PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: PRESENTATION OF YOUNG AMERICAN MEDALS FOR BRAVERY AND SERVICE
WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1982

[President begins speaking after introductory remarks by Deputy Attorney General Schmults]

Ladies and gentlemen, just let me take a moment to say a word about all the recipients of these medals. You know it's frequently said that young people need heroes to look up to and emulate. But in this ceremony today it's we older people who are doing the admiring and finding inspiration in lives younger than our own. This is especially fulfilling because it serves to remind us of the caliber of people who will be leading our country in a few years. It also illustrates how strongly rooted the tradition of service and heroism is in America's young people.

You know Nathaniel Hawthorne once said that heroes can be heroes only in a heroic world. What he meant, of course, is that service and bravery can be honored only in a society that puts a premium on those qualities. When we honor those who in service and bravery stand out amongst us, we are reaffirming our own most deeply cherished beliefs and traditions.

John Terry is awarded the 1980 Young American Medal for Service.

John is honored for having taken personal responsibility for the appearance of his street in Philadelphia. Not just in front of his house -- the whole street. For several years now, he has been regularly sweeping up the entire block. He doesn't do this because someone told him to, and he doesn't get money or merit badges or even much in the way of formal thanks for it.

John, you looked around you in your hometown, saw things that needed improving and, instead of writing to Washington or city hall, you went out and got the job done yourself.

John, it's really good to see you again. Usually, ladies and gentlemen, I never meet Young American Medal recipients until the day they come to receive their medals. But I met John last year in Philadelphia, where they consider him an example for young people, for adults -- for the whole city. That's the American spirit of volunteerism -- one we need not just in Philadelphia but throughout the whole Nation. Congratulations, John. [Shake hands and present award to John Terry]

Jeffrey Blake is awarded the 1980 Young American Medal for Service.

As a long-time member of his county's American Red Cross chapter, Jeff has an extraordinary record of accomplishment. His record includes the establishment of a Red Cross communications system and a "Disaster Response Team" that has rendered assistance at the scene of many fires and other unfortunate events.

One of the things that has most amazed foreign observers of American democracy like de Tocqueville is the astonishing capacity of Americans for helping one another. Jeff, you've done truly outstanding work with an organization that was one of the first to earn Americans their reputation for compassion and humanitarianism. Your work carries on this tradition and has already helped hundreds and perhaps thousands of people. Jeff, I want you to know how proud all of us are of you.

Congratulations, Jeff. [Shake hands and present award to Jeffrey Blake]

Robert Noble is awarded the 1980 Young American Medal for Bravery.

One evening, shortly after he had graduated from high school, Bob Noble of Fredonia, New York, was at a party when he and his friends heard a tremendous collision on the highway nearby. When they got to the wreck, they found the car in flames. Bob climbed into the burning automobile several times. He removed two persons who, as it turned out, died of their injuries. But he also saved a woman who otherwise would have surely died in the fire.

One thing that should be mentioned about Bob is that he had to overcome the urgings of friends who warned him not to "get involved" in that rescue. It wasn't just that they were warning him of the danger; they were, in effect, arguing that it just wasn't smart to get mixed up in something like that.

But he wouldn't buy that argument. He didn't really even listen. He went to that car. He chose to risk his life repeatedly to help people he didn't even know. It was a grisly, harrowing experience, but a life was saved. Congratulations, Bob. [Shake hands and present award to Bob Noble]

Michael Browne is awarded the 1980 Young American Medal for Bravery.

Michael Browne of Dixon, New Mexico, was 13 when he acted alone in making a hazardous climb in the dark to aid a severely injured hiker high on a 300-foot-high mountain ledge. For several hours, hoping that rescue workers would find them, he clung to her in the darkness, keeping her from sliding over the edge.

Michael is a special kind of boy. He lives in an adobe house in that mountainous area. No electricity, no frills -- very little of what we've come to think young people need to grow up right.

Well, I guess we're wrong. The grown men and women who know this young man, especially the rescue workers who came to take over after he had been singlehandedly preserving that young woman's life for hours in the rain and darkness, will tell you that they don't come any better. And Mike, as a fellow Westerner, I'm especially proud to shake your hand. Congratulations, Mike. [Shake hands and present award to Michael Browne]

The 1981 Young American Medal for Bravery would have been presented today to Jeffrey Jones from Lancaster, Pennsylvania, but unfortunately that is not possible. With us today are Mr. and Mrs. James Jones, who will accept the Young American Medal for Bravery on behalf of their son, Jeffrey Jones.

Jeff, an 18-year-old volunteer fireman, died while attempting to save three rescue workers who had been overcome by lethal fumes in an underground tank. It was for that sacrifice that he was chosen to receive the Medal. This is a reminder, a sad one, that we honor heroes because they take great risks and sometimes pay the ultimate price. [Shake hands and present award to Mr. and Mrs. Jones]

Mark Rhinier [RIH-NEER] is awarded the 1981 Young American Medal for Bravery.

The incident that took Jeffrey Jones' life, nearly took Mark Rhinier's [RIH-NEER] life too. Mark, 18 and a volunteer fireman, was also overcome by the poisonous gas, but he regained consciousness briefly and was able to grab a rescue line. It all started when an 8-year-old boy fell down a narrow pipe into an underground tank. Two paramedics and Mark and finally Jeff went down that pipe. The little boy's life was saved -- barely -- and Mark here had a very narrow escape, but when it was over three men were gone. We're proud of you, Mark. [Shake hands and present award to Mark Rhinier]

We can only wonder at the bravery that sent Jeff and Mark into that tank -- they knew that two paramedics had passed out but they felt they had to try.

That, of course, is what makes the hero. He has to try. He may measure the odds and weigh the chances, but his heart seems to take over and make the decision for him.

These medals we've given out today give us all something to think about. They are a testament to how good people can be, and especially how remarkable young Americans can be.

We are grateful to you for coming. God bless you.

SIGNING CEREMONY FOR THE NUCLEAR WASTE POLICY ACT

DATE: December 22, 1982
LOCATION: Cabinet Room
TIME: 1:15 PM
FROM: Craig L. Fuller
Kenneth M. Duberstein

I. PURPOSE

To sign the Nuclear Waste Bill and express your appreciation to those Congressional and industry leaders who supported it.

II. BACKGROUND

The Nuclear Waste Policy Act, which passed the Congress on Monday, is a major step forward in restoring nuclear options. It was adopted pursuant to your Policy Statement of October 8, 1981. The coalition that supported this legislation is broad based and a clear indication of the bipartisan support for your energy policy. This ceremony will be a much needed encouraging signal to the nuclear energy industry.

III. PARTICIPANTS

A list will be provided.

IV. PRESS PLAN

No Press.

V. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

You will make brief remarks.* You will then sign the bill and shake hands as time permits.

* Talking points to be provided tomorrow AM.
