TALKING POINTS: GREETING TO COUNCIL ON AGING
MAY 19, 1982

- Welcome to you all and congratulations to the Council's new members. It's especially fitting you should be appointed during May, which is Older Americans Month. By the way, I'm glad May was chosen to honor Older Americans rather than one of the months in the fall. I've never like referring to old age as the autumn of life; there's no reason all our years can't be spring ones.
- Looking around this table, I'm pleased to find myself among so many of my contemporaries -- I'm told about half of the Council is over 65 . . . usually I'm the oldest person here. But I agree with Bernard Baruch, who said that old age was always 15 years older than he was. I think that is the way most older Americans feel and we need to combat this idea old age is a burden.
- As you know, that is where you come in. Your role of advising the Nation on the needs and potential of older Americans is an important one. I am looking to this Council to provide leadership emphasizing the positive nature of aging, encouraging older persons to continue contributing their talents to the country, and helping the government help those older persons who need our assistance.

- In the meantime we are making good strides on many problems most upsetting to our older population, like inflation and energy. Other things require increased attention. I believe senior citizens deserve the right to work if they choose to, and I will back legislation which eliminates mandatory retirement based solely on age. Social Security is a continuing problem more often marked by political demagoguery than responsibility. I am deeply committed to ensuring the fiscal soundness of Social Security.

- Finally, let me say I'm pleased you're joining me in getting out the message that we are endowed with a healthy and vigorous senior group. We're going to do all we can to tap the knowledge and experience of older Americans, just as I'm going to tap that of this Council. Thank you.
