluses to reduce the National Debt; but most important, to regain our Super Economic Power supremacy, lost to Japan, and this might - the life ~~the~~ blood of nations - can influence whatever foreign policy needed, to be the political and moral leader of nations.

For global credibility, we cannot continue to live in two conflicting worlds, with the Soviet Union. One, wherein we are peaceful grain and vodka trading partners; and one wherein this peaceful trade is threatened by potential military confrontation, mainly based on the differences of political and social ideologies, which military <sup>confrontation</sup> will not change - but peaceful trade may.

To regain our Economic Supremacy, will mandate political, personal, special - but not material sacrifices, while maintaining our morality, which is the spiritual life blood of nations.

In the Missile Age no nation can lead militarily - inherent with the proliferation with nuclear and "high tech" conventional weapons. Trade is the cement for peaceful coexistence among nations, and the sharing of its abundance with those less fortunate. This is the never ending Olympiad.

Regardless of who is president or which party controls the Congress - soon a Constitutional Convention will mandate a balanced budget, and how will it be balanced to prevent fiscal, economic, social and political chaos?

It's time for Statesmanship of the founders, covered in the Constitution - mainly the survival thrust of the Republic, mandated in para 1, Sec 8, Article I - "to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States". There is no appropriate term - "neoliberalism".

For the future - our children, the only biological reason for Being!

Dear Mike,

Thanks for the time the other day. I really appreciate it.

I also appreciate - more than I can say - five good seats for the President's acceptance speech on Thursday, August 23rd. The tickets are for my client Ed Hennessy, his wife and family. Ed Hennessy is Chairman of Allied Corporation - and the guest - since he's only coming to Dallas, just for this event.

Thanks Mike. Perhaps you'll tell Donna how
I can get them <sup>(the tickets)</sup> in Dallas.
I'll be arriving on Thursday, August 16th and staying at the Hyatt. I'll call Santa Barbara and check in if I may.

Hope the house sale - and your search here all comes together. It will be great to have the Deavers living here permanently.

Affectionately,
Doreen
