July 25, 1983

75th ANNIVERSARY OBSERVANCE OF THE FBI

DATE: July 26, 1983
LOCATION: J. Edgar Hoover FBI Building
TIME: 11:00 am (35 Minutes)
FROM: Craig L. Fuller

I. PURPOSE

To personally salute the employees of the FBI and to sign a Proclamation declaring July 26, 1983 as "FBI Day."

II. BACKGROUND

July 26, 1983, will mark the 75th Anniversary of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. In accordance with this milestone, the FBI has planned a five-day commemoration which will culminate with a short ceremony in the courtyard of the J. Edgar Hoover FBI Building.

When Theodore Roosevelt assumed the Presidency, public corruption was rampant. The primary federal law enforcement agency, the Department of Justice, had no permanent detective force to conduct investigations. An exasperated President Roosevelt directed Attorney General Charles J. Bonaparte to organize an investigative service within the Department of Justice. On July 26, 1908, Attorney General Bonaparte issued an order doing just that. In 1909 the service became the Bureau of Investigation and in 1935 it took the name it still retains: the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Beginning as an organization with 35 employees and a budget in the thousands, the FBI has become an organization with more than 19,000 employees and a budget of over one billion dollars.

The signing of a Presidential Proclamation declaring July 26, 1983 as "FBI Day" will give you an opportunity to express appreciation to the employees of the FBI and to reaffirm your commitment to support our law enforcement and intelligence community.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: 75th ANNIVERSARY OF THE FBI
TUESDAY, JULY 26, 1983

Judge Webster, special agents and staff of the FBI, distinguished guests.

The proclamation I am about to sign outlines the history and accomplishments of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Believe me, it makes for impressive reading. But I could not help thinking this morning that no document or official history of the exploits of the men and women of the FBI could ever really capture what the bureau -- what the letters "FBI" themselves -- mean to the people whose way of life you are sworn to serve and protect.

To the American people you are a legend; and this is rightfully so. FBI agents have always been thought of as a cut above ordinary, as law enforcement agents whose dedication and professionalism make them a first line of defense against mobsters, spies, corrupt public officials, and other professional wrongdoers who prey on the innocent and undermine the moral foundations of our society. The personal qualities of the special agents of the FBI have made the bureau the most corruption-free institution in the history of law enforcement, and one of the most modern and advanced agencies of its kind in the world.

Recently, we have passed through a painful era in American history when it seemed that many of our proudest values and most important institutions were called into question. It is my personal belief that as mindless and destructive as some of this criticism was, its final result has been not only a reaffirmation of those institutions and those values but a new and greater understanding and appreciation for their usefulness and their meaning. The FBI will continue to look to the future, to use the latest and most sophisticated techniques to fight organized crime, white collar crime, terrorism -- in short, to do what needs to be done to protect the law-abiding people of the United States.

Today, under Judge Webster's leadership, the FBI takes on great new challenges -- for the first time you are involved in the investigation of narcotics and dangerous drugs trade and already you have brought to this endeavor the kind of expertise and skill we have come to expect of you. You also face the threat of increased KGB and other hostile intelligence activities.

The challenge of crime today in America is a grave one. As you know, upon entering office this Administration addressed itself immediately to the economic crisis we were facing at that time as well as to the dangerous decline that had taken place in our Nation's national security and military strength. Yet even while we worked on these difficult problems we still kept work on the Nation's crime problem foremost in our mind.

Last year, when I announced at the Justice Department our eight-point program for attacking this problem, I was pleased to be able to announce a very sizable expansion of Justice Department personnel including for the first time in many years additional agents for the FBI. We are now moving forward with the other elements of that crime program; we are doing so methodically and carefully but with one goal in mind. The recent increase in the drug trade, which has led to your new role in this battle, is really a reflection of an even deeper problem: the criminal networks and syndicates that have been tolerated in America for too long. I can only repeat to you that we are going after organized crime, root and branch; our goal is to break the power of the mob in America and nothing short of it. We mean to end their profits, imprison their members, and cripple their organization.

The FBI has been, and is today, in the forefront of this battle. In recent years you have scored admirable successes against professional criminals and their organizations. What is called for now is a renewed national strategy and a unified effort to achieve this objective. And in this regard, I will be announcing later this week a commission, headed by a distinguished jurist, that will have as its mission full and open scrutiny of the social problem of organized crime, a problem that has too often been thought of as the concern of only those of you in law enforcement.

You also stand at the forefront of our efforts to detect and counter the increasing hostile intelligence threat to our country. Espionage, theft and diversion of our technology, and Soviet "active measures" threaten us as never before. This part of your duty, about which I can say little in detail here, is vital to our national security and I ask that you continue to devote the special attention which this difficult task requires.

On this, your 75th anniversary, I ask you to redouble your efforts to break apart and ultimately cripple the criminal syndicates in America. I also ask that you continue to give the highest priority to deterring and countering hostile intelligence activities within the U.S. The FBI's record of fidelity, bravery, and integrity is a long and distinguished one. At each turn in your history, when criminals have engaged in new or advanced forms of criminal activity, you have led the law enforcement community in responding to these threats. Once again, you are being asked by the American people for that kind of leadership, that kind of selfless dedication. I want to say to you that I know you will respond as you always have -- with excellence and with fervor. I want to say to all the agents and staff of the Federal Bureau of Investigation that the American people are proud of your past and your present -- and we are grateful that you will be there for all of the challenges that lie in our future.

And now I will sign the proclamation designating today, July 26, 1983, as FBI Day.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: LUNCHEON WITH KEY SUPPORTERS
TUESDAY, JULY 26, 1983

-- I'm delighted to have you here with us and to see some familiar faces.

-- You have my heartfelt thanks for all you've been doing for us and, more importantly, for America.

-- In less than 3 years, we've begun to turn our country around. Yes, we're still wrestling with enormous problems. But I'm firmly convinced America is stronger and our freedom more secure today than it was.

-- We have an economic program designed to put people back to work and keep inflation and interest rates low: it's called economic recovery.

-- Since last December the number of people with jobs increased 1.1 million.

-- Economic growth in the second quarter surged to 8.7 percent.

-- When we arrived, inflation was in double-digits. We've knocked it down to 2.6 for the last year, and 2.9 percent for the last 6 months.

-- The prime rate was 21½ percent. Today it's down to 10½.

-- Tax rates have been cut, productivity is growing, and America is leading the way to a worldwide recovery.

-- We're taking long-overdue steps to keep Social Security sound, reduce crime and improve education.

-- And America no longer speaks with an uncertain voice overseas. We're providing leadership to defend the freedom of the West and preserve the peace.

-- Thanks to bipartisan support, the M-X Peacekeeper program is moving forward.

-- This will give us the leverage we need to pursue real, mutual and verifiable, strategic arms reductions.

-- America still faces a mountain of obstacles. But for the first time in a long time, we're making real headway toward stronger growth, more opportunity, stable prices and safety and security for our families.
