Agreement with the USSR on Contacts, Exchanges and Cooperation

BACKGROUND

From 1958 through 1979 the United States and the Soviet Union were parties to a series of General Agreements on Contacts, Exchanges and Cooperation which served as the general document for cultural, educational, scientific, technical, and other types of exchanges with the USSR. Negotiations to renew the last Agreement broke down in late 1979 and were terminated following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. Secretary Shultz, with the authorization of the President in June 1983, proposed to Ambassador Dobrynin that negotiations leading toward conclusion of a new bilateral Agreement be renewed. The Soviet Government responded positively to the Secretary's proposal on July 15, 1983, but we suspended further movement toward negotiations following the shootdown of the KAL airliner. Pursuant to the NSC memorandum of March 12, 1984, the Department and USIA have prepared language for a U.S. proposal for a new General Agreement (attached at Tab A) and for a specific 3-year Program of Cooperation and Exchanges (attached at Tab B) for interagency coordination if this general approach is approved.

NEGOTIATING STRATEGY

Our strategy for the negotiations is to seek full reciprocity from the Soviets within the framework of an official Exchanges Agreement. This recognizes that unless the U.S. has an effective official framework for handling exchanges, the Soviets may make separate arrangements with private U.S. sponsors, while denying us reciprocal access to the Soviet Union. To ensure that U.S.-Soviet exchanges are properly monitored to protect U.S. security and intelligence interests, the Office of Soviet Union Affairs in the Department of State will be tasked to serve as the central clearinghouse, in close liaison with USIA, for exchanges conducted under the General Agreement and the Program of Cooperation and Exchanges. Moreover, the Department intends to pursue the objective of rescinding or modifying the McGovern Amendment in order to strengthen its control over authorization or denial of visas to Soviet groups and individuals.

Following are brief notes on the major types of exchanges proposed in cultural, educational and informational fields [the science and technology fields are covered by separate agreements; Article II of the General Agreement (Tab A) lists the seven agreements which are still operative.]

1. Travelling thematic exhibits These highly effective exhibits, viewed by millions of Soviet citizens throughout the USSR, have great impact among the Soviet populace. We propose at least two such thematic exhibits to circulate in the Soviet Union during the 3-year period of the Program of Cooperation and Exchanges and a total of at least four during the 6-year validity of the General Agreement. Each would be shown in six cities of the Soviet Union, with one month's actual showing time in each city.

2. Television Appearances We are introducing this as part of a new Agreement in order to reach the Soviet population with statements of U.S. policy. The draft Agreement provides for an annual exchange of at least six television appearances by representatives of each country, including at least one exchange by the Chiefs of State. We believe that we can obtain the cooperation of the U.S. TV networks on this exchange when we explain to them that we are not trying to place any limits on their access to Soviets, but simply concerned that we obtain improved TV access to the Soviet people.

3. Performing Arts Groups and Individual Performers In spite of the absence of an Exchanges Agreement, the Soviets have continued to show interest in sending performing arts groups (PAGs) and individual performers to the U.S., and there are signs of a resurgence of interest by American impresarios. The draft Program provides for tours of at least 10 major PAGs and at least 20 individual performing artists from each side during the 3-year period of the Program. We have inserted language of reciprocity in the draft Program providing that, should one side send more than the numbers indicated above, the other side would be accorded the opportunity, if it wished, to send like numbers of additional PAGs or individual performing artists. With these provisions in an official agreement, we will be able to send our performers on tour in the USSR and to have control over the quality and type of American PAGs and individual performing artists touring the Soviet Union. In turn, we will have better control over the Soviet PAGs and individual performers coming to the United States. American PAGs such as the New York City Ballet, the Alvin Ailey Dancers, Duke Ellington and his Orchestra, and the American Conservatory Theater of San Francisco had tremendous impact in the Soviet Union.

4. Educational/Academic Exchanges Despite the absence of an official exchanges agreement since 1979, both countries have continued the higher educational/academic exchanges, although in reduced numbers. These exchanges are organized and administered by the International Research and Exchanges Board (IREX) in close coordination with USIA and our Embassy in Moscow. They will continue to be implemented on the basis of reciprocity in numbers under any new agreement. We are, moreover, seeking in the draft Program agreement that not more than half of the participants on either side will be in the natural and physical sciences, which is where the Soviets seek to concentrate their exchangees. The U.S. currently has numerous private academic programs which are in our favor, for which the Soviets have not raised questions of reciprocity. Hundreds of Americans go to the Soviet Union annually under such programs primarily to study Russian for academic credit. The Soviets have avoided such programs in the U.S. for that age group, but we have inserted language in the draft Program to encourage them to send Soviet youngsters to the U.S.

5. America Illustrated and Soviet Life Magazine Exchange Our Russian-language America Illustrated magazine is extremely popular in the Soviet Union. Its sales in the USSR are permitted only through the Soviet government's distributing organization, which can control the number of copies sold out of the total number of copies of each issue delivered to it each month. Supposedly "unsold" returns of America Illustrated have been a problem through most of the history of the exchanges program, and currently average about 10,000 copies per issue. The provision in the draft Program that both sides may distribute unsold copies of the magazines free of charge to visitors to mutually arranged exhibits is a crucial factor in implementing the contingent provision that the distribution level of the magazines might possibly be increased once the currently agreed distribution level of 62,000 copies per issue has been achieved.

6. U.S. Film Weeks and Film Premieres in the USSR Although we have not been active under this provision in our previous exchanges agreements, we intend to use every opportunity aggressively to implement it under any new agreement, in reciprocity for Soviet film weeks and premieres organized in the U.S.

7. Congressional and Other Governmental Exchanges Article X of the Agreement allows for the exchange of members of Congress, officials of the national governments, and representatives of municipal, local and state governments of the two countries, which has proven an especially effective means of gaining access to Soviet political leaders.

8. Sports Exchanges and Tourism Articles XII and XIV of the Agreement provides a framework for continuing these types of activities which have been supported by the private sector in the U.S. and are useful in providing low-key access to "non-political" sectors of Soviet society.

MAJOR OBJECTIVES

The major problems in negotiating a new Exchanges Agreement with the Soviets will involve our highest priority objectives -- reinstituting USIA thematic exhibits and assuring access to Soviet television by our representatives, including the President. Unless we achieve those objectives in the negotiations, the overall value for the U.S. of an Exchanges Agreement will be in doubt. In any event, we should be prepared to refuse to conclude an agreement if we judge the balance of benefits inadequate in relation to our objectives.

VENUE OF NEGOTIATIONS

The exchanges negotiations should be held in Moscow. This would balance the negotiations on the establishment of additional consulates to be held in Washington at about the same time. More important, it should accelerate the decisionmaking process for the Soviets by providing them with ready access to senior levels of their regime. Ambassador Hartman would be protocolary head of the delegation, with the Embassy Counselor for Press and Cultural Affairs, an officer with extensive experience in Soviet exchanges, conducting the day-to-day talks for the American side.

RECOMMENDATION

That this strategy paper and the attached drafts of a General Agreement and Program of Cooperation and Exchanges be forwarded to the President for his review and approval.

The receiving side, taking into consideration realistic possibilities, will seek to satisfy the wishes of the sending side concerning the selection of groups and timing, with the duration of the tours in-country and the number of cities to be visited to be based on a principle of rough equivalence between countries for similar type performing arts groups. DECLASSIFIED

MEMORANDUM FOR ROBERT C. MCFARLANE

NLRR Folio-114/11 #11848

FROM:

JACK MATLOCK *Jew*BY KML NARA DATE 4/22/11

SUBJECT:

Agreement with the USSR on Contacts, Exchanges and Cooperation

Attached at Tab II is State's submission of a negotiating plan for an Agreement on Contacts, Exchanges and Cooperation with the USSR, and a draft agreement and program of exchanges to serve as the basis of our position in these negotiations. The paper has been approved by USIA and State and there are no differences of view on the issues.

The U.S. objective in the negotiation would be to seek full reciprocity from the Soviets within the framework of the agreement. State would also seek to have the McGovern Amendment rescinded or modified in order to strengthen its control over visa issuance for the purpose of enforcing reciprocity.

Among the exchange programs proposed, the restoration of travelling thematic exhibits and assuring access to Soviet television by our representatives, including the President, have the highest priority.

Regarding the venue of negotiations, the paper recommends that they be conducted in Moscow, with Ambassador Hartman the head of our delegation and the Embassy Counselor for Press and Cultural Affairs in charge of the day-to-day negotiations.

Comment:

I believe that this is a sound negotiating plan which correctly defines priority American objectives. Past precedent would indicate that the Soviets will accept our position on exhibits, but resist access to their television. They may also attempt to secure formal assurances on the return of would-be defectors (as was the case in 1979, when we last held negotiations on this agreement). Such an attempt would of course be firmly resisted.

Therefore, although negotiations may be prolonged and difficult, I believe that our package is appropriate and in fact negotiable. I also concur that there are advantages to holding the negotiations in Moscow, since this will facilitate rapid Soviet decision making and provide some insulation against leaks.

Secretary Shultz would like to propose to Dobrynin during his next meeting that we set a date for the commencement of negotiations on this topic. I believe that we are well prepared at this point to move forward, and recommend that the negotiating package be approved and that Shultz be authorized to seek a date for the start of negotiations.

Recommendation:

That you authorize the Kimmitt to Hill memorandum at Tab I which approves the negotiating plan and draft and authorizes the Secretary of State to propose setting a date for negotiations to begin.

Agreement with the USSR on Contacts, Exchanges and Cooperation

BACKGROUND

From 1958 through 1979 the United States and the Soviet Union were parties to a series of General Agreements on Contacts, Exchanges and Cooperation which served as the general document for cultural, educational, scientific, technical, and other types of exchanges with the USSR. Negotiations to renew the last Agreement broke down in late 1979 and were terminated following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. Secretary Shultz, with the authorization of the President in June 1983, proposed to Ambassador Dobrynin that negotiations leading toward conclusion of a new bilateral Agreement be renewed. The Soviet Government responded positively to the Secretary's proposal on July 15, 1983, but we suspended further movement toward negotiations following the shootdown of the KAL airliner. Pursuant to the NSC memorandum of March 12, 1984, the Department and USIA have prepared language for a U.S. proposal for a new General Agreement (attached at Tab A) and for a specific 3-year Program of Cooperation and Exchanges (attached at Tab B) for interagency coordination if this general approach is approved.

NEGOTIATING STRATEGY

Our strategy for the negotiations is to seek full reciprocity from the Soviets within the framework of an official Exchanges Agreement. This recognizes that unless the U.S. has an effective official framework for handling exchanges, the Soviets may make separate arrangements with private U.S. sponsors, while denying us reciprocal access to the Soviet Union. To ensure that U.S.-Soviet exchanges are properly monitored to protect U.S. security and intelligence interests, the Office of Soviet Union Affairs in the Department of State will be tasked to serve as the central clearinghouse, in close liaison with USIA, for exchanges conducted under the General Agreement and the Program of Cooperation and Exchanges. Moreover, the Department intends to pursue the objective of rescinding or modifying the McGovern Amendment in order to strengthen its control over authorization or denial of visas to Soviet groups and individuals.

Following are brief notes on the major types of exchanges proposed in cultural, educational and informational fields [the science and technology fields are covered by separate agreements; Article II of the General Agreement (Tab A) lists the seven agreements which are still operative.]

1. Travelling thematic exhibits These highly effective exhibits, viewed by millions of Soviet citizens throughout the USSR, have great impact among the Soviet populace. We propose at least two such thematic exhibits to circulate in the Soviet Union during the 3-year period of the Program of Cooperation and Exchanges and a total of at least four during the 6-year validity of the General Agreement. Each would be shown in six cities of the Soviet Union, with one month's actual showing time in each city.

2. Television Appearances We are introducing this as part of a new Agreement in order to reach the Soviet population with statements of U.S. policy. The draft Agreement provides for an annual exchange of at least six television appearances by representatives of each country, including at least one exchange by the Chiefs of State. We believe that we can obtain the cooperation of the U.S. TV networks on this exchange when we explain to them that we are not trying to place any limits on their access to Soviets, but simply concerned that we obtain improved TV access to the Soviet people.

3. Performing Arts Groups and Individual Performers In spite of the absence of an Exchanges Agreement, the Soviets have continued to show interest in sending performing arts groups (PAGs) and individual performers to the U.S., and there are signs of a resurgence of interest by American impresarios. The draft Program provides for tours of at least 10 major PAGs and at least 20 individual performing artists from each side during the 3-year period of the Program. We have inserted language of reciprocity in the draft Program providing that, should one side send more than the numbers indicated above, the other side would be accorded the opportunity, if it wished, to send like numbers of additional PAGs or individual performing artists. With these provisions in an official agreement, we will be able to send our performers on tour in the USSR and to have control over the quality and type of American PAGs and individual performing artists touring the Soviet Union. In turn, we will have better control over the Soviet PAGs and individual performers coming to the United States. American PAGs such as

the New York City Ballet, the Alvin Ailey Dancers, Duke Ellington and his Orchestra, and the American Conservatory Theater of San Francisco had tremendous impact in the Soviet Union.

4. Educational/Academic Exchanges Despite the absence of an official exchanges agreement since 1979, both countries have continued the higher educational/academic exchanges, although in reduced numbers. These exchanges are organized and administered by the International Research and Exchanges Board (IREX) in close coordination with USIA and our Embassy in Moscow. They will continue to be implemented on the basis of reciprocity in numbers under any new agreement. We are, moreover, seeking in the draft Program agreement that not more than half of the participants on either side will be in the natural and physical sciences, which is where the Soviets seek to concentrate their exchangees. The U.S. currently has numerous private academic programs which are in our favor, for which the Soviets have not raised questions of reciprocity. Hundreds of Americans go to the Soviet Union annually under such programs primarily to study Russian for academic credit. The Soviets have avoided such programs in the U.S. for that age group, but we have inserted language in the draft Program to encourage them to send Soviet youngsters to the U.S.

5. America Illustrated and Soviet Life Magazine Exchange Our Russian-language America Illustrated magazine is extremely popular in the Soviet Union. Its sales in the USSR are permitted only through the Soviet government's distributing organization, which can control the number of copies sold out of the total number of copies of each issue delivered to it each month. Supposedly "unsold" returns of America Illustrated have been a problem through most of the history of the exchanges program, and currently average about 10,000 copies per issue. The provision in the draft Program that both sides may distribute unsold copies of the magazines free of charge to visitors to mutually arranged exhibits is a crucial factor in implementing the contingent provision that the distribution level of the magazines might possibly be increased once the currently agreed distribution level of 62,000 copies per issue has been achieved.

6. U.S. Film Weeks and Film Premieres in the USSR Although we have not been active under this provision in our previous exchanges agreements, we intend to use every opportunity aggressively to implement it under any new agreement, in reciprocity for Soviet film weeks and premieres organized in the U.S.

7. Congressional and Other Governmental Exchanges Article X of the Agreement allows for the exchange of members of Congress, officials of the national governments, and representatives of municipal, local and state governments of the two countries, which has proven an especially effective means of gaining access to Soviet political leaders.

8. Sports Exchanges and Tourism Articles XII and XIV of the Agreement provides a framework for continuing these types of activities which have been supported by the private sector in the U.S. and are useful in providing low-key access to "non-political" sectors of Soviet society.

MAJOR OBJECTIVES

The major problems in negotiating a new Exchanges Agreement with the Soviets will involve our highest priority objectives -- reinstituting USIA thematic exhibits and assuring access to Soviet television by our representatives, including the President. Unless we achieve those objectives in the negotiations, the overall value for the U.S. of an Exchanges Agreement will be in doubt. In any event, we should be prepared to refuse to conclude an agreement if we judge the balance of benefits inadequate in relation to our objectives.

VENUE OF NEGOTIATIONS

The exchanges negotiations should be held in Moscow. This would balance the negotiations on the establishment of additional consulates to be held in Washington at about the same time. More important, it should accelerate the decisionmaking process for the Soviets by providing them with ready access to senior levels of their regime. Ambassador Hartman would be protocolary head of the delegation, with the Embassy Counselor for Press and Cultural Affairs, an officer with extensive experience in Soviet exchanges, conducting the day-to-day talks for the American side.

RECOMMENDATION

That this strategy paper and the attached drafts of a General Agreement and Program of Cooperation and Exchanges be forwarded to the President for his review and approval.

SUBJECT:

Agreement with the USSR on Contacts, Exchanges and Cooperation

Attached at Tab II is State's submission of a negotiating plan for an Agreement on Contacts, Exchanges and Cooperation with the USSR, and a draft agreement and program of exchanges to serve as the basis of our position in these negotiations. The paper has been approved by USIA and State and there are no differences of view on the issues.

The U.S. objective in the negotiation would be to seek full reciprocity from the Soviets within the framework of the agreement. State would also seek to have the McGovern Amendment rescinded or modified in order to strengthen its control over visa issuance for the purpose of enforcing reciprocity.

Among the exchange programs proposed, the restoration of travelling thematic exhibits and assuring access to Soviet television by our representatives, including the President, have the highest priority.

Regarding the venue of negotiations, the paper recommends that they be conducted in Moscow, with Ambassador Hartman the head of our delegation and the Embassy Counselor for Press and Cultural Affairs in charge of the day-to-day negotiations.

Comment:

I believe that this is a sound negotiating plan which correctly defines priority American objectives. Past precedent would indicate that the Soviets will accept our position on exhibits, but resist access to their television. They may also attempt to secure formal assurances on the return of would-be defectors (as was the case in 1979, when we last held negotiations on this agreement). Such an attempt would of course be firmly resisted.

Therefore, although negotiations may be prolonged and difficult, I believe that our package is appropriate and in fact negotiable. I also concur that there are advantages to holding the negotiations in Moscow, since this will facilitate rapid Soviet decision making and provide some insulation against leaks.

Secretary Shultz would like to propose to Dobrynin during his next meeting that we set a date for the commencement of negotiations on this topic. I believe that we are well prepared at this point to move forward, and recommend that the negotiating package be approved and that Shultz be authorized to seek a date for the start of negotiations.

Recommendation:

That you authorize the Kimmitt to Hill memorandum at Tab I which approves the negotiating plan and draft and authorizes the Secretary of State to propose setting a date for negotiations to begin.
