Q. On one hand you are calling for restraint in response to the terrorist acts in Rome and Vienna, on the other hand you reserve the right for states to respond to terrorism. How do you explain this contradiction?

A. There is not a contradiction. We have always been firmly opposed to an escalating cycle of violence which contains the seeds of broader and more devastating hostilities. In that context, we have urged and will continue to urge all states to avoid taking actions which only feed that cycle.

At the same time, it has been and remains our firm policy that terrorism cannot go unanswered. We have always retained the right to respond to terrorist acts in an appropriate, measured and focussed way.

In one case we want to avoid a widening of conflict and hostilities and the dangers that poses. In the other, terrorists should know that we have the option of responding in a direct and ~~appropriate~~ manner to their barbaric acts.
