Dear Don:

I am in receipt of your recent correspondence. I am serious about the efforts. Would you consider giving me an outline of how you would organize this effort. I am fully well aware of what it would involve on my part, as well as on the part of the President. After I see how you might suggest such an effort could be started, I'd be in a better position to respond to your offer of assistance.

Dear Dorsey:

Thank you for your most recent letter. It was good to hear from you and I'm sorry that the demands of my schedule did not permit a meeting when you were in Washington last month. I hope you had a good reunion.

Also, I appreciate your thoughtfulness in sending me the suggestions for campaign speeches. However, I am committed to serving this President for the duration of his term and have no plans to be a candidate in 1988. I hope you will understand.

Please accept my warm best wishes.

Dear Mr. Harrigan:

Thank you for your letter of May 20 which detailed your views on this country's policy in the Persian Gulf.

The United States has a number of vital interests in the Gulf. We have an economic stake in seeing that the region's supply of oil to the Free World continues unimpeded. Ready access to Gulf oil is critical to the economic well-being of the West; moreover, we also attach great importance to the principle of freedom of navigation in the Gulf and elsewhere. We also have an important strategic interest in denying the Soviet Union or any other hostile power direct control or significant influence over the region or any of its states. It would be a major strategic defeat for this country should a power hostile to us increase its power and influence in the Gulf. The Soviets are poised to exploit any weakness or unreliability we show, and the Iranians are trying to reduce our influence in order to remove a major obstacle to their effort at intimidating the Gulf states. Finally, we have major political interests in the non-belligerent Gulf states, both in their own right and because of their influence within the Gulf and beyond.

The economic health of the U.S. and our allies is dependent on oil, much of which is imported from the Gulf. It is likely that the OECD will import increasing amounts of oil from the Persian Gulf region, which sits atop two-thirds of the world's proven oil reserves and has two-thirds of the world's surplus production capacity. In 1986, 44 percent of OECD Europe's net oil imports came from the Gulf; the comparable figure for Japan was 59 percent. While only 17 percent of our net oil imports originated in the Gulf in 1986, that level will rise significantly in the years ahead as our overall oil imports increase and supplies from other sources decline. Furthermore, our economy is so closely tied to those of Europe and Japan that we would feel the effects of any downturn in their economies caused by an oil supply disruption or a threatened disruption with the adverse price effects that would follow. That others may have more at stake is not a persuasive argument for us to do less than our interests require.

For all these reasons, we are completing our plans to protect U.S. flag vessels in the Gulf and to keep the Strait of Hormuz open to the free flow of oil. In this, we are not alone: British and French naval vessels have operated in the Gulf for some years. (The Japanese are prevented by their constitution, which we drafted, from having a blue water fleet.) I can assure you that no action will be taken to implement the protective regime until the President is satisfied that we will be able to do it properly and until the Congress has been fully consulted.

Sincerely,

Howard H. Baker, Jr.

Dear Mr. Holland:

Thank you for your letter of May 26, 1987, expressing your concern about the Construction Industry Labor Law Amendments of 1987 (H.R. 281, S. 492).

The Administration strongly opposes these bills. This position has been conveyed to Congress through testimony by the Labor Department and letters from the Secretary of Labor. The letters advised Congress that enactment of this legislation would not be in accord with the program of the President.

I appreciate your sharing with me your views on this legislation.

Dear Joseph:

Thank you for the telegram expressing your support for Secretary Bowen's view that Medicare payments should be increased moderately in the coming years. I did not participate in the recent Medicare decision concerning possible increases for the Prospective Payment System. Several of my past business associations presented a potential conflict of interest, and for that reason I felt it necessary to recuse myself from this matter. From what I know, however, I believe the decision was sound and not merely a splitting of differences.

The principal dilemma, as I understand it, is simply that information on both sides of the argument is inconclusive. Several studies have shown that past payments under Medicare have far exceeded historical margins on non-Medicare patients. As you point out, though, there is some evidence to suggest that times have changed -- but again, this evidence is not conclusive. Based on the preponderance of data, I think the decision errs on the side of insuring quality care for America's thirty-one million Medicare beneficiaries -- as it should.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Tatum:

Thank you for your letter of April 30, 1987 to Senator Baker recommending that President Bongo of Gabon be extended an invitation for an official visit to the United States.

As one of Africa's longest serving leaders, President Bongo has guided his country on a pro-Western, moderate course which has brought Gabon political stability and relative economic prosperity. The cooperation and goodwill which, you note, characterize your relations with the Government of Gabon are evidence of such a sound course. We consider Gabon an important friend in the region.

We hope to be able to invite President Bongo for an upcoming visit, but regrettably are not yet in a position to name a specific date.

Dear Jerry:

Thank you for inviting me to speak at a
"Pursuing the Promise" event.

Although my schedule does not permit me to do this anytime soon, perhaps we can take another look at the possibility in the fall.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,
