Dear President Ron:

That was a grand thing you did for Helen Hayes — the Presidential Medal of Freedom. That night in the middle of the Mississippi on the Great Steamboat Race last July, she said that one was the 'best of all.'

I know they delight in introducing her as the First Lady of the American Theater, but the important thing is that she has always been first a great lady, and then everything else.

If Nancy had to 'put the arm on you' to help in the decision, thank her, too, for Vada and me.

Best wishes always,

President Ronald Reagan, The White House, 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., NW Washington, DC 20500

Your postcard surprised us. We had no idea you were in China. We wonder if you had or are having the problem we're having just now that we're back from Japan. We can't get adjusted back to Washington time for sleeping. About 2 a.m. has become our wake-up time.

I take it the picture on the postcard is of something you witnessed in Xian. We visited that excavation when we were there. It really is an impressive sight, isn't it?

Well, welcome back. Nancy sends her love.

Dear Mrs. Allinger:

Senator Helms has just presented to me the book composed by your second grade students. I can't tell you how proud I am to have this, and how very grateful. I realize, of course, the part you played in this, and I thank you from the bottom of my heart.

I'm enclosing a letter addressed to your students who should be congratulated for having a very fine and dedicated teacher.

Dear Girls and Boys:

I have your very fine book and want you to know I shall treasure it always. You were very kind. I've enjoyed the pictures and read your letters with great interest. Many of you spoke of making peace and you are right on, that is one of the most important matters a President must face.

I have just returned from a long trip to Asia, meeting first with government leaders from Indonesia, and several other countries there in Southern Asia. Then we flew to Japan, to the capital city Tokyo, where the leaders of Japan, England, France, Germany, Italy, Canada and, of course, our country met to discuss things we could all do together to make the world better and safer for all the people. Our goal is to turn over to you, when you are grown up, a world that is at peace where you can all live in freedom.

Again, my thanks to you for my beautiful book.

Ted Turner - Broadcasting,

April 28, 1986

My dear Mr. President:

As you know, I have been in the broadcasting industry since I was a mere youngster in high school, and that means over a half-century in this challenging, demanding and rewarding field.

In all those years, Mr. President, I have never "knocked" a competitor, and I have never "singled out" an individual within the broadcasting arts for criticism.

However, Mr. President, I feel impelled to do so as I read the remarks as set forth herein in a piece from a recent issue of Broadcasting.

I have to say that I regard Ted Turner as the most irresponsible man ever to head a broadcasting entity. Yes, you have heard my criticism of the networks handling of news and that which I call "slanting" of news against those of us who are of conservative persuasion. However, there is some dignity with the leadership of the networks whereas that is totally absent for Mr. Turner.

Los Angeles, California 213/277-9399: 714/493-3316

The President of the United States May 16, 1986 Page two

I have seen this man perform with his poolroom language on many occasions and I find it very repulsive. I have discharged those experiences, however, as saying to myself "well, that is Ted Turner." However, I cannot give such passive observation to a man who makes such a statement as he has herein regarding the sound and absolutely essential move you made in "giving the treatment" to the "Mad Dog of the Middle East."

Mr. President, I just felt that you should know something about this irresponsible man who has done nothing to advance the cause of broadcasting or broadcast journalism; rather, he has chiseled at and attacked the very foundation upon which we have developed in this great land of ours the finest system of broadcasting the world has ever known.

Ron, I trust you will understand the spirit in which I make this comment and with which I enclose herewith this material.

Warmest wishes.

Very respectfully,

Ware (cer)

Dear Mr. President:

This is to thank you for including me among "the happy rebels" you honored yesterday with the Presidential Medal of Freedom. Exactly 15 years ago, President Nixon presented me with the U.S. National Medal of Science at the White House, and I look forward to receiving the Medal of Liberty from you on July 3.

It is in connection with the Medal of Liberty that OMNI magazine asked me for a brief statement about what this medal and being an American means to me. In this statement I describe a new initiative that I hoped a U.S. President might take to break the dangerous impasse of the justifiable distrust between the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R.

I believe that more than any future President you would be able to do it, and if successful you would earn the gratitude of the whole world and a most illustrious place in history. Would you please read the enclosed statement as an extra dividend on the medal you gave me yesterday.

Respectfully yours,

Albert B. Sabin, M.D.

April 15, 1986

Prime Minister Thatcher,

My favorite time of the year has always been Spring. As a young boy I grew up in a small town in England. It was there that I learned the true meaning of Spring Showers.

The showers of Spring brought new life to the wild flowers that would later blossom. Green scaped pastures were the backdrop for water logged fence posts and cobblestone walkways. It was through those pastures I would venture on my little pony. I would pretend that I was a Knight in shining armor, there to protect my kingdom and fight foes from other lands.

We all must live in a world of harsh reality, but inside us, we all carry those dreams of a little boy.

The showers of Spring did not come this year, instead we faced a rain of terror. For those who are sheltered, the wild flowers will still blossom, but for all the others, the color of life is yet to come.

On April 14, 1986, 18 iron eagles, manned by 36 Knights in shining armor, embarked on a journey to a land far away. The roar of their engines was like the sound of a distant thunder. It was an awesome sound, a defiant sound, it was the sound of freedom.

They left their home, the home of the brave. They left their land, the land of the free. Through the coldness of the night their hearts gave them warmth. They were alone, but never lonely, our prayers went with them. They knew not fear, for the Great One sat beside them.

When the task had been completed, the Knights came home. One by one, from the softness of the sky, they returned. They were heroes, freedom fighters, liberators, they were men. They were not presented with medals, nor did they arrive to the playing of a brass band, instead they held their heads so very high and walked to the tempo of a distant thunder.

On a high cliff overlooking the ocean, a piper played his bags, His song was for a fallen eagle, his request was please come home.

Their mission was victorious, but even victory has a price. But sometimes we must pay the piper instead of always owing the debt.

When the story reached my family's home, I sat a little taller in my chair. I thought of my father, who was laying disabled in the hospital, and I wondered what he was thinking. I knew, if given the opportunity, he would stand up and fight.

When I listened to you present your story to Parliament, I felt proud to have you as an ally. I watched you fight for something that you believed in. You did not give up, you persevered. When you gave a speech, my father always used to make a certain statement. I realized how right he was. But now it was my turn to make that statement, "You're one heck of a Lady."

When I complete college, I hope to receive a commission as an officer in one of the Armed Services of the United States. I hope that I can serve my country as much as you have served yours and the people of the world. I hope to receive a reply from this letter, but if I don't I will understand.

I do not know how long the rain of terror will last, but I know the thunder will roar until the very end. And so the piper continues to play alone, until the freedom fighters all come home.

Sincerely

Brandon Scott Bennett
