THE GO TE STORY TO SOLVE TO SO

Dear Roy:

Thank you for your letter of February 27 outlining your ideas for helping the new government of the Phillipines increase its industrial employment.

The best person to be in contact with is Ambassador Ernie Presq who is in the Department of State's East Asian Bureau. His telephone number is 647-4835. He is in the Phillipines at this time to help assess their economic assistance needs and will be returning soon.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Donald T. Regan Chief of Staff to the President of the United States

JOHN M. POINDEXTER

The guru for Philippine economic questions, including private sector opportunities, is Ambassador Ernie Preeg in State's East Asian Bureau at 647-4835. He is with Peter McPherson on his mission to the Philippines to assess Philippine economic assistance needs and will be returning soon.

I suggest you may want to tell Royal Little to have someone be in touch directly with Ernie Preeg. Ernie knows about Little's interest and will be pleased to follow up.

Mr. Donald Regan Chief of Staff White House Washington, D. C.

Dear Don:

I have an idea that I believe would be worth our country's considering as the best way to help the Philippines' new government increase its industrial employment.

In the past, we at Textron had direct participation in Puerto Rico's Operation Bootstrap, whereby companies and the management were assured tax exemption for ten years in addition to substantial financial assistance in building and equipping factories to those companies, many American, who would start an operation in Puerto Rico and increase industrial employment.

My idea would be for the U. S. to go 50/50 with the Philippines in financing new plants for U. S. companies that would manufacture products in those plants under these unusual conditions. A ten-year moratorium on taxes would be granted to such Philippine subsidiaries if they exported their product primarily to Asian countries. Normal Philippine corporate taxes would be applied to sales made in the Philippines or to the U. S. Since wages in the Philippines are probably as low as those in many other Asian countries, this plan would assist U. S. businesses in pricing their products competitively for the Asian markets.

In addition, if this program were carried out aggressively, it would create employment for hundreds of thousands of Philippinos currently unemployed.

I would appreciate it if you would advise me what agency of our Government I should work with in trying to develop a program of this sort for presentation to Congress.

I am convinced that our Government must act promptly to come up with a constructive idea which will assist the Philippines in becoming a leading industrial nation in Asia.

I recall that we met when you were inducted into The Business Hall of Fame.

Sincerely yours,

Royal Little

Mr. Regan:

I am concerned about the news article
I read this morning stating that the President was irritated with demands made by Marcos and asked him to leave Hickam Air Force Base. (Washington In

Shouldn't we find out who requested Marcos leave and alert the President in case he is asked at this luncheon today?

Even though the Marcos situation is pretty sticky right now, the Reagans' relationship with the Marcos' goes back a long way and I don't think wé should be seeing the President's name in connection with these kinds of articles on Marcos.

PLAN LINKS CONTRA AID, DIPLOMACY

Administration strategists yesterday were promoting a plan that links congressional approval of military aid to the Nicaraguan contras with pledges of a last-ditch U.S. diplomatic effort to bring the Sandinista government and the contras to the bargaining table.

White House and congressional sources said the Administration favored a proposal they described as a "nonlegislative compromise" calling for President Reagan to send a concessionary letter to Congress before next week's votes on the Administration proposal to provide the rebels with $100 million in aid, including $70 million in military assistance.

(Lou Cannon, Washington Post, A1)

Congressional Lawmakers See Compromise On Nicaraguan Aid Plan

President Reagan still insists he wants Congress to approve his full package of $100 million in aid to U.S.-backed guerrillas fighting Nicaragua, but congressional leaders say strong opposition to the proposal means a compromise plan could emerge next week.

Bob Dole said Monday that "it's going to be very, very difficult" to win approval in the Republican-controlled Senate for Reagan's plan to provide $30 million in non-lethal aid and up to $70 million in military help for the Contra guerrillas. (Tim Ahern, AP)

Reagan Sees Turnabout On Hill Over Contra Aid

The congressional "tide is turning" in favor of his request for $100 million for Nicaraguan resistance fighters, President Reagan said yesterday, as spokesman for the Administration continued to reject the notion of a compromise on the aid package.

"This is an uphill battle in which we are engaged, but we are making progress," Mr. Reagan told a group of his supporters at a White House meeting. "You can sense that the tide is turning in favor of the democratic resistance." (Mary Belcher, Washington Times, A2)

"CONTRA" PLAN WOULD RELEASE SECRET FUNDS

White House Denies It Seeks Compromise

The White House said yesterday that President Reagan had no plans to compromise on his request for aid for Nicaraguan rebels despite indications a day earlier that the Administration was willing to listen to other proposals.

The comment yesterday by Larry Speakes came as the President intensified his drive for the $100 million in aid for the "contras" by beginning one-on-one lobbying of congressmen and sending his new Central American envoy, Philip Habib, to Capitol Hill to plead his case.

(Robert Timberg & Nancy Schwerzler, Baltimore Sun, A1)

Aid Request Includes Freeing Of CIA Money

Congressional approval of President Reagan's request for aid to the Nicaraguan insurgents would permit the Administration to use a vast secret intelligence fund, on top of the $100 million the President has formally proposed to spend, the House Intelligence Committee has been told.

Committee sources disclosed yesterday that a high Administration official had testified in a closed session that the aid request was intended to remove restrictions on the use of CIA contingency funds against the pro-Soviet government of Nicaragua.

(Stephens Broening, Baltimore Sun, A1)

A DEMANDING MARCOS ANNOYS REAGAN, SPURS PLANS TO MOVE HIM FROM AIR BASE

President Reagan, described as increasingly irritated with the personal demands being made by Ferdinand Marcos, has requested that the ex-Philippine leader and his entourage of 89 people vacate Hickam Air Force Base this weekend, an Administration official disclosed.

"Things are underway to move Marcos," the U.S. policymaker said. "He's still there but he won't be for long."

(John Wallach, Washington Times, A6)

IMELDA MARCOS LINKED TO N.Y. BANK ACCOUNTS UNDER ANOTHER NAME

MANILA -- Imelda Marcos used New York bank accounts under an apparently fictitious name to funnel hundreds of thousands of dollars out of the country and finance expensive shopping trips in the United States and Europe, according to documents found in the Malacanang presidential palace. (William Branigin, Washington Post, A1)

MARCOS TRIES TO INFLUENCE OPPOSITION

Deposed president Marcos has made more than $1,000 in telephone calls to the Philippines from his exile in Hawaii, attempting to prolong his influence in Philippine politics by directing those shaping the opposition party, State Department officials said yesterday.

(Dale Russakoff & Keith Richburg, Washington Post, A1)

EX-SENATOR TOWER PLANS TO QUIT ARMS POST

Former senator John Tower has decided to resign as U.S. negotiator in the strategic arms reduction talks in Geneva for "personal reasons," sources inside and outside the government said yesterday.

Although the resignation caught some White House officials by surprise, friends and colleagues of the former chairman of the Senate Arms Services Committee said they had been aware for some time that he was unhappy in Geneva and was preparing to leave the post he took 14 months ago.

(Walter Pincus, Washington Post, A1)

Following the peaceful transition of power in the Philippines in February, President Reagan offered President Marcos safe passage to the United States, which he accepted. Former President Marcos subsequently requested U.S. Government assistance in arranging a temporary stay in Panama, and the government of Panama agreed to President Reagan's request. Dear Mr. Poindexter:

At the initiative of Mr. Joseph McMicking, an American citizen with a long background and great experience in The Philippines, I am forwarding a proposal of his regarding future base agreements between The Philippines and the United States. Mr. McMicking is known, I believe, to both Secretary of State Shultz and Secretary of Defense Weinberger. His address is:

Mr. McMicking spoke to me of his suggestion because we were in the U. S. Army together during World War II in Australia, New Guinea and The Philippines and have kept in touch over the years, and because he knows that I have served in the Government under different administrations and have remained interested in The Philippines. I forward his suggestion with interest and pleasure.

MEMORANDUM RELATING TO BASE AGREEMENTS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND THE PHILIPPINES

Recently, Mr. Joseph McMicking, an American citizen with a long background and great experience in The Philippines, asked that a proposal of his regarding future base agreements between The Philippines and the United States be forwarded to officials of the U. S. Government who share responsibility for and interest in such agreements. Although Mr. McMicking lives primarily in Sotogrande, Spain (for whose creation and development he was responsible), he maintains a home in Manila. For many successful years he was head of the Ayala Company, an important company based in Manila. He is known to both Secretary of State Shultz and Secretary of Defense Weinberger.

Simply stated, his suggestion is that the United States, instead of negotiating for a short term base agreement with The Philippines when the present agreement expires in 1991, seek a long-term, perhaps even a 99-year, lease. In return, the United States would offer to assume The Philippines' foreign debt or at least a significant part thereof.

Immediately, Mr. McMicking would point out that he realizes that there are many political, economic and financial problems involved which would have to be studied and overcome, such as:

that The Philippines would have concern as to the implication of such a lease on the issue of sovereignty;

that the five-year leases gave The Philippine government an opportunity to exercise its sovereignty every five years;

that payment for the base agreements has been considered rent;

that the structure of The Philippines' foreign debt totalling some 26 billion dollars would call for creative solutions: some 6-8 billion being government debt; a significant amount, sort of a hybrid corporate debt, perhaps semi-government or semi-private, incurred by monopolies established by the Marcos government nd run by persons close to President Marcos; the remainder, corporate debt;

that with the U. S. constitutional separation of powers, there could be procedural, as well as substantive, differences between Congress and the Administration, not to mention different perspectives within Congress and within the Administration;

that the actual cost of a long-term lease might well be less than repeated short-term leases considering the multitude of factors that negotiations through a period of 99 years could bring;

that there would continue to be additional costs to the United States in its continuing relationship to The Philippines; e.g. military assistance will continue to be required for The Philippine armed forces, doubtless for a long time; however, that among the additional needs of the armed forces, which a viable economy would assist, are adequate pay, elimination of corruption, an increase in the training and efficiency of the army, perhaps a reduction in size of the army to an effective professional force; a reversal of the army's image so that the people of the provinces will come to view it as a protecor rather than, at least in part, as an exploiter;

that a future Philippine government might begin, too soon and too profligately, a new program of foreign borrowing;

that other less developed countries might seek similar treatment from the United States.

By no means does Mr. McMicking believe the above examples to be an exhaustive list, but the end result of such a base agreement could be so beneficial (a) to The Philippines, directly and indirectly, including enabling it to move toward economic viability even though today the demand for its exports is so limited, (b) to the United States with and in its relations with The Philippines and politically throughout the world, and (c) that, in effect, The Philippines would have the potential be become unique among developing countries today and to fulfill the destiny for which both The Philippines and the United States had dreams in the past.

If the particular solution Mr. McMicking suggests turns out not to be feasible, he hopes it will have helped to induce creative thinking as to the bases and the future of The Philippines and its relations with the United States.

Because of the interest in base agreements of Congress and of numerous offices in the Adminstration, copies of this memorandum are being sent to the Vice President, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Defense, the Chairman and the Minority Leader of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the Chief of Staff to President Reagan, and the National Security Advisor.

MEMORANDUM RELATING TO BASE AGREEMENTS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND THE PHILIPPINES

Recently, Mr. Joseph McMicking, an American citizen with a long background and great experience in The Philippines, asked that a proposal of his regarding future base agreements between The Philippines and the United States be forwarded to officials of the U. S. Government who share responsibility for and interest in such agreements. Although Mr. McMicking lives primarily in Sotogrande, Spain (for whose creation and development he was responsible), he maintains a home in Manila. For many successful years he was head of the Ayala Company, an important company based in Manila. He is known to both Secretary of State Shultz and Secretary of Defense Weinberger.

Simply stated, his suggestion is that the United States, instead of negotiating for a short term base agreement with The Philippines when the present agreement expires in 1991, seek a long-term, perhaps even a 99-year, lease. In return, the United States would offer to assume The Philippines' foreign debt or at least a significant part thereof.

Immediately, Mr. McMicking would point out that he realizes that there are many political, economic and financial problems involved which would have to be studied and overcome, such as:

that The Philippines would have concern as to the implication of such a lease on the issue of sovereignty;

that the five-year leases gave The Philippine government an opportunity to exercise its sovereignty every five years;

that payment for the base agreements has been considered rent;

that the structure of The Philippines' foreign debt totalling some 26 billion dollars would call for creative solutions: some 6-8 billion being government debt; a significant amount, sort of a hybrid corporate debt, perhaps semi-government or semi-private, incurred by monopolies established by the Marcos government nd run by persons close to President Marcos; the remainder, corporate debt;

that with the U. S. constitutional separation of powers, there could be procedural, as well as substantive, differences between Congress and the Administration, not to mention different perspectives within Congress and within the Administration;

that the actual cost of a long-term lease might well be less than repeated short-term leases considering the multitude of factors that negotiations through a period of 99 years could bring;

that there would continue to be additional costs to the United States in its continuing relationship to The Philippines; e.g. military assistance will continue to be required for The Philippine armed forces, doubtless for a long time; however, that among the additional needs of the armed forces, which a viable economy would assist, are adequate pay, elimination of corruption, an increase in the training and efficiency of the army, perhaps a reduction in size of the army to an effective professional force; a reversal of the army's image so that the people of the provinces will come to view it as a protecor rather than, at least in part, as an exploiter;

that a future Philippine government might begin, too soon and too profligately, a new program of foreign borrowing;

that other less developed countries might seek similar treatment from the United States.

By no means does Mr. McMicking believe the above examples to be an exhaustive list, but the end result of such a base agreement could be so beneficial (a) to The Philippines, directly and indirectly, including enabling it to move toward economic viability even though today the demand for its exports is so limited, (b) to the United States with and in its relations with The Philippines and politically throughout the world, and (c) that, in effect, The Philippines would have the potential be become unique among developing countries today and to fulfill the destiny for which both The Philippines and the United States had dreams in the past.

If the particular solution Mr. McMicking suggests turns out not to be feasible, he hopes it will have helped to induce creative thinking as to the bases and the future of The Philippines and its relations with the United States.

Because of the interest in base agreements of Congress and of numerous offices in the Adminstration, copies of this memorandum are being sent to the Vice President, the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Defense, the Chairman and the Minority Leader of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the Chief of Staff to President Reagan, and the National Security Advisor.
