PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: RECEPTION FOR SECRETARY SCHWEIKER
THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1983

Thank you all very much for gathering here with me to honor my good friend Dick Schweiker. For the last 2 years, Dick has been running what he calls the "people's department," administering those programs that bring the most direct aid to Americans who need Government's help. I know you all agree that he has done an excellent job. Dick, speaking for all of us here and on behalf of the country you have served so well, thank you.

Due in large part to your leadership and management, we have been able to slow the growth of social spending while shoring up the safety net for the truly needy. You have balanced these demands of fiscal responsibility and human compassion with great competence and caring. And you have once again infused our policies with the values that made our country great.

But I will miss you, Dick, not just for your record of accomplishments at HHS, which is long. You are a trusted and valued friend who has been at my side for many years. Together, you and I have waged a sometimes lonely and always challenging battle to bring common sense back to Government and return to our people power over their own lives. I have relied on you for wise and honest counsel and counted on your support. Dick, you never let me down.

I knew when I asked you to take on this tremendous job that you had been planning to return to the private sector. I am grateful that you put aside your personal wishes long enough to make yet another outstanding contribution to the public good as Secretary of Health and Human Services.

I look forward to working with your successor, Margaret Heckler, and know she will continue the excellent work you have begun. Her ability and energy will be put to good use. But your colleagues and I will miss you, Dick. Thank you, again, for your friendship, leadership and support. I hope that will remain unchanged. Good luck, and God bless you.
