Dear Dan:

On November 10, 1988, I was pleased to sign into law H.R. 4333, the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988. The legislation corrected revenue-related provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, the Superfund Revenue Act of 1986, the Revenue Act of 1987, the Pension Protection Act, and the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Acts of 1986 and 1987.

The corrections in H.R. 4333 simplify and clarify tax laws for the benefit of American taxpayers. Among the simplifying changes was an important provision to relieve farmers, fishermen, and other off-road users of diesel fuel from the paperwork requirements associated with recovery of the diesel fuel taxes.

The legislation also provided taxpayers with certain protections in the event of a dispute with the government over the amount of tax due. The protections ensure both that the taxpayers have a full and fair opportunity to present their cases and that the United States receives the proper taxes due.

With appreciation for your leadership and hard work as Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means to secure passage of this important legislation, I am pleased to enclose a pen to commemorate enactment of H.R. 4333.

Sincerely,

Dear Bob:

On November 17, 1988, I was pleased to sign into law
H.R. 5315, the Congressional Award Act Amendments.

Created in 1979, the Congressional Awards Program recognizes young people who have attained exemplary levels in scholarship, community services or athletics. The program has had success in giving new direction and opportunity to many young recipients. Enactment of H.R. 5315 provides for careful management and accounting of the Congressional Awards Program, clarifying the original intent of Congress.

In recognition of your long-time interest in the Congressional Awards Program and your efforts to strengthen this important program, I am pleased to present you with a pen commemorating enactment of H.R. 5315.

Dear Lindsay:

On November 14, 1988, I was pleased to sign into law H.R. 4030, legislation to strengthen certain fish and wildlife laws.

This legislation adjusts wildlife protection laws by clarifying Federal search and seizure statutes. The bill also reauthorizes the Sikes Act and authorizes $2.6 million for the acquisition of important wildlife habitat in Hawaii.

Of particular importance to the people of Georgia, H.R. 4030 provides for the transfer of the Federal fish hatchery in Millen, Georgia to the University of Georgia and renames it in honor of former Congressman Bo Ginn. In recognition of your efforts and original sponsorship of this legislation, I am pleased to present you with a pen commemorating the enactment of H.R. 4030.

Dear Wes:

On October 18, 1988, I was pleased to sign into law H.R. 4354, the Winding Stair Mountain National Recreation and Wilderness Area Act.

Through the designation of several wilderness and special management areas within the National Ouachita Forest, this legislation preserves and protects some of Oklahoma's outstanding natural resources for future generations of Oklahomans and all Americans. Furthermore, this legislation achieves a sensible balance between the needs to protect undeveloped lands for wilderness areas while also advancing the economic needs of the area by guaranteeing a return from future timber harvests and providing for increased tourism and recreational opportunities.

In recognition of your efforts in securing passage of this legislation, I am pleased to present to you a pen to commemorate the enactment of H.R. 4354.

Dear Tom:

On November 3, 1988, I was pleased to sign into law
H.R. 4686, the Aviation Safety Research Act of 1988.

While this Nation's air transportation system is one of the safest in the world today, this legislation addresses concerns that additional aviation safety research and development can help to prevent most aviation accidents.

This legislation directs the Federal Aviation Administration to prepare a comprehensive plan detailing the research, engineering and development necessary to ensure the continued capacity, safety and efficiency of aviation in this Nation. Additionally, the FAA is required to examine several critical safety areas, including aircraft fatigue, the role of human factors in aviation accidents, fire and smoke containment, fuel spillage, fire resistant materials and low flammability fuels.

In recognition of your efforts in securing passage of this legislation, I am pleased to present to you a pen to commemorate my enacting this measure into law.

Dear Andy:

On November 23, 1988, I approved H.R. 3105 to revise and codify U.S. shipping laws. The legislation updates U.S. laws to meet the needs of modern commercial shipping fleets.

Enactment of H.R. 3105 substantially improves the law concerning ship mortgages and maritime liens, which will improve financing of shipping operations. The legislation also will strengthen the vessel identification system to assist in the performance of Federal maritime functions and the enforcement of criminal laws, including laws to combat illegal drugs.

You have served the people of Florida and the Nation well with your leadership on this legislation of great importance to America's maritime industries. With appreciation for your success in securing passage of this legislation, I am pleased to present to you the pen with which I signed H.R. 3105 into law.

On October 31, 1988, I was pleased to sign into law, in Los Angeles, California, H.R. 4262, the Berne Convention Implementation Act of 1988.

This is one of the most important pieces of trade legislation passed in the historic 100th Congress. With 77 countries as members, including most of our trading partners, the Berne Convention features the highest internationally recognized standards for the protection of works of authorship. The membership of the United States, made possible by the enactment of H.R. 4262, will ultimately secure the highest available level of international copyright protection for U.S. artists, authors and copyright holders. No longer will American works protected by copyright, such as books, recordings, movies and computer software, be vulnerable to international piracy because of differences between U.S. law and the Berne Convention.

In recognition of your leadership in securing passage of the Berne Convention legislation, I am pleased to present to you a pen to commemorate enactment of H.R. 4262.

With 77 countries as members, including most of our trading partners, the Berne Convention features the highest internationally recognized standards for the protection of works of authorship. The membership of the United States, made possible by the enactment of H.R. 4262, will ultimately secure the highest available level of international copyright protection for U.S. artists, authors and copyright holders. No longer will American works protected by copyright, such as books, recordings, movies and computer software, be vulnerable to international piracy because of differences between U.S. law and the Berne Convention.

In recognition of your leadership in securing passage of the Berne Convention legislation, I am pleased to present to you a pen to commemorate enactment of H.R. 4262.

Dear Mr. President:

Thank you for the pen commemorating the enactment of H. R. 5210, the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988, which you signed into law on November 18, 1988. This new law builds upon our efforts in 1986 to rid the Nation of drugs and those who profit from this illicit trade. This measure contains tough penalties for those who sell drugs and also includes penalties for users of drugs. Further, this law contains funds for state and local law enforcement officers to use in fighting drugs. Additionally, funds are provided for drug education, treatment and rehabilitation.

I am especially pleased that this law contains the death penalty for drug related murder. As a long time proponent of the death penalty, I strongly believe that this will be a useful tool for prosecutors and will also send a strong message to those involved in the drug trade. Further, the provisions strengthening the child pornography and obscenity laws will help to ensure that our children are not exploited and that those who traffic in such material may be prosecuted. Lastly, the provision requiring the labeling of alcoholic beverages will serve to warn the public of the serious risks associated with the use of alcohol.

It is unfortunate that drugs continue to be a pervasive problem in our great Nation. However, this new law, which I cosponsored, expresses the Federal Government's continuing commitment to addressing this serious problem.

With kindest regards and Greetings of the season,

Respectfully,

Strom Thurmond

Dear Joe:

On November 18, 1988, I was pleased to approve H.R. 5210, the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988. The legislation improves substantially the Nation's ability to combat the scourge of illegal drugs.

The legislation strengthens the hands of law enforcement officers and the courts in apprehending drug producers, traffickers, and users and holding them accountable to society for their crimes. It provides the basis for increased international cooperation in the battle against illegal drugs entering America from abroad. The Act also improves drug abuse awareness, prevention, and treatment efforts. Effective implementation of H.R. 5210 will reduce the supply of illegal drugs and the demand for them.

Your hard work made this significant legislation possible. The people of Delaware have good reason to be proud. With appreciation for your continuing commitment to the achievement of a drug-free America, I am pleased to present you with a pen to commemorate enactment of H.R. 5210.

Dear Clay:

On November 18, 1988, I was pleased to approve H.R. 5210, the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988. The legislation improves substantially the Nation's ability to combat the scourge of illegal drugs.

The legislation strengthens the hands of law enforcement officers and the courts in apprehending drug producers, traffickers, and users and holding them accountable to society for their crimes. It provides the basis for increased international cooperation in the battle against illegal drugs entering America from abroad. The Act also improves drug abuse awareness, prevention, and treatment efforts. Effective implementation of H.R. 5210 will reduce the supply of illegal drugs and the demand for them.

Your leadership and hard work were crucial in securing enactment of this important legislation. As one of the pioneers on Capitol Hill in the fight against drug abuse, you can be proud of the imprint you and other members of the Republican Task Force on Drugs put on this legislation. With appreciation for your continuing commitment to the achievement of a drug-free America, I am pleased to present you with a pen to commemorate enactment of H.R. 5210.

Sincerely,

The Act establishes the San Pedro Riparian National Conservation Area and the Mount Graham International Observatory in Arizona, the City of Rocks National Reserve and the Hagerman Fossil Beds in Idaho, and the Mississippi National River and Recreation Area in Minnesota to protect cultural, archeological, educational, and recreational assets of the Nation. Also, the Act facilitates the exchange of Federal lands in Phoenix, Arizona for private land that will permit the expansion of the Big Cypress National Preserve in Florida. Further, the Act authorizes a complex exchange of Federal, State, and private lands within Arizona to the benefit of all concerned.

Your success in stripping from the legislation troublesome provisions that would have made substantially more difficult the settlement of intertribal disputes was crucial in securing enactment of the legislation. With appreciation for your leadership in securing passage of this legislation in a form that merited my approval, I am pleased to present you with a pen to commemorate enactment of S. 2840.
