Dear Gerard and Kitty:

First, thanks for the marvelous book The National Museum of American History. We've already spent a good deal of time looking and enjoying, but are really anticipating having the time to sit down and do it justice.

We had a marvelous time during the holidays. We spent Christmas in Williamsburg, and New Years at Squaw Valley. We arranged for snow both times.

Thanks again for the great book, and our very best for the happiest of New Years.

Dear Henry:

I'm sorry I have been so long in thanking you for your lovely gesture of sending the perfume and bath oil for me and the clock for Mr. Deaver. Our legal Office has just advised us that the White House policy and regulations governing Federal employees prohibit us from accepting your generous gifts. Therefore, with embarrassment, I am returning your items.

I appreciate your thoughtfulness and truly wish I could keep the gifts.

Dear Shirley:

I'm so sorry to have disturbed you knowing how hectic things are. I've sent the enclosed letter at the suggestion of Greg Newell, but I know everything depends on your kind work behind the scenes.

Did Billy Shaddix give you the two small boxes for yourself and the box for Mike? I hope it got there okay and I'll wait to hear from all the powers that be.

Cordially yours,

Mr. Michael K. Deaver

THE WHITE HOUSE
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. Deaver:

Back from Europe, I found your letter of December 17th kindly thanking me for the book I had sent you to wish you a happy 1983. Minutes later, I found the same book returned to me with a second letter informing me that you could not accept it because of the White House rules.

I was unaware that such rules include the gift of a book, thus I read this information with an astonishment that was overcome only by an hysterical amusement. How good to know that the work of we writers is as precious as a Japanese watch.

In Europe, alas, it is not. We Europeans do not consider books as vehicles of corruption attempts. On the contrary, we consider them as an intellectual exchange and an intellectual tribute to those who keep culture and good taste in high respect.

Thanks anyway for an experience which, though negative, has enriched my knowledge as a writer, as a journalist, as a civilized person. Someday I should write about it.

Best regards,

Oriana Fallaci
