Dear Mr. President:

As you know, I wrote an article for the July 2, 1983, issue of TV Guide entitled, "Why Isn't TV Covering the Slaughter in Southeast Asia?" (see attachment A). The article focused on television's lack of coverage of the continuing tragedy of the Kampuchean refugees in Thailand.

Response to the article has been gratifying and sometimes touching. I thought you might be interested in some of the reactions I have received.

A woman from New Hampshire wrote: "... If donations from people who care enough to help for food, medical, shelter clothing are acceptable, please let me know. If a child needs a home, I will provide that home with lots of love and care."

A woman from Indiana said: "...We are raising a family of three and sometimes it is not easy. But I would like to know if there is anything I can do. Do they need clothing? That is something I could help with."

A man in Oregon wrote: "...I would appreciate it if you could send me an address that I might write concerning adoption of a child."

These samples represent the basic tenor of the letters I received. They indicate the fact that the public is very compassionate when confronted by the emotional dimension of political reality. This point is corroborated by the tremendous response to your recent radio talk asking for organ donors to help save the lives of small children.

Therefore I suggest we address graphically and in human terms the suffering our policies are designed to correct in El Salvador and elsewhere. By using photographs and recounting the individual misery of real Salvadoran families we can help America understand the terrible tragedy now taking place in Central America.

Warm regards.

MEMORANDUM FOR ROBERT C. MCFARLANE THE WHITE HOUSE

Subject: Mr. Montoya's Letter of January 19 Requesting ROUM Appointments for Pacific Island Leaders with the President

In a letter dated January 19, Mr. Richard T. Montova, Acting Assistant Secretary, Territorial and International Affairs, Department of the Interior, recommended to the National Security Council that a selected group of leaders of Pacific island countries be provided an opportunity to meet the President this year in order to demonstrate U.S. interest in their countries.

The Department thoroughly agrees with the objective of Mr. Montoya's suggestion. To this end we have asked the NSC to approve an Official Visit during the second half of 1984 for the region's pre-eminent statesman, Fijian Prime Minister Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara. Last fall, we also explored with the NSC staff the possibility of a working visit for the Prime Minister of the largest and most populous country in the area, Papua New Guinea, but were unsuccessful because of conflicting demands for the President's time.

The format of a quick meeting with the President for a number of island leaders was tried during the Carter Administration and was not successful. The leaders of the larger countries in the region play active international roles and are well aware of how we treat countries that we consider significant to us. On that occasion, they refused to attend and it is very unlikely that they would change their minds this time around.

The Department appreciates Mr. Montoya's efforts to point out the necessity for increased U.S. attention to the island countries. One of the most obvious signs of our lack of such attention in the past is the fact that no Chief of State or Head of Government from any of these nations has ever been invited for a state or official visit. A Presidential invitation to Prime Minister Mara would provide an excellent demonstration of our high regard for these small but friendly democracies.

Honorable Robert C. McFarlane
Assistant to the President

Dear Mr. McFarlane:

At the suggestion of Secretary Clark, I am directing to you a recommendation that consideration be given to bringing to Washington some time this year a selected group of leaders of Pacific Island countries. The purpose would be to demonstrate U.S. interest in their countries and to provide an opportunity for them to be photographed with the President.

The recommendation had its genesis in a conversation I had last December in Apia with the Prime Minister of Western Samoa. My meeting with Tofilau Eti took place at the urging of Peter T. Coleman, the Governor of American Samoa, with whom I had been discussing a number of problems currently faced by that U.S. Territory.

The Prime Minister made a special effort to convey to me his views about U.S. policies, mentioning especially his support of the American rescue mission in Grenada. It was in that context that Eti displayed concern about Cuban activities in Pacific Island countries and suggested the United States should do more to demonstrate to Pacific Island leaders its concern for the well-being of their countries and peoples, perhaps initially by bringing a select group to Washington for a brief visit with the President. Naturally, the Prime Minister would like to be included in the group so that he can provide to the people of Western Samoa evidence of his support for the U.S., as well as U.S. interest in his country.

I have not discussed the recommendation with State Department officials, but, as you will note, have sent them a copy of this letter.

Sincerely,

Richard T. Montoy
