THE WHITE HOUSE

Your Highness:

I extend my warmest regards to you on the occasion of Secretary of Energy John Herrington's visit to your country. Secretary Herrington is a valued member of my Cabinet and I am sure your meeting with him will be fruitful. We have discussed the purpose of his mission and I strongly support the goals and objectives he has outlined for improved communication with your country on the key energy issues facing us. Through such communication, we can attain our mutual goals of a strong and secure energy future.

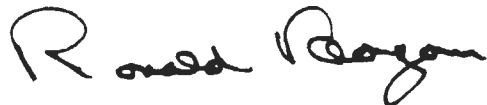

The security of Kuwait is very important to the well-being of the international community. This has become all the more evident as incidents in recent months have threatened your territorial and economic integrity.

We recognize the vital role that oil plays in your economy, as well as that of the United States and other free market economies worldwide. The reflagging and naval protection we are according your vessels and the presence of other friendly naval forces in the Gulf helps Kuwait and other GCC states ensure that international waterways remain open and safe for peaceful transit. Our governments must continue to work closely together for this purpose, as well as to rebuff any hostile efforts to establish hegemony over the region.

The ability of our countries to work together on energy-related issues is also reflected in ongoing efforts such as the energy component of the GCC-U.S. economic talks. This dialogue can make a significant contribution to realization of our shared objectives.

I look forward to continued close cooperation in our mutual efforts to reestablish peace and security in your vital region and elsewhere in the Middle East. The talks which Secretary of State Shultz will soon have with the leaders of Egypt, Israel and Jordan are an indication of my determination to reinvigorate movement toward peace.

Sincerely,

I extend my warmest regards to you on the occasion of Secretary of Energy Herrington's visit to your country. Secretary Herrington is a valued member of my Cabinet and I am sure your meeting with him will be fruitful. We have discussed the purpose of his visit and I strongly support the goals and objectives he outlined for improved communications with your country on the key energy issues facing us today.

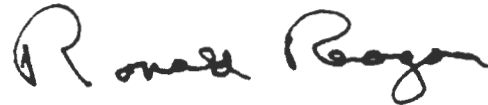

The United States believes the security of your country is very important to the well-being of the international community. I remain firmly committed to the just and speedy restoration of peace and stability for all nations in the Gulf region.

We recognize the vital role that oil plays not only in your economy but in the economies of all nations. Our present goal is to assure that international waterways remain open and safe for the free flow of oil and the commerce of all nations. Our two governments must work closely together, and with those friendly governments whose navies are also in the Gulf, to help prevent any encroachment on freedom of peaceful transit.

The Secretary and I have discussed the purpose of his visit and I strongly support the goals and objectives he has outlined for improved communication with your country on the key energy issues facing us. Through such communication, we can attain our mutual goals of a strong and secure energy future.

The United States believes the security of your country is very important to the well-being of the international community. I remain firmly committed to the just and speedy restoration of peace and stability for all nations in the Gulf region.

We recognize the vital role that oil plays not only in your economy, but in the economies of all nations. Our present goal is to assure that international waterways remain open and safe for the free flow of oil and the commerce of all nations. Our two governments must work closely together, and with those friendly governments whose navies are also in the Gulf, to prevent encroachment on freedom of navigation.

The ability of our countries to work together on energy-related issues is reflected in ongoing efforts such as the energy component of the GCC-U.S. economic talks. This dialogue can make a significant contribution to realization of our shared objectives.

I deeply appreciate the warm reception that you gave to Secretary Weinberger, and I have been very interested in his report of the very productive discussions with you and your senior advisors. Let me reiterate, on behalf of the American people, my profound gratitude for the extraordinary support that you have provided for our military forces in the Gulf. I look forward to continued close and mutually beneficial cooperation in the months ahead.

Sincerely,

For Immediate Release

STATEMENT BY MARLIN FITZWATER
ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT FOR PRESS RELATIONS

The Administration is making advance notifications to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee of four separate arms sale cases for Saudi Arabia. The sales are twelve F-15C/D aircraft to be delivered on a one-for-one basis to replace losses of aircraft sold under previous agreements; 93 artillery ammunition carriers; and upgrade and modernization packages to keep Saudi Arabian F-15s and M-60 tanks at an adequate level of operating effectiveness compatible with U.S. equipment of the same model.

Today's advance notifications inform Congress that these sales are under consideration and initiate a 20-day period of additional consultations and discussions. At the conclusion of this 20-day period, the Administration will formally notify Congress of the systems it plans to offer for sale to Saudi Arabia.

Having taken the situation in the region into account and after extensive consultations with Congress, the President at this time has decided to withhold notification of a proposed sale of Maverick air-to-ground missiles. The Administration will keep the issue of Saudi need for Maverick missiles under very close review in the light of threats to Saudi security and will maintain close contact with Congress. The President has personally assured the Saudi government that in the event of an emergency, the United States would provide Mavericks from American stocks with appropriate notifications to the Congress.

These sales are an essential part of the U.S. strategy of protecting U.S. interests, as well as those of our friends in the Gulf region, through security cooperation. The sales support Saudi Arabia's legitimate defense needs at a time of heightened threat to Saudi and U.S. military and economic interests in the Gulf. They follow other sales to Saudi Arabia approved earlier this year of armed helicopters, electronic countermeasures systems, and Bradley fighting vehicles. They do not upset the basic military balance in the Middle East. However, they come at a time when there is greater demand placed upon Saudi Arabian armed forces and at a point of unprecedented U.S.-Saudi security cooperation. If we fail to meet these legitimate needs, our willingness to support friends -- who are in need and who are helping us in the face of very real threats -- will come under serious question in the Gulf and elsewhere around the world.

The Administration has made a detailed case for these sales during extensive consultations with the Congress over a period of five weeks prior to the advance notifications. The Administration will continue to consult on the overall situation in the Gulf and on the arms sales.
